Uncle Sam Seeks New Blood For Enlarged Armed Forces

Until Europe's war began, the U. S. planned an average army of 179,000 men this fiscal year. President Roosevelt's "limited emergency" boosted it to 227,000.

Floyd Gibbens' ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"The Babe in the Blazing House"

HELLO EVERYBODY: These adventures provide a cross-section of life, and if they didn't show its grimmer side occasionally, they wouldn't show a faithful picture.

Imagine running back into a blazing house to rescue your eight-months-old baby brother only to find the smoke so dense you couldn't see what you were doing.

That's what happened to Mary. The time was the fall of 1921, around September, and at that time Mary's father and mother and Mary's three brothers lived in Thayer, a small mining town in the lower part of West Virginia.

Thayer is a valley, situated between two large hills. To get out of the valley, Mary tells us, you had to ride on a sort of incline. It was a box-shaped affair, the car, let up and down the side of the hill by means of a cable.

On this fateful morning Mary's mother and dad had to go to town, where mother was going to have her teeth fixed. Before she left she called Mary, who was the eldest child, aside and warned her to watch the three younger children, her brothers, while her parents were away.

Of the three John was the oldest brother, then came six-year-old Pete, and last of all little Eddie, who could show only a scant eight months. Mary had her hands full keeping them all out of mischief, and when night began to fall she began to glance nervously out the window, wondering why mother and dad didn't come.

The younger children grew frightened with the approach of darkness, and, at their urging, not to mention her own uneasiness, Mary finally bolted all the doors and windows.

To set the scene for this story it is necessary to explain that next to the house they had a little wash-house, where Mary's dad used to wash when he came home from work. This wash-house had a little coal stove in it. On this particular afternoon the stove was lit, but with the children locked inside the house there was no one to tend it or check the dampers.

And so it came to pass that as the children sat huddled in the darkness, queer red shadows, ghostly and lengthening, began to dance on the walls of the children's room. Alarmed, the children began to whimper, and at length, unable to stand the strain any longer, Mary went to the window and looked out to see what was causing the strange play of lights on the wall. Then she understood—the wash-house was on fire!

Remember, this was no grown-up. This was a nine-year-old child with the care and responsibility of three younger brothers on her shoulders. And now, as the fire spread to the main house, igniting the old, dry wood like tinder, the children fled from the blazing wall into the open air, Mary as scared as any.

This will explain, perhaps, how it happened that on looking around, they discovered that eight-months-old Eddie was missing.

Mary, who was frantic by this time, berated John for leaving the baby behind, as she had understood he had taken Eddie from his crib while she was looking after getting Pete out. But John protested that he had thought Mary was taking Eddie, and so hadn't bothered to go after him.

Meanwhile, inside the burning house, little Eddie lay asleep in his crib. The thought of her beloved little brother in that blazing inferno was too much for Mary. With no sager heads to dissuade her, she rushed back inside the burning house, groped her way through dark, smoke-filled halls to the room where the baby lay asleep.

Smoke Was So Thick She Could Hardly See.

By this time, Mary says, the smoke was getting so thick that she could hardly see. Reaching the bedroom she found herself in the center of a dense, rolling fog, choking her, blinding her so that she could not see her hand before her face.

Heat seared her eyeballs, tore at her air-famished lungs. But the nine-year-old girl had made a promise—a promise to a mother who trusted her to care for the younger ones. Mary could hear her mother's last words echoing in her ears as she groped her way to where she thought the crib should be. "Look after them while I'm gone, Mary. I'm trusting you."

The flames were searing hot now, but Mary had but one thought: She must get Eddie out. In the black pall she stumbled against something—"the crib"—she thought. Hurriedly she reached out, grabbed what she thought to be Eddie and almost delirious now with the desire to escape from those hungry flames she rushed out of the house into the open air.

Outside, safe under the open sky again, she thought of the bundle in her arms. In the smoke-suffused house, Mary says herself, "I did not know for sure whether I had him or not."

Now, obsessed by a horrible premonition of possible disaster she dared not put into words, she forced herself to look down.

When you contemplate how easy it would be for a nearly hysterical child of Mary's age to mistake her precious burden in a fog of rolling smoke you will understand how close is the line between happiness and tragedy. For had Mary's eyes met, not what they did see, but something else, this story would not have the happy ending it now has. Yes, it was Eddie, crying for all he was worth. And was Mary glad? You answer that one. I'll just go on to add that when Mary's mother and dad got home all that was left of the house was the standing chimney.

Appendicitis Fatalities Show Increased Rate

The depression is responsible for an increasing death rate among victims of acute appendicitis, according to two Cleveland doctors.

Drs. F. R. Kelly and R. M. Watkins, observing the mounting death rate in a study of 2,000 consecutive cases at Women's hospital here, report that appendicitis victims without funds hesitate to summon medical aid when an attack occurs and try to treat themselves.

Half of the victims studied were hospitalized in the more prosperous years of 1930 to 1935; the rest between 1931 and 1936. The death rate among the first 1,000 was 9 per cent; among the second 1,000, 23 per cent. The doctors reported their study in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"During the depression years," they wrote, "patients delayed operation 20 per cent longer than in better times. This surely increased the mortality rate."

"If economic conditions improve, this delay on the patient's part will be lessened, but in the meantime persons should be told to pocket their pride and seek medical aid regardless of their circumstances, if they notice pain anywhere in the abdominal region."

Didn't Like It. Hillare Hiler, San Francisco artist, picked up a new guide book just published in that city, saw his name spelled Hilarie Hiler. He filed suit for $100,000 against the publishers and the writer, is seeking an injunction to restrain further sale of the book.

Free University Courses For County War Veterans

According to Geo. Kolb, service officer of Washington county, Wisconsin war veterans will enjoy the privilege of taking University of Wisconsin extension courses without cost for the instruction. This is in line with previous legislative action and will continue in effect for another two years. This was assured by the legislature's continuance of the appropriation for each year of the next biennium and its approval by Gov. Hell. The legislature changed the law to specify that henceforth textbooks used in veterans' courses shall also be provided without cost. Mr. Kolb stated that the re-enactment also liberalized the definition of a veteran for these purposes so as to include any state veteran who served in the World war, and any out-of-state veteran who has resided in the state for five years up to the time of application. Nurses who were in service are included again, as in the old law.

Mr. Kolb believes that the trend in the demand will be for subjects of a practical or vocational character rather than for degree-credit courses. In the past, veterans have shown an increasing preference for such subjects as heating, ventilation, and air conditioning; practical radio, home wiring, shop drawing, showcard writing, blueprint reading, estimating construction costs, the gasoline automobile, the Diesel engine, and practical economics, also for courses in the business field, such as accounting, business correspondence, business management, business ethics, and investments.

Applications by veterans must be made on forms furnished by the state superintendent of public instruction, who forwards approvals to the extension division to complete the registrations.

It is suggested that all veterans and nurses who are interested in getting complete information with reference to free university extension courses see Mr. Kolb at the court house, West Bend, Wisconsin.

For the convenience of veterans residing in the vicinity of Hartford office hours are maintained at the office of the Public Welfare Dept. in the city hall every Tuesday afternoon from 1:00 to 4:00 p. m. or by appointment at any other time. For such appointments phone 640, Hartford.

County Agent Notes

ORDER AGRICULTURAL LIME NOW

Beginning on Nov. 1 the production of agricultural lime under a WPA WORKS PROGRAM was resumed. The quarry being operated is near Rookfield. The stone being pulverized is ideally suited for agricultural lime, testing better than 100 percent neutralizing power. The stone is also sufficient white to make this lime ideally suited for dairy barn use.

Farmers may place their orders through the county agricultural agent's office. The price in truck load lots of about four tons is $1.40 per ton delivered to your farm for distances of ten miles or less from the quarry. For distances between ten and fifteen miles the price is $1.50 per ton in truck load lots.

Farmers are urged to place their orders now for lime. The cost is only seven cents per one hundred pounds. This is much cheaper than any other form of lime.

Factual Report of War Activities

THE war in Europe is the one subject of interest to all our readers, but the moves on the checkerboards of the battlefields and diplomacy are not easily understood.

America is being flooded from every war-torn nation with vast quantities of propaganda for the purpose of influencing public opinion in this country. Reports of actual events are so severely censored, and so many false reports are issued, that it is hard to get a fair account of actual happenings.

Scare headlines appear in the daily papers of the world, only to be contradicted or forgotten in the next edition because there was no actual foundation for the statements covered by such headlines.

In the Weekly News Analysis we are printing each week, our readers find a concise factual statement of events in Europe, with such interpretation, explanation and comment as will make the report of these actual happenings easily understood. It provides the most valuable coverage of the war to be found in any publication.

Weekly News Analysis is prepared for us each week by Mr. Joseph W. LaBine, a careful observer and talented writer, who has made a thorough study of European history of modern times and of European armaments.

Mr. LaBine is a product of rural America. He was born and raised in a small town and completed his education at a mid-western university, where he majored in journalism. Following his completion of the journalism course, he worked on a weekly newspaper, before going into the metropolitan field. He has specialized as a commentator and is recognized as having unusual ability in that line. His Weekly News Analysis, as it appears in our columns, presents evidence of that ability.

Our readers can confidently accept Mr. LaBine's statements of war happenings, and his comments, as the basis of their discussions of the war.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Edward Lubach, who died 2 years ago, Nov. 1, 1937. Although you could not speak to us, Or could not say goodbye; We know your thoughts were with us all.

When you were called to die; Oh happy hours we once enjoyed, How sweet their memories still; But death has left a loneliness The world can never fill.

Sadly missed by his wife, Mrs. Ed. Lubach, and children.

SNOWFALL HERE TUESDAY

The first really noticeable snowfall of the season arrived here on Tuesday morning when the flakes came down quite heavily for about an hour and blanketed the grass with a thin white coat. However, the snow melted soon after falling. Just the same it is a sign that old man winter is just around the corner.

BROWNIE NEWS

The Brownies met on Wednesday with ten members present. After the Brownie song and promise we discussed the subject of snow—its origin, uses and designs. We folded paper into six pointed stars and cut them into snowflake patterns. Some of the resulting stars were very original and beautiful. Each Brownie chose the best one of the four she made, and along with a letter, sent them to Jean Rosenheimer, who is confined at the hospital following an appendectomy. We hope she will soon be with us again.

Following the closing exercises we formed our bridge and vanished.

FARM AND HOME LINES

Present estimates indicate that Wisconsin will have about 24,000 bushels of timothy seed this year. This will be about 14 per cent less than the production of a year ago.

Even when substitutes are "spiked" with extra vitamins, butterfat is a better food than coconut oil and other fats. University of Wisconsin experiments have discovered.

Frozen peas seem to be replacing fresh peas—not so much canned peas—in the winter diets of a sampling of Wisconsin families receiving good food.

Belligerents Fight for Favor Of European Neutral States; 'Flint' Incident Still Simmers

Bruckart's Washington Digest Time for Showdown in Labor Situation Is Not Far Distant Serious Reaction Follows Attitude of NLRB; Public Also Resentful of Conditions Caused by Union Leaders; Inquiry May Bare Startling Facts.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON—There is every indication that the labor situation in this country—government policies, labor union policies, employer attitude—is fast approaching a new tangle. A reaction has set in on the part of the public to certain phases of the Roosevelt administration's earlier (but not necessarily the current) policies.

I have suggested in these columns previously that the national labor relations board was riding for a fall. It was riding too high. There was bound to be a serious reaction. The board's attitude, its general overbearing attitude, its general contempt for anyone disagreeing with its conclusions were elements certain to lead to an eventual showdown.

May Uncover Facts That Will Startle Legislators

Copies of records in nearly all of the board's hearings are being examined by the committee staff. Board decisions have been under fire many, many times. It seems to have been the rule, rather than an exception, that the board was willing always to listen to C. I. O. attorneys and almost never pay attention to alleged facts which employers or others tried to submit.

Lewis and Green Warfare Shows No Signs of Let-Up

No cessation of the warfare between John L. Lewis' C. I. O. and William Green's A. F. of L., is in sight. The Lewis faction of organized labor continues to do a lot of things that do not fit into the picture of Americanism, despite a strong denial by Mr. Lewis that communists are in key positions.

The unhappy labor board has few defenders, any more. For a long time, the board, its attorneys and investigators were commonly regarded as an adjunct of the Lewis labor union. Surely, there was mission for such belief by the administration, coupled with time to concerted attacks by leaders of the A. F. of L. wherever it was necessary to make a choice between Lewis followers and Green supporters, it was an odds-on bet that the Lewis group's contention would be sustained.

Another Army Officer Takes Job Outside Military Work

Colonel Fleming is the third army officer to take over a job outside of the military service, lately. First, there was Col. F. C. Harrington, who was made head of the WPA; secondly, Brigadier General Watson was made Mr. Roosevelt's secretary; and lastly, there came the appointment of Colonel Fleming.

It is rather hard to forecast how an army officer is going to deal with one particular part of the job now undertaken by Colonel Fleming—types of farm labor and to business directly or indirectly, with farming. A number of organizations, affiliated directly or indirectly, with farm operations have been engaged in a do-or-die struggle here in Washington with Mr. Andrews. I think the mere change in headship of the wage and hour division is not likely to quiet those people, because the effective October 24 represents the difference between profit and loss in who invented the idea of federal control of wages and hours never corn on a frosty morning, or husked corn were not of the making of Colonel Fleming, but his is the task of attempting to reconcile an inflexible law with conditions that vary in every county in the United States.

Truckers Face Arrest

Indiana state police officials ordered officers to arrest every Wisconsin trucker on Indiana highways without Hoosier license plates. Police said Wisconsin authorities had refused to enter a reciprocal agreement with Indiana on truck license plates and that several Indiana truckers had been arrested in Wisconsin.

Municipal Judge E. J. Rucy, Kenosha, upheld the verdict of a jury giving $10,000 damages to Edward Tiemann, 23, a farm hand for the loss of his right arm in an accident Sept. 24, 1938. Tiemann charged that the farm owners, Sol and Leo May, failed to provide proper machinery safeguards. The defendants appealed the jury verdict.

Life Span Increases—Improved housing facilities have been an important factor in increasing the average life of Wisconsin citizens, according to Dr. Carl Neupert, assistant to the state health officer. Board of health records show, he said, that the average age at death now is 58.3 years while in 1910 it was 40 years.

May Drop WPA Projects—Mayor Daniel W. Hoan and city officials agreed that there will be no WPA projects after Jan. 1, 1940, if the federal government forces local sponsors to pay 25 per cent of project costs. Deputy Collector James Barr said the city would have to raise an additional $2,500,000 if the rule became effective.

Truckers Face Arrest—Indiana state police officials ordered officers to arrest every Wisconsin trucker on Indiana highways without Hoosier license plates. Police said Wisconsin authorities had refused to enter a reciprocal agreement with Indiana on truck license plates and that several Indiana truckers had been arrested in Wisconsin.

Nunn has gained nationwide attention with his labor policies, one of which guarantees to his employees 52 pay checks a year.

Plan Cut in State Employees—The state research division in the executive office is making plans to carry out Gov. Heil's proposal for a 10 per cent reduction in the number of state employees. Hundreds of job holders are slated for dismissal within the next few months in a program of "consolidation" linked up with the governor's plan to trim the state budget and avoid a special session of the legislature on taxation.

DOLLAR MAKERS One Method Of Advancing Is to Retreat

By GEORGE T. EAGER

TONS of rock and dirt must be excavated before a diamond is found. It is just as unusual to find among thousands of salesmen that rarity among those who sell—the man who believes in the selling power of understatement.

A coffee salesman started the retail grocers of a large city by beginning his sales talk with the statement, "This is the second best brand of coffee on the market." Grocers naturally asked, "Who makes the best brand of coffee?" to which the salesman would reply, "Each of my many competitors makes the best brand and they all will tell you so." Admittedly having the second best brand evidently placed him in a position where he was without competition and his sales results proved it.

A large baking company has successfully marketed a brand of bread in markets long held by established competitors. The new bread was well advertised in local newspapers. But under instructions from a president who knew the power of understatement, salesmen sold each grocer one or two loaves less than the store's normal demand. Grocers were soon telling their customers, "I'm sorry we are all sold out of that bread." It was not very long before storekeepers as well as customers unconsciously thought of it as the fastest selling brand and therefore the best bread. Grocers unconsciously recommended it to customers and customers began demanding it of grocers and its success was assured.

UP-TO-DATE 'REVOLUTION'

THERE could be no more convincing way for the historian of the future to point out the high standards of living prevailing in this country than to contrast today's demands of those who want to overthrow our institutions with the demands of the revolutionists of other eras in the world's history. The French masses cried for bread and failing to get it brought on the French revolution. But when a present day advocate of revolution in this country recently made a speech he said: "Why should the citizens—at least 90 per cent of them—be imprisoned behind the cruel bars of want when within their grasp there are plenty of shoes, of clothes, of motor cars, of refrigerators to which they are entitled?"

From this point of view it is the salesmen who sell modern conveniences who are our most important national asset for the prevention of revolutions. We have 7 per cent of the world's population and starting with a wilderness have created and own today more than half of the world's wealth. Intelligent salesmanship and mass production have distributed this wealth so widely that stringent immigration laws are required.

The new industries created and developed in this country in the past 50 years now give employment to 10,000,000 men and women. Each new industry, whether it be automobiles, radio or rayon represents a new idea that has had to be first sold to the American people. It is significant that in this same period foreign countries, that have not developed their newspapers and publications as advertising vehicles for the dissemination of new ideas about things to buy, have not developed a single great new industry. If the United States has reached the point when revolutionists must cry for motor cars and refrigerators to get attention, it would seem that we are well on our way to prosperity.

Chemist Devises Method For Hunting Submarines

VINEYARD HAVEN, MASS.—A chemical process by which the course and position of submarines could be checked is being considered by the war department, according to Dr. Max Trumper, Philadelphia bio-chemist. He said that certain gases discharged by the surface to obtain fresh supplies of oxygen and recharge its batteries mingle with the water. A surface ship, by dropping certain chemicals which cause the water to change color on mixing with the gases could check the submarine's position.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—In more than four decades, Louis M. Ellshemius made 5,000 paintings and drawings and never made a cent out of them. Now, three big galleries give exhibitions of his work. One gallery is reported to have sold $150,000 worth of his paintings. All his canvases are in demand at high prices.

But Mr. Ellshemius, an irascible little man with a ragged beard and a testy way of speaking, is bedridden in his gloomy, gaslit old house in East Fifty-seventh street, and he asks, "What's the good of the whole damn thing?" He's 75 years old. He warned the world many times that it was going hell-for-leather down the skids, and now he thinks it's on the last stretch of the greased chute, and nothing else matters—not even money and fame.

The late Ralph Blakelock lost his mind after years of failure to stir critical or popular interest in his work. He was hailed as a great painter, and his pictures were bought by great galleries when he no longer knew or cared about money or recognition. There is an interesting parallel between his career and that of Mr. Ellshemius, although the latter is still bright and smart as a chipmunk.

But he won't even look out of his narrow bedroom window. He wants no outlook on a world turning itself into a madhouse. Pictures on the floor, covered with dust and cobwebs, may be worth a fortune, pictures of moods, dreams and memories, but that does not interest him. He has renounced the "pimps and vanities of this wicked world" long before it beat a path to his door.

The parallel between Blakelock and Ellshemius is also marked by the amazing diversity of their talents. Blakelock, the son of a physician, was trained in medicine, gifted in music and almost made a career of the piano and musical composition.

Ellshemius has composed a small library of songs, operas and etudes and used to give piano concerts in his youth. He painted feverishly for 46 years, quitting in 1922 when none would buy his pictures and no galleries hang them. But, in his varied abilities, he far outshone Blakelock. Here are a few of his achievements:

When he was a student at Cornell university, he discovered a new species of ichneumon fly. Later he announced a new law governing the "ramification of trees."

He wrote somewhat more than 50 volumes of plays, novels, novelettes, essays and verse. The verse is ironic in tone, was written in English, French, German, Italian and Spanish. He published them himself and, like his pictures, they gathered only cobwebs and dust.

He invented a new kind of "magic" indelible ink and several studio devices for artists.

He explored various diseases and offered methods of therapy.

He was born in Laurel Hill, N. J., near Newark, the son of a wealthy glove manufacturer. He attended Cornell two years and was a roommate of Robert W. Chambers in Paris when they were studying art under Bougereau.

His is a blue-book family of Dutch antecedents, and his name is there inscribed, but that interests him no more than the hanging of his pictures in the Metropolitan, the Luxembourg and the Whitney galleries.

IN HIS book, "Dynamite," Louis Adamic explains the Los Angeles Times explosion of 1910 forever ended militancy in the American labor movement. In that year Samuel Gompers and Frank Morrison were sentenced to prison terms on charges growing out of the Buck store case. This was lost in the shuffle with the dynamiting excitement. The terms were never served. Thereafter neither Gompers nor Morrison was militant. Currently, Mr. Morrison, the highly esteemed secretary-treasurer and conservative elder statesman of the A. F. of L. retires from office, after 43 years in that post. He will be 80 years old next month.

A native of Frankton, Ont., he is a doctor of laws of Lake Forest university. He entered law practice, but turned to the printing trade and became a member of the Typographical union in 1873. He is a member of the executive council of the Churches of Christ in America. (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

Mulligan Was Served
Clerks in a large Dallas grocery store were at their wits' end after a flood. Labels were soaked off canned goods stored in the basement so no one could tell which were beans, soup, peas or corn.

Future of Australia
Pointing to "Australia's future place in the Pacific, her very existence, perhaps," Professor Stephen H. Roberts urges the New South Wales government to teach American history in its schools.

A Few Little Smiles

PRETTY HIGH-TONED

Mr. A., who discovered two mice in a trap, addressed the lady of the house in the following brief language: "Estimable madam, immediately disengage these obnoxious rodents from the shackles which have environed them and promptly convey their pestiferous carcasses across the street where the neighbor's happy feline may indulge in their luscious substance and partake of their most delightful and stimulating qualities which appeal to his marvelous appetite and enrich his inner propensities for the devouring of these detestable and troublesome creatures which inhabit our domicile."

ATTRACTIVE GIRL

She—Her father is a steel magnate, of course you know?
He—That's why she's so attractive to me, I suppose.

Trouble Ahead

The lady of the house suspected that one of her two sons was paying attention to the maid. Anxious to find out which one, she said to the girl: "Norah, supposing you had the opportunity of going to the movies with one of my sons, which one would you prefer?"
"Well," replied Norah, "it's hard to say, for I've had grand times with the both of them, but for a real, rollicking spree, give me the master!"

Call Out the Guards

An angry woman rushed into the clerk's office. In her hand she bore a license. Turning to the clerk: "Did you, or did you not, issue this license for marrying me to Albert Briggs?" she demanded.
"Yes, I believe I did. Why?"
"Well, what are you going to do about it?" she stormed. "He's escaped."

It All Adds Up

Visitor—Well, your baby is certainly a cute little rascal. Does he take after his father?
Mother—Well, yes, in a way. His father is not quite so cute, but much more of a rascal.

WATCH YOUR STEP

Mr. Kallow—Yes, ma'am, I've just taken my degree. I'm a Bachelor of Arts.
Mrs. Wise—That's nice. But let me warn you it takes many arts for a young man to remain a bachelor.

Correct Audience

Professor—I am going to speak on liars today. How many of you have read the twenty-fifth chapter of the text?
Nearly every student raised his hand.
Professor—Good. You are the group to whom I wish to speak. There is no twenty-fifth chapter.

Clinging Gowns

Dolly—Does your husband like clinging gowns?
Molly—He sure does. He likes one to cling to me for about five years.

Head of the Class

Professor—Now class, how many make a dozen?
Class—Twelve.
Professor—How many make a million?
Class—Very few these days.

You Would Too

Physical Culture Instructor (to new pupil)—Your chest expansion is extraordinary.
Pupil—I've just had a salary increase, and the girl I love has accepted me at last.

Better Method

Mabel—When you have a quarrel with your husband, do you threaten to go home to your mother?
Ruth—No, indeed—what good would that do? I threaten to have mother come here.

Mother's Tricks

"Did you see that, dad? That con-jurer changed half-a-dollar into a silk handkerchief."
"That's nothing. Your mother can change a five-dollar bill into a small hat."

Strange Facts

As most of the private houses in the towns of Transylvania have no baths, the Rumanian government now runs "bath trains" through this section. Equipped with hot water, soap and towels, they offer free bathing facilities.

The Chinese army awards a cash bonus instead of stripes, to its soldiers when they are injured, privates getting $10, officers $40 and generals $100 for every wound.

Bank clerks, pay-roll carriers and night watchmen may now call for help during a holdup, without endangering their lives by an alarming move, through a new radio transmitter that they wear under their shirts. Taking a deep breath closes the electric circuit which makes the set silently flash alarm signals to a central receiving station.

Positive identification of horses has been found practicable through photographs or gutta-percha molds of the roofs of their mouths, which are as distinctive and individual as human fingerprints.—Collier's.

Eels Drive Motors

Electric light has been obtained from the queerest sources, even lemons. At a meeting of the New York Zoological society, Mr. Christopher Coates, an official of the aquarium, recently demonstrated that an entire battery of neon lamps could be run by fixing the terminals to a large live eel from South American waters which is known to give off a tremendous discharge. He clamped two flexible metal bands round its body, connected these to the neon lamps, and tickled the eel into activity. The bulbs flashed brilliantly. When a small electric motor was attached to the bands and the eel again tickled into action, the audience saw the flywheel spinning violently.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—in a risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

AND STEP LIVELY, TOO

Who For?
Father was losing his temper with his son, who, it appeared, was quite incapable of learning anything. One day, when the lad was even more than usually stupid, his father sent him round to the local druggist for some common sense. The boy took the quarter, and, just as he got to the door, turned to his father: "Shall I say it's for you, dad?" he asked.

SENIOR CLASS NEWS

This week the bookkeeping class has studied the entering of cash receipts and cash payments in the appropriate journals. The senior English class is studying poetry of the Romantic Age which includes the works of Robert Burns, Wordsworth and Byron. The Social Problems class is studying the chapter on "Marriage and the Family." The Shorthand class has completed reviewing their two textbooks and are now starting secretarial practice. During the past week, the Latin class has struggled through the study of participles and their uses.

WHO'S WHO

This cherry senior girl is liked by everyone. She is noted for her lovely complexion and "curl-perfect" hair. She is fond of dancing and quite excels in that top-notch art. (She's not a jitterbug.)
We understand she had a very interesting time on the senior trip to Madison, for she was the part owner of a Wisconsin medal and badge. You must ask her who the other part belonged to.
Although she doesn't have many outside activities in school, she is popular and well-known.
Last week's Who's Who—Cornelius Brodzeller.

Dear Nosey:
Well, my dear, I've sort of been deceiving you, but only because I've been very busy and not because I've forgotten you.
Did you hear about the experiences of several seniors who went to West Bend to the show? They had flat tires and were almost caught in a storm and what not. They survived, but one or two looked very sleepy the next day.
Speaking of sleepy—the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow" is the operaetta this year. You must come, Ichabod Crane is too cute for words.
No more news. Write soon.

ARMISTICE DAY PROGRAM

The entire K. H. S. student body is planning either to be in or be an audience at the Armistice Day program to be held Thursday, Nov. 9, at 2:30 in the high school auditorium.
It is in pagan form with speaking parts by high school people and the choruses made up in the grades. "Memories of 1918" is a timely subject carrying with it the plea for peace and careful thinking before we again enter a similar situation.
The school extends a cordial welcome to the American Legion members, the Ladies' Auxiliary and any other people desiring to come.

GRADE HALLOWE'EN PARTIES

With Jack-o-lanterns and all sorts of Halloween's spooks around, the primary and intermediate rooms held their annual parties to celebrate All Saints' Day. Games such as bobbing for apples, eating marshmallows tied to a string, and guessing the parts of the ghost were played in both rooms. Some people even got a good ducking for their pains.
Apples formed the main part of the refreshments, but cake and sandwiches were also in much evidence as Mr. Besswell only too well knew.

SPORTS

With the Tri-County League championship again as our goal, we have started basketball practice. Coach Gibson has urged that all freshmen desiring to come out for it, see him, and some very likely looking material has presented itself. If the freshmen turn out with as good a showing as they did in football, we will have some excellent new material.
Again we wish to congratulate Mr. Gibson on the fine football season and wish both him and the boys as successful playing in basketball.
Our first game is scheduled for November 13 with Random Lake playing at Kewaskum, and a return game with Random is scheduled for November 16.

WASHINGTON NEWS

FROM CONGRESSMAN
FRANK B. KEEFE

FINAL ACTION TAKEN THIS WEEK ON NEUTRALITY BILL

This letter is being written on Friday, Oct. 27, and on this day it is expected the senate will ultimately vote on the Neutrality Bill. It is expected that the bill will be before the House of Representatives next week for consideration, and perhaps before the publication of this letter final action will have been taken by the house on this most vital question. From present appearances it would seem that the administration's proposal will carry in the house by a very slight majority, as the whip has been cracked over the heads of Democratic members of Congress in no uncertain manner. The writer expects to participate in the debates on the floor of the house and will maintain the position which I have heretofore announced to the people of the Sixth Congressional District.
Might I add that continued study of the subject convinces me beyond question that whenever we permit consideration of the possible operative effect of our neutrality policy on prospective warring nations to become the basis of our consideration, we are no longer thinking in terms of what is best for America but are allowing foreign influences to determine the course of domestic legislation. I am firmly of the belief that maintenance of neutrality as between belligerents with a minimum of danger of exposure to the hazards in involvement in foreign war demands that we stand firmly upon our right to determine our own domestic policy with impartiality toward all nations that might become involved in war, without regard to what the effect might be upon any given belligerent.
The people of America are composed of citizens having in their bodies the blood of many nationalities and in their hearts ties springing from association with their homelands. It is not unnatural, therefore, that in times of stress such as the present, despite all caution to the contrary, our people are prone to take sides in any foreign war. As a result of this type of sentiment, many intelligent people, viewing the future of democracy with alarm, are making the argument that the arms embargo should be repealed in order to give all possible assistance to the British and French "short of war."

This argument in the current debate in the senate has not been specifically projected by the President, the Secretary of State or the Chairman of the Foreign Relations committee, although I believe it is fair to state that it has clearly been implied by them. Despite all of the camouflage and insincerity that has marked much of the debate on this question, the desire to help England and France is the real reason which motivates many of our people to now demand a change in the neutrality law. Some members of the senate have openly admitted that this is their reason, and privately a large portion of those demanding a repeal will admit it. Newspaper writers and commentators assert that this is the real reason and that avoidance of mentioning it specifically has given the debates in the senate a touch of unreality and a lack of candor. I think it is safe to say that there are few, if any, men in this Congress who are devoid of private and personal opinions in reference to the present European controversy. We all have our feelings as individuals, but in considering a question so vital as this, I am impressed by the fact that we who are called upon to vote the policy of this nation must not be guided by personal feelings but that we must view the subject through the impersonal eyes of the government itself and what the government's attitude should be. Therefore, I have not endeavored to picture the horrors of war or the conflict in ideologies in government abroad or to undertake to discuss whether this country should or should not assist the British and French with arms and munitions. Opinions on these subjects are personal and should be dissociated from the controlling problem of what our attitude as a nation should be.
Have we the right as a nation now under international law to change our neutrality law by repealing the embargo which has been laid down impartially against all nations involved in the present European controversy and by that action help one or more of the belligerents and inferentially hurt another? A determination of this question in all fairness must be tested in the light of what is our purpose and what is the ingenuity that now demands this change. The authorities of this nation very clearly lay down the rule that a change in a neutral's position which would result adversely on a belligerent cannot be made during the progress of a war for the purpose of assisting one belligerent to the disadvantage of another. A change demonstrated to be necessitated by purely domestic considerations irrespective of its unusual results might be made under international law with propriety.
The crux of the issue, therefore, is what is the purpose now motivating those who seek repeal of the arms embargo? Is it because of some domestic consideration or is it because of a desire to help England and France? Despite all hypocritical evasions to the

THE OREGON HOME FOR GIRLS

The buildings of the Wisconsin Industrial School for Girls at Milwaukee since 1917 been declared a dangerous fire trap, unsuited to the needs of its inmates. In 1923 the legislature voted $400,000 for the construction of a new home. This was $850,000 less than the estimates and requests of the board of control for this purpose.
The board, however, was glad to get the $400,000, considered it as a first installment, and expected that the legislature convening the following January would grant it the balance.
With this thought in mind, the board immediately set about the purchasing of a site. After considering more than 70 locations, they purchased a 405 acre farm, a mile and a half from the village of Oregon, in Dane county, about 10 miles from the city of Madison, just off the state highway No. 12. This farm has about 150 acres of white oak trees, 200 acres under cultivation, and the usual farm buildings. The purchase price paid was $59,500, or about $125 per acre. It is an ideal site and will lend itself to the development of a model institution of this type, with ample room for all future developments.
The farm will produce substantial food at low cost, and the gardens and orchards will supply green vegetables and fresh fruits, as well as vocational training for many of the girls. The hill or slope on which the buildings are located, together with the wooded section and a small pond, will provide outdoor activities such as picnics, nature strolling and hiking in the winter, taggonging and skating in the winter, all of which will give the girls a more normal and natural physical and mental growth.
The board then set about the preparation of plans for the buildings, incorporating therein the best features of similar institutions (throughout the nation) of which extensive studies had been made.
The original plans called for the erection of ten so-called "cottages," a hospital and infirmary, a well equipped school and gymnasium, a church, a laundry, and an administration building with residence quarters for employees.
Most surrounding states, as well as practically all the eastern states, have provided such facilities for the training of their delinquent girls. Wisconsin has for years been criticized by national social organizations for its backward building program in its correctional institutions.
With the limited funds at hand the board commenced its building program, by erecting the two model cottages, expecting the next legislature to grant sufficient funds to complete the entire program the following year. They were doomed to disappointment however, as session after session of the legislature either failed to see the need of the new institution, or thought that the state could not spare the funds to bring about the completion of such a vast building program.
It was the spring of 1932 before the ten cottages were completed. To date they have never been occupied, although the state maintains a skeleton crew on the premises, who care for the buildings and keep them heated enough in the winter months to prevent extensive damage by frost and moisture.
The reason they have not been used is because appropriations to erect the other buildings necessary to make occupancy possible, have been lacking.

contrary, I am satisfied, from listening to the debates and from extended reading on the subject, that the real influence behind the demand for the repeal of the arms embargo is a desire to help England and France and not a desire to readjust our own domestic problems. It is my studied and considered opinion, therefore, that there having been no assertion or claim of any domestic consideration worthy of attention as a basis for asking repeal of the arms embargo, to now repeal that embargo would constitute an affirmative act in absolute violation of international law and that we as a nation might well be subjected to the threat of a declaration of war on the part of Germany as a result.
It therefore appears timely for me to ask whether any citizen demands repeal of the embargo for the reason that as was suggested by the President in his speech, the only domestic consideration ever hinted is this one, and so think, as do many of the leaders of industry in this country, that a great majority of the people in this nation do not want profits arising from the sale of instruments of death and that a foregone the temporary benefits that might accrue from a war boom as a small price to pay to insure our non-participation in a foreign war.
Of what benefit will it be to proclaim "I will never vote a declaration of war and will never vote to send an American boy to shed his blood on foreign soil."

The present legislature voted a quarter million for this purpose, and the board has a crew of trustees from the administration and school buildings, which are considered the absolute minimum under which the institution can operate.
The reason ten cottages were called for in the original plan, was because it is the accepted practice for juvenile institutions to classify and segregate the delinquents in self contained units. Although they are called "cottages," they are really not cottages at all, but are beautiful large Lannon stone buildings, on the type of the Englishmanor house. They are about 50x130, two stories high, with red tile roofs and landscaped grounds.
All construction is fire-proof, of simple design, built to withstand hard weather, built to withstand hard usage. The criticism has often been made however that the beautiful stone buildings represent an extravagant and unnecessary expenditure of money. To this the board replies that the beds on this type of construction were $4000 under other types of fireproof materials such as brick.
Inside, the walls are plastered and painted in delicate colors. In places the weather is coming through, and the paint and plaster is ruined. With the exception of one of the buildings, which is occupied by the prison laborers, there is not a piece of furniture in any of the buildings.
Each of the cottages has on the first floor, a large living room, with natural fireplace and rubber tile floors (which are kept covered with layers of heavy building paper to preserve their beauty). There is also a large dining room and kitchen, the latter having a splendid stainless steel sink, a visitor's room, and two rooms for the house mothers, and six girls.
On the second floor are 15 additional rooms for the inmates, housekeepers and officers' rooms, sewing room and a storage room. All floors except living and dining rooms are terra. Each of these buildings is designed to house 21 girls. Every girl will have a private room of fair size, with unbarred windows which look out upon the grounds.
While the board has always held up the original plan as the ideal for the institution, it is now cooperating in a revised plan which will make occupation of the school possible with a considerably smaller expenditure than was specified in the original plan. It is working with the state architects department on a plan which will include the erection of a combined administration and school building, plus the conversion of one of the cottages to a hospital and receiving unit, will make it possible to move the girls from the dark and cramped quarters they now occupy, to the modern light and clean buildings by a year from this Christmas. "This," Mr. Klode, the director of the board of control, told me the other day, "will be one of the proudest and happiest moments of my life." Mr. Klode was on the original committee which sponsored this change and purchased the site for the new buildings 11 years ago.

In addition to the ten cottages completed, a power house has also been constructed. This building contains the heating boilers, incinerators, etc. Electric power will be purchased from the local public utility. The cost of the fuel and three firemen who have been employed during the winter months to keep the buildings heated, has been over $5,000 per year. A system of roads connecting the buildings with each other and with the main highway, has also been completed.
The farm buildings on the grounds, supplemented by barracks, have been taken over by the state prison, and used to house an honor camp of trusty convicts. The men in the camp have worked the farm and have provided from its fields, much of the vegetables and fruits canned at the prison for winter consumption. In addition, pork, beef, eggs and poultry have also been produced.
Besides the farm crew, the prison has also provided a construction gang, which under the direction of J. Gieseler, building engineer of the board of control, have built the sewerage disposal plant, coal bunkers, reservoir, sidewalks, storm drains, water beds and digesters, laid the water mains, sewers, mains and steam conduits, landscaped the grounds and painted the exterior woodwork on windows and doors of cottages. At the present time this gang is engaged in doing the excavating for the administration and school building, and it was planned to use them to do practically the entire construction work on this new building. In this way it would be possible to stretch the quarter million allotted by the legislature far enough to provide everything necessary for the long awaited opening of the institution.

It appears however, that the hand of fate is again intervening, and that the date of its completion will again have to be postponed. Officials of the building trades unions are now harassing the board, and are demanding that the prisoners be sent back behind the bars, and that the jobs on the construction work be given to their dues paying members.
If they succeed in their demands, it appears that they will, the board will have to revamp its plans, as this will mean a huge increase in cost to the state and the legislature may again have to be appealed to for further grants.
Primarily the blame for this "hinder" cannot be laid directly at anyone's feet. Citizens and groups interested in social work have long demanded this type and size of institution. The original board (which has since undergone many changes, as governor after governor has made appointments thereto) complied with these requests, and visioned in those days before the depression, when this was started, a beautiful picture of an ideal institution without regard for its ultimate cost. The legislature, year after year, foresaw the huge cost of the project, and refused to recognize the immediate need for these new buildings.
And so, after repeated obstacles have delayed the completion of the Oregon School for Delinquent Girls for eleven years, the end is still not in sight.

Exceeding Speed Limit

Tops Traffic Violations

The percentage of fatal automobile accidents due to excessive speed increased again in 1938 according to an analysis released by the Travelers Insurance Company. Three years ago, in 1936, 32.6% of all persons killed as the result of some driver's lawlessness met death because of speed. In 1937 that percentage rose to 36.8%, total 32,000 persons who died in automobile accidents, were killed because of exceeding speed limits. Is experience the best teacher? If so, the lesson taught by the annually mounting total of deaths due to excessive speed is not being taken seriously by drivers. Millions of words are poured into the rising tide of fatalities due to the single factor of speed, but just as the automobile drivers of America continue to toy with speed, killing thousands annually.
No one can regard with complacency last year's record of 32,000 killed and more than a million injured, or the fact that speed was the largest contributing factor to that disastrous record.
