The death of Elizabeth Brandstetter came as a great shock to her numerous friends in this vicinity. She had been feeling fine and in high spirits at the home previous to suffering the stroke and enjoyed living there very much. Although a semi-invalid, deceased was ever pleasant and smiling and possessed one of the kindest and most lovable personalities known to womanhood. prospects, who should be ready to step These enviable qualities were responinto the shoes of the seven senjors on sible for her being so dearly beloved within her family circle and by all her Besides Kewaskum, Oakfield and reighbors and friends. Our heartfelt sorrow is expressed to the bereaved survivors.

The frail person of Professor Stravinsky, as he may now be called has been shaken and racked by the torrent of his genius, and every so often he has found it necessary to take time out in Switzerland for repairs. But, at 54, he still has furious vitality and is still at mid-way in his creative career.

With a sharp pencil he spears superaural sounds. Marshaling them in a symphony, he looses demons, to slay them with his baton. This demoniac dissonance caused riots in France when his compositions were first produced. It took quite a few years for discerning critics to discover that he "planned it that way." and that there was law and order in his music.

November 22 finds John Nance ("Cactus Jack") Garner, most un-Throttlebottomish vice president in U.S. history, celebrating his 70th birthday. The event is significant, because it calls attention to the age of a man who is yet spry enough to be presidential timber next year. Simple, close to common folks, he once said: "I deceive all of them by telling the truth." Immensely popular, he usually gives new congressmen their first lessons in statecraft. Above: Sporting his Texas sombrero, he leaves the White House with Alabama's Rep. William Bankhead and Kentucky's Sen. Alben W. Barkley.

Two gentlemen sat in their hotel room, consuming a quart of spirits. One of them had an idea, and raised the window. "I am going to take off and fly around the courtyard a little bit," he remarked.

Leaping from the window sill, he buried his nose in the cement three loors below. The next day his friend went to the hospital to see him. "I certainly made a fool of myself yesterday," said the patient. 'Why didn't you stop me?" "Well, shucks," said his friend, maybe I should have, but I really hought you could do it."

say? No-not really-just wise planning-plenty of work the day before Diner-I say, waiter, I have only perhaps-but time-no worry-and an easy dinner on Thanksgivingand that's worth while isn't it?

> How to do it? Well here are my suggestions. First, it is entirely possible to clean, prepare and even stuff the turkey the day before Thanksgiving rather than on Thanksgiving morning. Then put it on a rack in an open roasting pan and store it in your refrigerator over night. If you have a mechanical refrigerator it will be running of course. If you have an ice refrigerator, be sure to get an ample supply of ice so that your refrigerator can really work for you over this holiday.

Autumn meets Floring Parr, dashing, well-educated young man of the S castle. Autumn meets Florir a Parr, dashing, well-educated young man of the countryside. Late in the evening Autumn leaves the dance, rides horseback to the heighboring ranch where she meets Bruce Landor, friend and champion of her childhood days. He takes her to see his mother, an invalid. His father is dead, thought to have killed himself. As soon as his mother sees Autumn she commother's attitude, and perplexed. Bruce, apologetic, can offer no reason for his mother's attitude. Autumn calls again on Hector Cardigan—this time to find out mother's attitude. Autumn calls again on Hector Cardigan-this time to find out the reason for Mrs. Landor's outburst. From his conversation she inferred that Geoffrey Landor killed himself because be loved Millicent Dean, her mother. Mean-while, Bruce Landor rides to the spot where his father's body was found years before. There he meets Autumn, who, leaving Hector, was searching for a lost child Bruce had found the child, and there Autumn and he talk of their families. They agree that her mother and his father loved each other deeply-and that their love is the cause of present antagonism. Florian Parr, at the Castle for dinner, proposes to Autumn. She refuses him. The next day Autumn rides toward the Landor ranch.
