

Rev. C. J. Gutekunst, Beloved New Fane Pastor, Passes Away

Served As Minister of St. John's Lutheran Church 32 Years; Mrs. G. P. Peters, Rev. Frank Gadow Also Among Those Called

The community mourns the death this week of the Rev. C. J. Gutekunst, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church at New Fane, Route 1, Kewaskum, for the past 32 years and the Emmanuel Lutheran church at Campbellsport the past 24 years.

Following an illness of six months with heart trouble and a complication of diseases, she had reached the age of 56 years and six months.

Mrs. Peters, nee Mary Wunderle, was born on June 8, 1883, in Kewaskum in the home now occupied by the John Stelpflug family.

She lived here until her marriage to Gerhard Peters, which took place on June 19, 1906 at Holy Trinity church in this village.

The Rev. Philip J. Vogt officiated at the service. Following their marriage the couple took up their residence in Rockford, Ill. Later they moved to Lee, Ill. and lived there before moving to Milwaukee, where they made their home the past 16 years.

They lived at 2401 N. 55th street. Deceased was the mother of two daughters, both of whom survive, along with the widower. They are Mrs. Bernice E. Herrmann of Lee, Ill. and Mrs. Marilla Riddle of Oconomowoc.

Mrs. Peters is also survived by three grandchildren: one sister, Mrs. Ellen Stelpflug of Kewaskum, and many relatives and friends in this community, among them being Val Peters of this village, a brother-in-law of Mrs. Peters.

Funeral services will be held on Saturday, Feb. 3, at 9:30 a. m. from the Becker funeral home, W. Lisbon and N. 43rd street, Milwaukee, to St. Catherine's church at 10 a. m. Interment will be in Holy Cross cemetery in that city.

Rev. Frank T. Gadow, aged 77 years, 2 months and 3 days, father of Rev. Richard M. A. Gadow of this village, was called in death at 1:10 a. m. on Thursday, Jan. 18, at his home in California, Mo., after an illness of 10 days with pneumonia.

Rev. Gadow had been ailing for years prior to his death. Due to his illness and age he had become quite deaf in late years. Rev. Gadow had visited Kewaskum on one occasion about four or five years ago when he accompanied his on here and spent a short time in the village.

Rev. Richard M. A. Gadow left for Missouri upon receiving notice of his father's death and spent a week there, returning last Thursday night. Deceased was born on Oct. 15, 1862 at Alt Phillip, Kreis Pyritz, Province of Pomerania, Germany, and immigrated to this country in the spring of 1882, following the death of his mother in Germany.

He settled at Monroe, Wis., and went to his present home in California, Mo., in 1926. His marriage to Wilhelmine Fischer took place on Dec. 16, 1888, who survives. His wife is now residing in Kansas City, Mo. at the home of her son.

Six children were born to the couple, two of whom, a son and a daughter, preceded their father in death. Those surviving are Frank of Phoenix, Ariz., Armin of Kansas City, Richard of Kewaskum and Adela (Mrs. M. Groger) of Kansas City. Other survivors include five grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. F. Engelke of Hawkeye, Iowa, and other relatives.

Funeral services were held on Saturday, Jan. 26, at the Evangelical church in California, Mo., the Rev. J. C. Bierbaum officiating. Burial was in the church cemetery. Rev. Gadow was a conscientious pastor and a good man, who will be missed by the members of his congregation and friends because he was kindhearted and considerate, who always did his best for his family, parishioners and the community in which he lived.

Firemen Called Out To Truck Fire Wednesday

The Kewaskum fire department was called out at 2:45 p. m. on Wednesday of this week when a load of canned goods, sugar, etc., caught fire on a truck owned by L. Chudacoff of Appleton several miles north of the village near the Rob. Bartlett farm on Highway 55 in the town of Auburn.

The truck's entire load of merchandise was either damaged or destroyed by the fire. When the firemen arrived the contents of the load had been shoveled off the truck onto the ground so that no damage was done to the truck and the firemen were not needed.

Cause of the fire could not be determined although the driver believed it may have started from a cigarette butt tossed out of the cab near West Bend, which may have been blown onto some paper on the truck.

After disposing of its load the truck continued on its way north. People on the scene went through the spoils and many went home with arms and bags full of slightly damaged canned goods.

Valuable Prizes Given at L. Rosenheimer Sale

Over $50.00 worth of free gifts were given at the end of the big clearance sale held at the L. Rosenheimer store, which began Jan. 17 and closed last Saturday evening, Jan. 27. Customers registered upon entering the store during the sale and at the close of the event nine prizes were awarded the lucky persons, who were as follows:

Dishes—Mrs. Kate Nordhaus, Kewaskum. 5. Toaster—Mrs. Norbert Becker, Kewaskum. 6. Iron—Wm. Rauch, Campbellsport, R. D. 7. Flour—Mrs. Fred Zimmermann, Kewaskum. 8. Basket of groceries—Mrs. Hugo Kempf, Kewaskum. 9. Basket of groceries—Mrs. Emil Backhaus, Kewaskum.

Coaches of Tri-County Conference Meet Here

Coaches and athletic officials from schools in the Tri-County conference met at the Republican hotel in Kewaskum at 8:30 p. m. on Wednesday of this week to discuss plans for the 1940 six-man football program.

A committee composed of A. H. Humphrey and Adolph Klatt, North Fond du Lac, and E. E. Packard, principal at Lomira High school, reported on the purchases of football equipment.

The conference played a tough six-man football last season. All of the schools, including Kewaskum, are in favor of the tackle variety this coming season.

MOTHER SERIOUSLY ILL

Mrs. Fred Zimmermann has returned to her home here after having been with her mother, Mrs. Barbara Lilla, 87, at Theresa, who has been very ill the past two weeks.

She extinguished the flames herself. The conference played a tough six-man football last season. All of the schools, including Kewaskum, are in favor of the tackle variety this coming season.

Local Firemen at Annual Meeting of Badger Association

The annual mid-winter banquet of the Badger Firemen's association, held at the city hall in Plymouth last Thursday evening was a fine success, with more than 400 guests being served.

A business meeting in the afternoon attracted the attention of delegates but the banquet was the highlight.

Chief Harry Schaefer, Philip McLaughlin and Walter Bruessel represented the Kewaskum fire department as delegates to the afternoon meeting. In the evening they were joined by the following members of the local department for the banquet: John H. Martin, Marvin Martin, Norbert Dogs, and Clarence Mertes Postmaster Frank Hoppe attended as a guest of the firemen.

No plans were made at the meeting for the Badger Firemen's annual tournament, which will be held in Kewaskum on Sunday, June 23. However, the executive board of the association will meet with the Kewaskum department some time this month to make arrangements for the tournament.

The banquet program opened with an address of welcome by Mayor H. J. Rooney of Plymouth. Guests were then entertained by two selections by a Plymouth High school quartet. The crowd was also peppered up with community singing. A fine gesture of the affair was the introduction of eight old time members of the Plymouth department.

A roll call of members of the association revealed that 19 out of the 20 departments were represented. The firemen received some helpful pointers on selling their departments to the public, delivered by Assistant Chief Edw. Wischer of the Milwaukee department. Atty. Charles Voigt, Sr. of Sheboygan delivered an interesting talk on his observations while in Europe just before the war started.

Association President John Feutz, Slinger, proved an ideal master of ceremonies. The crowd was also entertained by Uncle Ezra impersonations, staged by Al Pfeffer of Beloit. Music by the Honchel brothers of Elkhardt Lake was furnished. Chief Herman Luedke of Plymouth extended thanks to all who attended and helped make the event a success.

Dr. Colbert Heads County Citizenship Day Program

Dr. C. J. Colbert, head of the University of Wisconsin extension division department of sociology and economics and originator of the Citizenship day project in Wisconsin, spent several hours on Monday of this week in conference with members of various citizenship day committees in Washington county, assisting the committee members in outlining their work.

Citizenship day for new voters of Washington county will be held on the third Sunday next, May. Dr. Colbert is the instructor-counselor for this county.

Dr. Colbert said Monday that he was well satisfied with the publicity given the Citizenship day movement by the newspapers of the county, indicating that the publicity work was a job well done to date. He plans on holding a first meeting of all committees and interested people in the community at the court house in West Bend at 7:30 p. m. on Wednesday, Feb. 14. The public is invited to attend this meeting.

Dr. Colbert left charts on government, other materials, and directions for local instructors on his visit to the county on Monday. Duplicates of the charts are now being turned out under the direction of C. A. Wickman, director of the new vocational school in West Bend, while duplicates of other materials required are being made by a department of the West Bend Aluminum company.

Dr. Colbert expressed confidence that the Citizenship day program in Washington county will meet with more than considerable success.

RESULTS LAST FRIDAY

Kewaskum 25 Campbellsport 23 Brandon 24, Oakfield 21 Lomira 25, Rosendale 22

GAMES FRIDAY NIGHT

Oakfield at North Fond du Lac Lomira at Campbellsport. Brandon at Rosendale. Kewaskum bye.

Kewaskum continued to lead the Tri-County basketball conference with a clean slate following its eighth straight victory, a close 25 to 23 decision over Campbellsport at Kewaskum last Friday night. In other loop ups, Oakfield lost to Brandon 24 to 21 and Lomira defeated Rosendale 25 to 22 for its second straight victory of the season.

Kral and Wahlen led Kewaskum with seven points each while Guenther was high for Campbellsport with nine. Kewaskum was ahead 18 to 14 at the intermission. An overflow crowd witnessed the game. Except for the first quarter, when Kewaskum was ahead 11 to 8, the game was tightly contested. An injury to Kral in the second quarter which forced his retirement from the contest for the rest of the period gave the Belles an opportunity to catch up a bit.

Except in the first quarter, Kewaskum did not play up to its usual standard and as a result had a tough time of it toward the end of the game against the fighting Campbellsport five. The writer has seen Kewaskum play better games this season. As one of the regular members of the team told us after the game, they might have prevented such a close game if the regular starting lineup would have been kept in the game instead of experimenting with the squad in such a crucial game. Two men Dreher and Wahlen, were benched for some time. Why, we do not know, as both were playing bang-up ball while in there. Nevertheless the game was won but not until after a good scare when the Belles tied it up in the last minute or two.

All of the five men who started for the locals played equally good games while two players stood out for the opponents, namely Guenther and Burns. Guenther played a hard game and led all scorers. Burns, flashy guard, played a fast, heavy game and was one of the best men on the floor. Burns was forced out of the game in the last quarter on fouls and this hurt the Belles' chances. On the other hand, Romane was banished for the same reason for Kewaskum.

A box score of the Campbellsport-Kewaskum game will be found in the school notes on the last page. A week from to-night Lomira will invade Kewaskum. Rosendale will play at Oakfield and North Fond du Lac will battle at Brandon.

Joseph Miller Leaves to Attend Linoleum School

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Scheid of Campbellsport observed their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary Monday, Jan. 22, at a celebration on Sunday, Jan. 21. Guests present were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Scheid and family of South Elmhurst, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Scheid and son, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rusch and daughter, Mary, of Campbellsport, Elton Scheid and Mrs. Elizabeth Struelling of Fond du Lac, two daughters, Mrs. H. C. Senn of Wilmington, Calif., and Mrs. John Hughes of Deer Park, Wis., were unable to attend. Mr. and Mrs. Scheid have twenty-five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

On Monday afternoon 20 members of the Ladies Aid society of the Reformed church, Campbellsport, of which Mrs. Scheid is a member, assembled at the Scheid residence for a surprise party. Lunch was served by Mrs. Fred Rusch, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Scheid, assisted by Mrs. Marvin Scheid.

Mrs. Catherine Harter Observes 91st Birthday

The Misses Elena Schmidt and Helgen Remmel were at Fond du Lac Saturday afternoon to call on Mrs. Catherine Harter at St. Agnes hospital in that city to extend greetings to her on her 91st birthday anniversary.

Mrs. Harter was a resident of Kewaskum until a couple of years ago when she went to Fond du Lac to make her home at the Henry Booye Home for the Aged. Soon after arriving at the home she had the misfortune of fracturing her hip and has been confined to the hospital since. She is feeling quite well at present.

Mrs. Harter has many relatives and friends in Kewaskum and vicinity who will join with us in offering birthday greetings and best wishes to the aged lady with the hope for her health and happiness in the future.

Evelyn Krautkramer Receives Nurse's Cap

Traditional capping exercises of the St. Agnes School of Nursing, Fond du Lac, were held Sunday afternoon when 40 nurses received their caps.

Carrying lighted candles, the senior students formed a guard of honor as the freshmen marched into the auditorium.

Among those who received caps was Miss Evelyn Krautkramer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Krautkramer of Kewaskum, and a graduate of the Kewaskum High school. Others from this vicinity receiving caps were Leona Anders, Campbellsport; Ruth Gonnens, West Bend, and Virginia Giese, Waldo.

The program consisted of selections by the school orchestra and freshmen chorus, reading by Mary Louise Leonard, address by Rev. Donald F. Miller, G. S. R. of Oconomowoc, capping and lighting of candles, Big sisters and Little sisters, the Nightingale pledge, freshmen class school song and recessional by Ruth Thompson.

Eileen Murphy, president of the senior class, announced the program. The freshmen were presented for capping by Jane O'Rourke, social science instructor. Following the program a reception was held in the students' lounges for relatives and friends.

Children's Theatre Troupe To Give Play at West Bend

"Dick Whittington and His Cat" will be presented at West Bend on Saturday, Feb. 10, in the new grade school auditorium at 3:15 p. m. by the Clare Tree Major Theatre for Children which comes from New York. The price of admission is 25 cents for children under 12, and 40 cents for adults.

This is one of the plays chosen by the children from coast to coast, who voted last spring on the selection of the winter's program of this noted company, now in its sixteenth season. The cast of characters includes 12 people who, in addition to their acting, have complete charge of the scenery, wardrobe changes, lighting, make-up, etc. Keeping always in mind the objective of bringing to children everywhere the fun and frolic of the professional theatre, the company travels in a fleet of gaily colored trucks which are driven loaded and unloaded, by members of the cast of characters.

It is a non-profit making and uncommercial organization and is being brought to West Bend under the auspices of the West Bend Woman's club. There will be no reserved seats.

The Clare Tree Major troupe will present the same play at the Past Theatre in Milwaukee on the morning of February 10.

Village Team Beats West Bend and Port

COMING WEEK'S SCHEDULE SATURDAY, Feb. 3—Rockford at West Bend. SUNDAY, Feb. 4—Mayville at Kewaskum; Cedarburg at Port Washington.

TUESDAY, Feb. 6—Rockford at Cedarburg; Mayville at West Bend; Port Washington at Hartford. Kewaskum's basketball team mounted back into undisputed second place in the Land O' Rivers circuit the past week as a result of winning two very close and thrilling battles.

KEWASKUM 28; WEST BEND 26 The first of the two games was played Sunday night in the local gym against West Bend. This was the closest and most bitterly fought contest seen here for many a moon. Players battled their hearts out and the game went into a double overtime period before Kewaskum squeezed out a 28 to 26 victory.

Although the rest of the teams in the league are resting on top of the Benkers, they have a vastly improved team. Seeing the game left no doubt in our minds but that the Benkers have the fastest team in the loop and a fighting club. What we can't understand is how the Benkers can be so low in the standings. We've seen teams play Kewaskum that looked worse than them. To show the West Bend team's grit, one of their men crashed headon into the brick wall on the south end of the gym, but, after coming to, finished the game.

The largest crowd of the season saw the game and not any were disappointed. (Continued on Last Page)

THE NAVY U. S. Repairs Old Battlewagons To Bolster First Defense Line

With warfare raging all around her, the U. S. seeks security in strength. Major part of this program is directed at making her Atlantic and Pacific gateways impregnable through use of naval craft ranging in size from tiny gunboats to giant battleships. Already this vast naval building program is going ahead full speed, with indications the present congress will provide more funds in accordance with President Roosevelt's budgetary request.

Giant ships like the Pennsylvania, whose 14-inch guns are shown above, are one part of the program. Another, more economical part, is rehabilitation of old World war destroyers which have been harbored at San Diego for many years. Though rusty in spots, they've been kept in good shape for just such an emergency as this.

Mohammed's Favorite Wife
The favorite wife of Mohammed was Ayesha, who married the prophet when she was only nine years old. She was so greatly beloved that he often said she would be the first of his wives to whom the gates of paradise would be opened. Historians say that to the charms of her beauty she added a knowledge of mathematics, rhetoric and music. In his last illness Mohammed requested to be carried to her house and died in her arms.

Scythes Growing in Tree
Near Waterloo, N. Y., there are three scythes growing in a tree. In 1861 the farmer, named Johnson, who owned the balsam poplar hung his scythe in the crotch of the tree, and went off to the Civil war. He told his wife not to touch the scythe until he came back. He never returned, and the tree has now grown entirely around the blade. The other two scythes were hung there by two sons of the present owner when they went off to the World war.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—The recent emancipation proclamation of Keweenaw Mountain Landis, freeing an oppressed minority of major and minor league ball players, reminded this courier of the big blizzard in Chicago, along about the year 1906. I was a new and much bewildered reporter from the sticks, tossed into the maelstrom of a federal court railroad case because there was nobody else to send except the office boy. It was as intelligible as a squirrel cage. The defending attorney loosed a gas attack of statistics and my pencil dropped from my limp fingers.

The judge, a little, brown wheats-tray of a man with a chrysanthemum that, got me in the sharp focus of his bright gate eye. I hadn't been wrecking any trains or robbing banks, but I began to fear the worst. I wondered whether my elaborate ignorance of what was happening could possibly be construed as a federal offense.

Then the blow fell. The judge gavelled down the spouting lawyer and said the court would take a brief recess. Then he beckoned me into his chambers. He asked me to sit down.

Then he said: "I hadn't seen you at the press table before. This case is confusing. I thought I might help you in getting it straight. It's like this..." In a few concise sentences he brought the courtroom hubbub into something understandable. I managed to write a story about it without breaking my arm and got my first pat on the back from a city editor who was no spendthrift with such gestures.

The voltaic little Judge Landis was like that, and any newspaper man who ever knew him will insist that his $65,000-a-year honorarium as baseball commissioner isn't half enough. He was a corporation lawyer before he began calling strikes on big business, and was appointed to the federal bench by Theodore Roosevelt at the peak of T. R.'s trust-busting rampage. In his dual capacity he has punished two of the major institutions of America, the Standard Oil company and Babe Ruth, the former with a $29,000,000 fine.

He was a newsboy in Logansport, Ind.; a semi-pro baseball player; a stenographer and court clerk at 18, and soon thereafter a law school graduate and practicing lawyer. His appointment as national commissioner of baseball grew out of the "Black Sox" scandal in 1919.

U. S. Has Edge On Europe in Press Relations
The easy-going free-for-all of American journalism, in which public officials sometimes owe their high status to an understanding of newspaper men and how to get on with them, has given this country a decided advantage over the European countries in wartime press relations. In the World War and now in the present war Europe has demonstrated the limitations of its bureaucrats in co-operating with the press. While England and France have, traditionally, a free press, the human contacts between the correspondents and high officialdom are still lacking, and both countries are snarled in censorship troubles.

At the start of the war, liberal opinion noted with satisfaction that France and England had appointed, respectively, to their ministries of information, a distinguished literary man and playwright, and a leading scholar. It seemed to be an exemplification of their war aims. But, like the brass hats of the past, they didn't seem to understand newspapers or newspaper men.

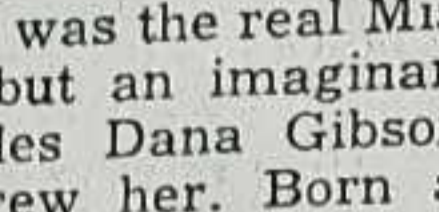

The scholarly Lord MacMillan of England has faded into the background, and his press censor, Vice Admiral C. V. Osborne, is replaced by the clubby and gregarious Sir Walter T. Monckton. In France, Jean Girardoux, the playwright, is still minister of information, but his office inspires bitter stories in the American press about fantastic restrictions. The censorship tangle is an issue of daily mounting importance in France.

Newspaper men liked M. Girardoux tremendously when he was spokesman for the French ministry of foreign affairs a few years ago. He was perhaps, in Goethe's phrase, "all too human" for any careful grooving of public opinion—his own is ironic and whimsical—and has been surrounded with a bulwark of bureaucracy against which newspaper men are thrown for a loss. He is a charming, monocled gentleman of 53, who was severely gassed in the World war and so speaks in a husky voice. He did a short turn at Harvard before the World war.

"The Name Is Familiar"

BY FELIX B. STREYCKMANS and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Gibson Girl
ALL the "Miss Americas" notwithstanding—and in spite of all the so-called American sweethearts, past and present—there has been only one truly American girl, the Gibson Girl. She was tall, reserved and overdressed but for more than 20 years she was the idol of America—admired by the men and imitated by the women.

C. D. Gibson

The name of Gibson, through his creation of another person, was as widely known as any throughout the world. Kaiser Wilhelm II was a Gibson Girl fan, the czar of Russia had a collection of her pictures and the drawings were popular in Alaska and Tokyo.

A man by the name of Gibson created a girl more popular than the Cleopatra of yesterday or the Ann Sheridan of today. And when a girl who doesn't exist has more oomph than those two, she's really got something!

Bessemer Steel
ANYONE who knows anything at all about steel has heard of the Bessemer process for making it, but hardly anyone knows about Sir Henry Bessemer. He invented the process of converting cast iron into tough steel.

He was an English engineer born in 1813. During the Crimean war, he wanted to perfect a cannon that would fire a spinning projectile like the cast iron in the guns was not strong enough to withstand the more powerful explosion that was necessary. In Paris he was able to make a stronger cast iron. Then he succeeded in producing steel, patenting the process in 1855. It consists of burning out the carbon and other impurities by blasting air through the molten metal, a process still in use today.

Sir Henry was a prolific inventor. He was the first to compress graphite into a solid mass so that lead pencils could be made.

One of his first inventions was a method of impressing the government seal on papers so it could not be forged. The royal government promptly stole his patent without any attempt at recompense. But later in life he made a vigorous protest and the government apologized for its misdeed and made him a knight to quiet him... a reason as good as many others for bestowing the title of sir upon an Englishman.

'Annie Oakleys'
IN THE show business, all passes for free tickets are known as Annie Oakleys. The reason for calling them that is vague, but the personality of the original Annie Oakley for whom they are named is not. She was America's greatest markswoman—and "America's Sweetheart," too, long before Shirley Temple—or even Mary Pickford won that title.

Known as "Little Sure Shot," Annie Oakley used to perform feats of marksmanship with the pistol and rifle in Buffalo Bill's Wild West show. One of the many versions of how free tickets came to be known as "Annie Oakleys" is as follows:

Before her performances, she used to appear outside the tent, toss a pack of cards into the air and shoot at them. Anyone who was able to survive the scramble and obtain a card with a bullet hole in it was given a free admission to the show. Just an ordinary playing card would not admit you—it had to have a bullet hole in it.

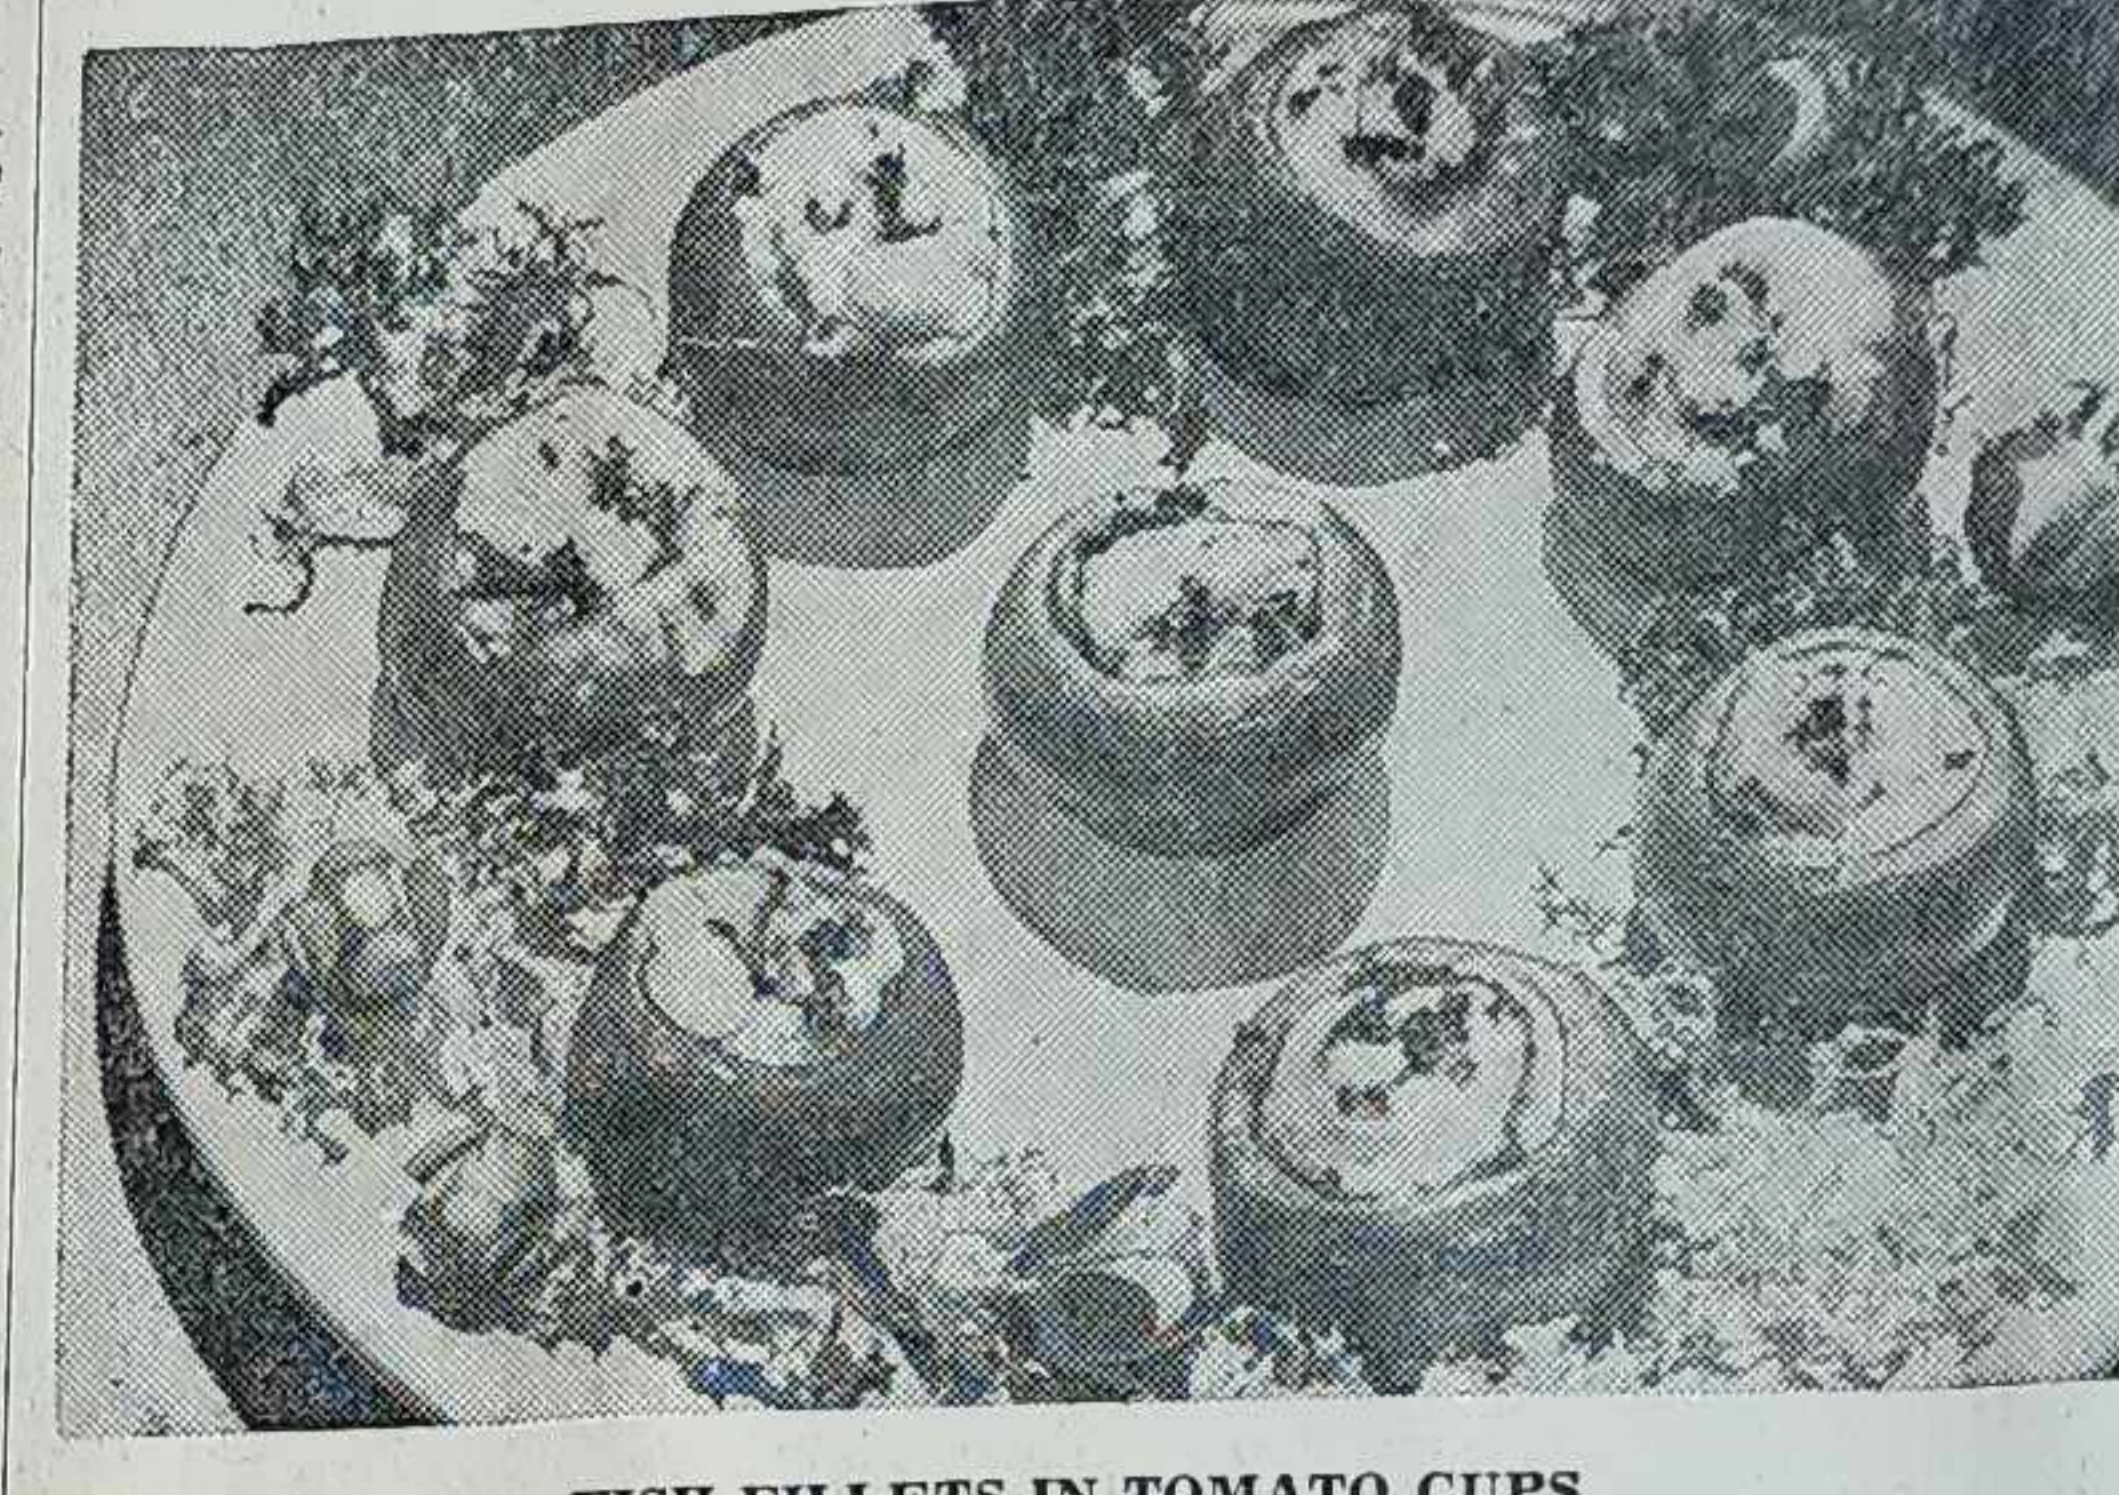

In other words, it had to be an "Annie Oakley."

My Family Likes Fish!
"There's all the health of the sea in fish," according to an old saying, and modern home makers find that there's variety and economy for menus, too.

Fish and sea foods are available the year 'round in almost limitless variety. In most markets it's possible, now, to purchase (1) fish "in the round," just as it comes from the water, (2) fish that is cleaned, scaled, and ready to cook, (3) boneless fish fillets, and (4) fish steaks. Fish and sea foods may be purchased quick-frozen too.

If fish is purchased "in the round," that is with skin, bones, head, and tail included, allow one pound of fish per serving; if purchased cleaned and scaled, allow one pound for two servings, and if purchased in the form of fish fillets or fish steaks, allow one pound for three servings.

Fish cookery is simple, especially when you use fish that is cleaned and scaled, filets, steaks, or the quick-frozen products. Remember, though, that the flavor of most fish is delicate, and that you need well-seasoned sauces and accompaniments to serve with it.

You'll find practical and easy-to-follow recipes for preparing fish and sea foods in my booklet, "Feeding Father." There are recipes for the old-fashioned cod fish balls, men love, for delicious clam chowder, and for the other fish and sea food dishes you'll want to serve your family often.

Fish in Pepper Shells.
(Serves 6)
6 tablespoons butter
6 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup top milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 cups cold fish (flaked)
6 whole green peppers
1 cup bread crumbs
Paprika
Melt 3 tablespoons butter, add flour and blend; add milk and cook over low flame, stirring constantly, until thick. Remove from flame; add salt, lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce. Then add flaked fish. Place in cleaned green peppers, top with bread crumbs, combined with remaining butter (melted), and a dash of paprika. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) approximately 25 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

Hot Oven Baked Boneless Perch.
(Serves 4)
4 perch filets
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup milk
1 cup hard bread crumbs
1/4 cup butter (melted)
Dip fish in milk to which salt has been added. Drain and then roll fish in hard bread crumbs, covering thoroughly. Place in a well-oiled baking pan and brush thoroughly with melted butter. Bake 10 minutes in a very hot oven (550 degrees). Serve at once. It is not necessary to turn fish while baking.

Fish Filets in Tomato Cups.
(Serves 6)
6 to 8 tomatoes
1 package haddock, sole, or perch filets
Salt and pepper
1/4 cup butter (melted)
1/2 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup parsley (chopped)
Remove a slice from the stem end of each tomato and scoop out the pulp, leaving a firm cup. Sprinkle the inside with salt and pepper. Cut filets in lengthwise strips. Brush each strip with melted butter, and sprinkle with salt, pepper, lemon juice, and parsley. Roll the strips firmly and place in the tomato cups. Brush tops with melted butter, sprinkle with parsley, and place in a greased baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 to 35 minutes. Baste occasionally while baking.

Oyster Stew.
1 pint oysters
1/4 cup butter
1 quart rich milk
Salt and pepper to taste
Place oysters, strained oyster liquor, and butter in a saucepan and cook gently until edges of oysters begin to curl. Heat milk in a separate saucepan at the same time. (Caution: Milk should be thoroughly heated—but should not boil.) Add oysters to milk and season to taste. Serve immediately.

Sauteed Oysters.
(Serves 4)
1 pint oysters (large)
1 cup cracker crumbs
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup butter
Drain oysters. Add salt and pepper to cracker crumbs, blend thoroughly, and then roll oysters in the seasoned crumbs, covering thoroughly. Melt butter in frying pan and saute oysters until they are golden brown on one side. Turn with spatula or pancake turner and brown on other side. Drain on absorbent paper and serve very hot with catsup or tartar sauce.

Crab Meat Sunday Night Supper Sandwiches.
(Serves 5)
1 13-ounce tin crab meat
5 slices white bread
1/4 pound Roquefort cheese
1/4 cup cream
1 head lettuce
1 15-ounce can pimento-stuffed olives
Toast bread on one side only. On untoasted side, place a generous covering of crab meat—flaked. Cover crab meat with Roquefort cheese—softened in cream. Broil lightly until cheese mixture has browned. Serve on lettuce and garnish with stuffed olives.

3. What is the origin of the bugle call, "Retreat"?
4. Who invented the zipper?
5. Which country is the largest in the world, and which has the largest population?
6. How many popes has England provided?
7. Why are not marionette shows popular with Mohammedans?
8. Were garnets ever used as bullets?

The Answers

1. Probably not less than 30,000 pounds per square inch.
2. Because of its unchangeableness, it is an old language and the most universal.
3. It is of very ancient origin and is one of the few known to have been used by the Crusaders.
4. The hookless fastener was invented by Whitcomb L. Judson in 1893.
5. Russia (8,144,228 square miles) is the largest country. China (over 400,000,000 people) has the greatest population.
6. England has provided only one pope, Nicholas Breakspear. As Adrian IV, he held office from 1154 to 1159.
7. Most Mohammedans will not produce a marionette show because, according to their teachings, those who make puppets and pretend they are living characters will be called upon to provide souls for them on Judgment day.
8. Garnets were used as bullets as late as 1892 by the Hanzas in their conflicts with the British troops on the Kashmir frontier. Garnets were believed to make better bullets than lead, because being of blood color, they were supposed to inflict a more deadly wound.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

"You have talked with Autumn about it?" asked Hector.

"A little—a very little—one night just after she came back," Bruce admitted.

"You came to that conclusion together, then?" Hector asked. "I hope you don't mind my questioning you in this way. It's scarcely good manners in a host."

"It can't make the slightest difference, Hector," Bruce replied. "I see no reason why you and I should stand on ceremony."

"Certainly not! Certainly not! Because of that, I mean to tell you the truth about that episode, if you can bear the telling of it."

Bruce bit meditatively at his under lip while his eyes studied Hector's face.

"I'm of age, Hector," he said. "I guess I can stand hearing it—if you can tell it."

The old man drained his glass and set it on the table. "Then—listen until I'm quite through with it," he said.

Bruce felt ridiculously like a child who was about to be told the facts of life for the first time. But in spite of his mildly derisive mood, the piquant articulateness of Hector's ancient furniture and clocks and silver and porcelain gave him a strangely warm feeling of receptivity. However shocking Hector's disclosures were to be, it seemed true to him now at least—whether or not the mellow personality of the room had hypnotized him—that the past was the past, yesterday flowing back into the Renaissance, into the Middle Ages, into the lush glow of prehistoric times, sealed and separate from today.

Three clocks, in various shadowed recesses of the room, struck eleven. Bruce had heard all of Hector's story, and the two men had sat for minutes without speaking a word.

Hector got up from his chair, looked briefly at the youthful figure seated across from him, elbows propped on knees, head resting on hands, and poured out two more drinks of brandy.

"A night-cap, my boy," Hector said sturdily, as he offered the glass to Bruce.

Bruce came suddenly out of his reverie, and took the glass from Hector, than sat for a moment staring into the sparkling liquor.

"How much of this does Autumn know?" he asked.

"Everything I have told you," Hector replied.

"I see," Bruce said quietly. "Did you tell her?"

"Jarvis Dean told her—one night—soon after she came back."

"You don't happen to remember—about what night that was?"

Hector thought for a moment. "Not very clearly. She called here the next morning—I think—on her way to visit the Parrs."

"That was on her first visit, wasn't it?"

"I believe it was," Hector told him.

"It must have been," Bruce said. "It just about killed the girl, I guess."

Hector looked at him for a moment. "Why do you think she has been playing the fool ever since?"

Bruce tossed off the brandy and set his glass aside. "It's a crazy world," he said. "One night—only a week ago—I learned how it feels to want to kill a man."

Old Hector, standing above him, raised his eyebrows. A light seemed to dawn in his eyes and he smiled whimsically down upon the roughly tousled head of his guest.

"That was good for your soul, my boy," he observed. "You learned something that ought to mean much to you in the future."

Later, when Bruce got into his car, Hector stood within the little, cow-like porch of his abode and noted that the Milky Way was a pearly bridge built from mountain top to dark mountain top. Bruce called a good night and Hector waved a response. And as the car sped away he looked up at the sky again and thought how much younger the stars had been when he was young.

CHAPTER XIV

Autumn walked across the grounds to the Willmar cottage, her wide-brimmed leghorn hat in her hand, the light, warm wind blowing the skirt of her white organdie dress into a billow about her. As she approached the cottage, three children rose from the field of white daisies that grew in the hollow between the Castle and the foreman's lodge. The Willmar brood—Dickie, Simmy and Laura—started toward her with excited cries, their hands full of the white daisies they had been gathering. Trotting behind them came the ubiquitous Mo-mo, still possessed of his woolly tail, and bearing himself with considerably more dignity than when he had gone wandering with Simmy in the early Spring.

Autumn stooped and gathered the children into her arms, then turned and stretched her hand to rub Mo-mo's velvety nose.

Laura, the ten-year-old, pressed her blonde head close against Autumn's cheek and wound her arm tightly about her neck.

"I don't want you to go 'way, Autumn," she said, her voice full of pleading. "Mamma says we'll have to go away, too, if you go. We don't want to go."

Autumn's eyes darkened with the anxiety she had been feeling for the past week. "Nonsense, dear!" she protested. "You will stay here no matter where I go."

Dickie and Simmy broke into a duet of lament. "We can't have Mo-mo any more. The man says he's going to take Mo-mo."

"Oh, you dear sillies!" Autumn scolded them. "No man is going to take Mo-mo. Come along, let's go in and see mother."

With a warm little-by hand in each of hers, and with Laura walking sedately ahead of her and Mo-mo following closely behind, Autumn proceeded to the Willmar cottage.

It was baking day for Mrs. Willmar. As Autumn entered the kitchen with the children, the woman turned from the table where she had been rolling out cookie pastry. The troubled look in her eyes changed swiftly to a resolute smile as she dusted the flour from her hands.

"Good morning, Miss Autumn," she said, brushing a loose strand of pale hair back from her warm brow. "My goodness, you young ones shouldn't hang on Miss Autumn's dress that way! Don't let them do it. Come away, Dickie—your hands are a sight!"

Autumn laughed and ruffled Dickie's hair. "Hands and dresses can be washed, can't they, Dickie?" she said.

Mo-mo's hoofs clattered across the kitchen floor to a basket of vegetables that stood in one corner.

"Simmy—look after Mo-mo!" Mrs. Willmar sighed wearily, and wiped her face with her apron. "If you children can't mind that lamb he'll have to be kept outside. He's getting too big to be in the house, anyhow."

When the children had lugged the sheep out of the house and had gone romping into the yard, Autumn seated herself beside the kitchen table and Mrs. Willmar went on cutting out the cookies with the cover of a baking-powder can.

"Tom says you'll be leaving us soon again, Miss Autumn," she said quietly.

"Not for another two weeks or so," Autumn told her. "There is a lot to do with straightening everything up in a place like this."

"It just about killed the girl, I guess."

"Ah, dear! I don't know what we're going to do!"

Autumn glanced quickly at her and saddened. Tom Willmar's wife was a wistful-eyed little woman who had won her way back to health when she had come to live here ten years ago. The Dean ranch had meant life itself to her. And now—the fear of being ousted from her contentment and her modest security haunted her eyes.

"I've been wanting to talk to you about that, Mrs. Willmar," Autumn said gently.

The woman turned her face toward her in an utter hopelessness that wrung Autumn's heart.

"Talking about it won't change anything, I'm afraid, Miss Autumn," she replied resignedly. "Snyder was talking to Tom last night in town. He's a hard man, that Snyder."

"What was he saying, Mrs. Willmar?" Autumn asked.

"Tom told him he'd like to stay on here—it's been home to us for over ten years now. But Snyder says his clients, as he calls them, have plans of their own and there won't be any more place for us here."

Autumn clasped her hands in her lap. For days, ever since the evening of her last conference with Snyder and the men who were considering the purchase of the ranch with all its stock and equipment, her mind had dwelt almost constantly upon the Willmars, and Hannah, and poor old Absalom Peek, and the others who had given their years of faithful service to Jarvis Dean. At the outset of her negotiations with Snyder, Autumn had supposed that her father's old dependents would remain where they were and go about their work as they had always done, Hannah, of course, would have to be looked after, but Autumn had already resolved to take her along with her and make her remaining years as comfortable as she could in the service of Aunt Flo. Snyder had been anxious to complete the sale without delay and in a manner that would be quite satisfactory to both parties to the transfer. When Autumn had expressed her wish that the staff should remain to carry on the work, Snyder had been unwilling to commit himself. His clients, of course, would have plans of their own. He would do what he could, certainly, to bring them to accept her suggestion. In the end, Autumn had refused to put her name to anything until the point was satisfactorily settled. The transaction had been delayed—and Snyder had been annoyed.

Autumn looked at the pitifully brave smile on the face of Mrs. Willmar. This little woman was only one of that small community of souls who, with the toil of their hands and the unquestioning courage of their spirits, had brought richness and well-being to this valley. And now that community was to be disrupted, flagrantly, ruthlessly, with no thought of the injustice that was being done to these humble people whose loyalty to Jarvis Dean was no part of the bargain that Snyder was making. In that brief moment Autumn looked inward upon herself and saw that in her pampered life she had taken these honest folk for granted, just as carelessly she had taken for granted the substantial revenue from her father's estate. Here was a heritage from the past which she had not recognized.

"I know, Mrs. Willmar," Autumn said at last. "Mr. Snyder is being very difficult about it—though, of course, he is not altogether free to do as he chooses. He must meet the wishes of his clients. But they will never find anyone better than Tom to manage this place. I have told them so."

"There's precious little comes of telling people what they don't want to hear, Miss Autumn," Mrs. Willmar replied.

"But I don't want you to worry. If the worst comes to the worst, I shall see to it that you and Tom have a good position before I leave."

Mrs. Willmar had placed the cookies in a pan and turned now to put them into the oven. When she straightened again, she looked at Autumn with a small, sad smile.

"That's awfully kind of you, Miss Autumn," she said. "But you shouldn't trouble yourself about us, really. We shall get along—somehow. And it isn't so much a question of where we'll go as it is—just our leaving here. The Laird was always too kind to us, I guess. He—he spoiled us. No other place will ever seem like home to me. You see, I got my health back here—and my two youngest were born in this cottage. It makes a kind of difference—to know that we're leaving home."

Leaving home! The words cut across Autumn's heart with a cruel impetus. The woman could never guess what they meant to her, of course.

"Oh, Mrs. Willmar!" she cried. "If you only knew how—how terribly I understand!"

She was on the point of saying more, but suddenly, utterly bewildered by the complexities of her own feelings, she got up and went to the little woman and threw an arm impulsively about her shoulders.

"I've talked too much," Mrs. Willmar said, the tears starting to her eyes.

"I'm glad you have," Autumn said quickly. "But I don't want you to worry about it any more. I know it will work out, somehow, for the best."

There was little comfort in that, Autumn thought, but words were so futile, after all.

Mrs. Willmar hastily dabbed at her eyes. "I'm behaving badly, I'm afraid, Miss Autumn," she said brokenly. "I've no right to carry on this way. It's not proper, at all."

"Proper, fiddlesticks!" Autumn replied. She turned suddenly and looked out of the door where the children and Mo-mo were at some game in the yard. "I'll have to run along now, Mrs. Willmar." She opened the door and then looked back at the foreman's wife. "Those cookies smell awfully good. Do you suppose you could have one of the children sneak some of them past Hannah for me?"

Mrs. Willmar smiled. "We might try," she said.

A little later, when Autumn slipped in through a side door of the Castle, she surprised Hannah in the small sitting room in the act of wiping her eyes with the corner of a dust cloth. Hannah straightened severely and contrived a cheery smile which in no wise deceived Autumn.

"Hannah!" she reproved. "What's the use of carrying on like this?"

Hannah flicked the cloth indignantly over the rungs of a chair. "Who is carrying on? Not me!" she denied vigorously.

Autumn gave her a narrow look, then went into the drawing room where she seated herself at the piano, thinking to break the heavy enchantment of the house with the sound of the melodies she loved best. But after a random bar or two her hands fell dismally away from the keys and she stared from the windows into the garden, her spirits sinking under the burden that had lain upon her for almost a week.

Uppermost in her mind, above all the questions that arose out of her perplexity, was one thought that bore constantly upon her mind. Hector Cardigan had told her about the evening Bruce had spent with him, when he had unfolded the past, withholding nothing of the story of Geoffrey Landon and Millicent Dean. Autumn had lived through four days of unspeakable suspense, hoping for some gesture from Bruce, some sign of his relenting toward her. At last, in utter despair of ever hearing from him, she had turned her mind toward preparations for her departure. Her resolution to leave all behind her and begin life anew might be both cowardly and selfish, but to her defeated spirit there seemed no

Late in the afternoon, when it seemed no longer possible to cope with her problems, Autumn went to the rose garden to spend an hour with her own thoughts among her mother's flowers. She had been there only a few moments when Hannah called to her from the house.

"You're wanted on the telephone, Miss Autumn," Hannah told her as she came up the porch steps.

"Is it Mr. Snyder?" Autumn asked, with the ever-recurring, breath-taking hope that this, at last, might be Bruce calling.

"I don't know. It didn't sound like him—though I don't hear like I once could."

Autumn went to the telephone and picked up the receiver. The voice was Florian Parr's. He had just come back from his business trip to Vancouver and insisted on Autumn's returning with him to Kelowna. He had talked with Linda on the telephone, he said, and it was her fervent wish to have Autumn down for a day or two so that she might meet Linda's new fiancé. Besides, Linda was planning to go to Europe on her honeymoon. There would be plans to discuss with Autumn.

"I'd love it, Florian," Autumn said impulsively, glad at the prospect of any relief from the depression that had weighed upon her all day. "I'll be ready when you get here. Hurry!"

"Right-o, old thing!" Florian chimed back. "You won't be able to see me for dust once I get started. I have a few things to do yet before I leave, but you can count on me in—make about an hour and a half, say. How's that?"

"The sooner the better," Autumn told him. "I've had a terrible day of it, one way or another. I'm dying to talk to someone."

"And I'm dying to talk to you," he replied. "I'm the original old die-hard, Autumn."

She left the telephone with a sudden feeling of relief. Florian was a good sort, after all.

After telling Hannah her plans to go to Kelowna for a couple of days, Autumn hurried upstairs, took a refreshing cold shower, and proceeded to dress with an attentiveness to her appearance which had, in times past, helped to brace her flagging morale.

Presently she stood back from her pier glass and surveyed herself. The past few weeks had taken their toll; her eyes looked frightened and too large in the hollow pallor of her face; the backward clustering of her hair seemed too heavy for her head. And this severely tailored suit of white linen, smart though it was with its mannish silk blouse, gave her an almost ascetic look. Florian would have a shock when he saw her, she reflected indifferently. But the wonder that thrust sharply into the background of her thought was what Bruce might think if he came face to face with her now.

First Prince of Wales

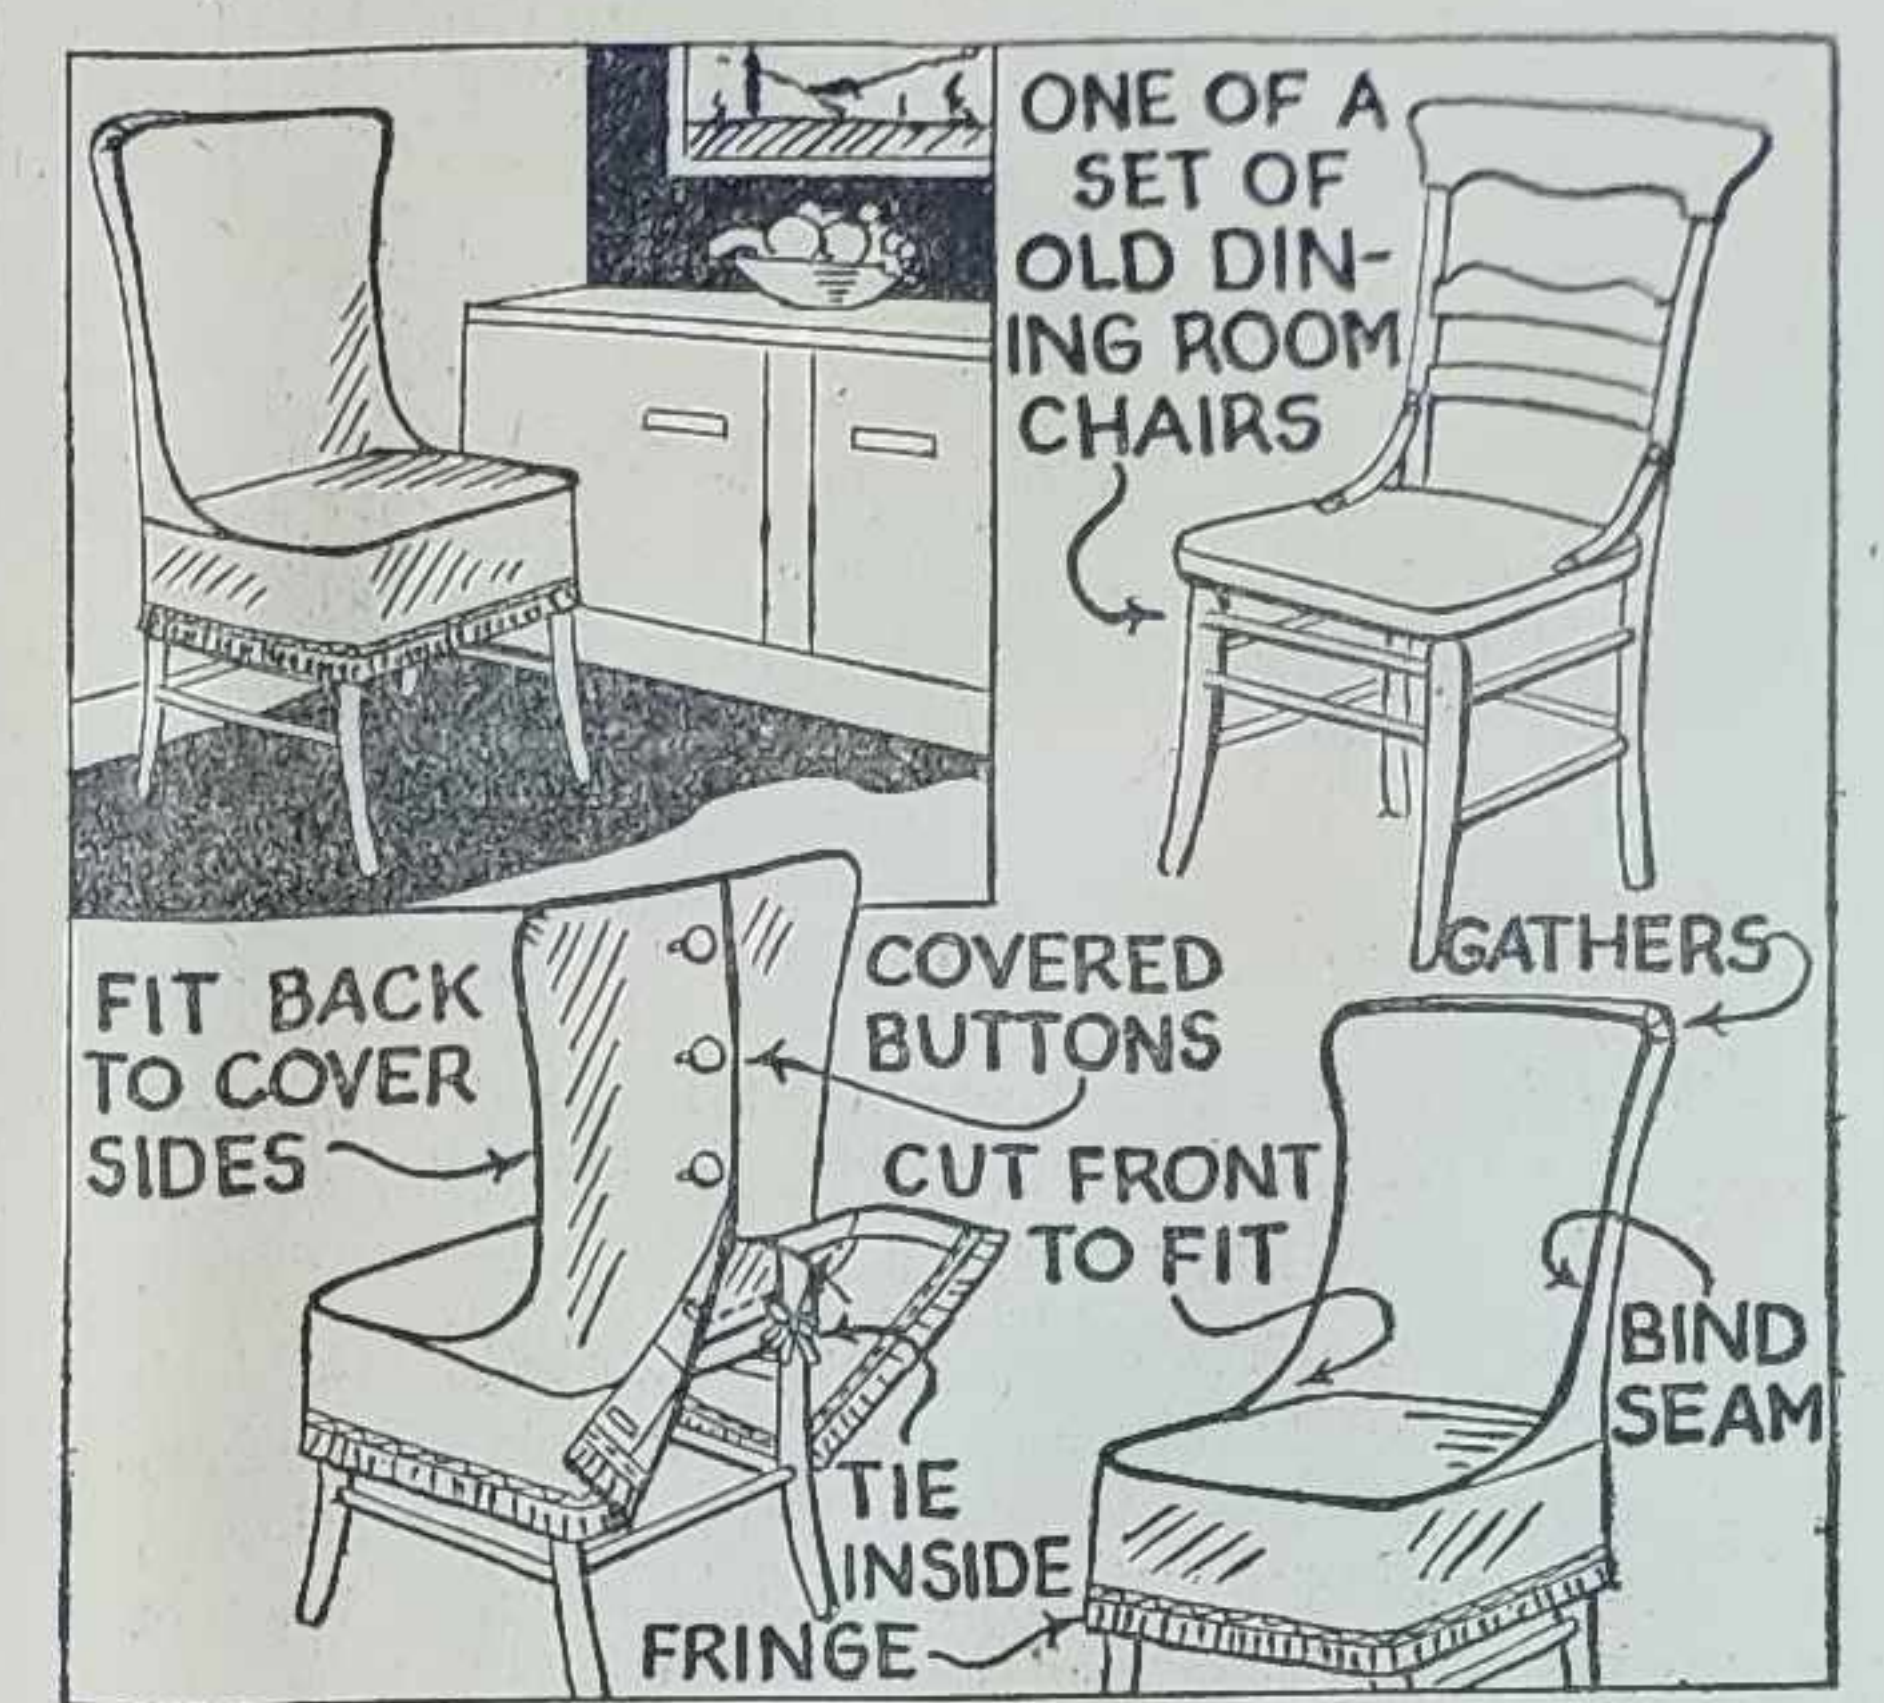

Named 600 Years Ago

Since the title prince of Wales was created by Edward I, in the year 1301, for his eldest son, there have been 20 princes of Wales, including the men who afterward became Edward VII, George V and Edward VIII. The late George V became prince of Wales when his father succeeded to the throne in 1901. The title may be bestowed on the eldest surviving son of the monarch, or on his grandson if he is the nearest heir. It is not inherited but is extinguished when the holder of the title becomes king or if he dies before the ruler.

Wales was ruled by Welsh princes from the Tenth to the Thirteenth century. The last of these was Llewelyn, who was compelled to submit to Edward I in 1277. On Llewelyn's death in 1282 the title ceased but Edward revived it for his eldest surviving son and heir, later Edward II. According to legend, King Edward I in conquering Wales promised the people that if they ceased resistance he would give them a native-born prince who could not speak a word of English. Two years after Llewelyn's death, this son of Edward I was born in Carnarvon in Wales. It was not until 1301, however, that the title was bestowed on him and by that time he could certainly speak English.

New dignity for set of old chairs.

ANY dining room may be made fresh and smart with built-in cupboards, a little paint and inexpensive curtains. But what may be done to bring a set of outmoded chairs up-to-date? The one sketched at the upper right is typical of many that are substantial and sturdy though scarred by long use. All that they need is an up-to-date frock to make them perfectly at home in that modern dining room.

If your chairs do not have the supports shown at the sides of the seat they will be even easier to slip-cover. This cover is of medium blue cotton rep with darker blue for the bias binding and the cotton fringe around the bottom. Large button moulds are covered with the slip cover material for the button-up-the-back opening. If you are not expert at making bound buttonholes, snaps may be used under the buttons. The narrow ties sewn to the corners of the inside of the seat cover hold it neatly in place.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book No. 3 contains six other interesting ways to give slip covers with step-by-step directions. There are 32 pages of fascinating ideas: Spoon sleeves; braided rugs; crazy-quilt quilts; many embroidery designs with numerous stitches illustrated. AROUND THE HOUSE

Wrinkled hands from the family wash can be made smooth by washing in water to which a little vinegar has been added.

Care of House Plants.—Keep the temperature of the room in which house plants are grown at 60 or 65 degrees. They do not thrive in a room that is too warm.

Ferns grown in the house will have a rich green color if a teaspoon of household ammonia is added in a quart of water and poured over the ferns once or twice a month.

Tasty Apple Sauce.—Add one-eighth teaspoon of cream of tartar to cinnamon and sugar used in apple sauce. It gives it a delicious flavor.

Washing Pearl-Handled Knives.—Never allow bone or pearl-handled knives to soak in dish water. Dip the blades into hot, soapy water, then dry them well.

Starching Curtains.—If curtains are thoroughly dried before being starched they will keep clean longer.

For a sweet muffin to serve with hot beverages, try adding a fourth of a cup each of chopped candied orange peel and candied pineapple to your regular muffin recipe. Or try using a fourth of a cup of chopped dates and a third-cup of broken pecans. A third combination is a fourth-cup each of citron and figs.

How does she learn about new and delicious entrees and desserts that surprise and delight her family? Where does she discover those subtleties of dress and make-up that a man appreciates but never understands?

Why, she reads the advertisements. She is a consistent, thoughtful reader of advertisements, because she has found that she can believe them—and profit thereby. Overlooking the advertisements would be depriving herself of data continuously useful in her job of Purchasing Agent to the Family.

For that matter, watch a wise man buy a car or a suit or an insurance policy. Nota bad shopper himself! He reads advertisements, too!

A VEILED LADY...

Brings comfort and returning courage to Dr. David Jebb, famed surgeon, when he wakes to find himself alone in a strange land, his memory of preceding events a complete blank.

Cursed with an overpowering desire for drink, David Jebb knows he has shirked a grave responsibility in succumbing to temptation. A little girl, placed temporarily in his charge, has disappeared. All because he could not resist the lure he knew would sooner or later wreck his life.

Help comes to him at an opportune time. The veiled lady, gentle and kind, looks after him, restoring his health and aiding him in his search for his missing charge.

David grows to love his mysterious benefactor, but knows he will again fall victim to his desires. There is only one way out—he must leave the veiled lady, knowing that to remain would cause only unhappiness.

He finds, however, that he is powerless to shape the course of his destiny. A stronger force prevails, and David Jebb finds happiness and contentment.

You'll like "The Gift Wife." It's one of Rupert Hughes' greatest stories!

LEGAL DRIVING THRU STREET CAR ZONE

ILLEGAL DRIVING THRU STREET CAR ZONE

Many traffic accidents arise when the driver fails to observe the proper rules governing the right of way. These illustrations are published to help new drivers prepare for the examinations required by the Motor Vehicle Division before licenses are granted. Under the new driver's license regulations prescribed by the Secretary of State. (MVD-4)

NEWS AND VIEWS

of Washington Co. and Its Schools
—by—
M. T. BUCKLEY
County Superintendent of Schools

AS WE SEE OURSELVES

We visited two teachers recently in the South Side school of Hartford. One was teaching geography. The children got interested in making contributions from books read by them. In the old day the teacher would stop contributions of that nature and hold the pupils to the text. This teacher was too wise to insist on such a procedure and for half an hour they lived geography happily and effectively.

The other made available to us the outcome of work in art. Parents ought to take an hour off to visit this school. It will help you, encourage the children, and it will be appreciated by the faculty.

We have on our desk the report made by Mrs. Williams, the supervising teacher, on her visit to the Washington school. One sentence in that report is significant: "There is quality in the work done in this school."

THE FIRST CLIPPER SHIPS

It is ninety years ago. We are standing in the harbor of one of New England's shipping ports. Everybody is excited for "Flying Cloud" is returning home after a flying trip around Cape Horn to San Francisco. She is a beautiful, narrow, long boat shaped to cut the water like a knife, and powered with sails ten stories high. It takes eighty-nine days to make the trip. These boats were the first clipper ships. Since then man has taken silks, fabrics, light spars, thin wires, steel, gas, and, with great courage, made boats with wings that cut through the air at 200 miles an hour.

The development of transportation from the dugout of the Stone Age to the Electrical Age is full of romance. It tells the story of how the world grows smaller. It ought to tell another story of how the world grows better. Does it?

CITIZENSHIP TRAINING

Many teachers have conferred with us relative to the teaching of citizenship. While citizenship has been taught for a long time in the schools a new approach is being made at this time. The framework of our government was emphasized in the past, while the goal now seems to be a development of faith in the American way of living. We have accepted democracy in about the same way that we have accepted good roads. We did not fully develop the sacrifices that were made in securing it. Such teaching is indolent teaching. From the first grade through the high school the business of the teacher "is to lead our children to understand, to love, to appreciate their country her democratic form of government her ideals and to actively cherish and support this democratic heritage."

THE LIVING CHILD

Did you ever watch children going to school? What energy, originality and wealth of interest they display. None of them go to school as prosaically as a business man goes to his office. No, on their way the act of going is an excuse for doing something else. One is walking a railway, another is bouncing a ball, two are wrestling. Never a walk, always a run. They have a mania for action, these children of the highways.

We get that restless active boy into a school room and we lay him out like a cadaver to dissect and analyze. We know a lot about eye-movements and beginning reading and that thing called intelligence. We know a lot about the "subject" of education, but we have forgotten its object—the whole child.

Dairying, as practiced by men of foresight, good judgment and enterprising spirit, has not only been productive of wealth, but has conserved and developed in many instances our natural resources.

County Agent Notes

FIRST SERIES OF LAND USE MEETINGS HELD

The first series of Community Committee Land Use Planning meetings for Washington county were completed during the past week with the holding of meetings by the Polk, Jackson and Germantown, Erin and Richfield township committees.

The committee members from the above townships are the following:

- Polk township—
Jacob Bartelt, R. 1, Jackson.
Ernest Reitzel, R. 2, Cedarburg.
Paul Liesener, Jackson.
- Germantown township—
Ed. Gettelman, Germantown.
Jacob Leicht, Germantown.
Jacob B. Bast, R. 1, Rockfield.
Arthur Schaezel, Germantown.
Wm. Kuhn, Rockfield.
- Folk township—
George C. Nehm, R. 1, Slinger.
Christ. Hoffmann, R. 1, Slinger.
Everett Schubert, R. 1, Slinger.
Fred Binner, R. 4, West Bend.

- Erin township—
Philip Burg, R. 1, Colgate.
John Flynn, R. 1, Hartford.
Frank Garvey, R. 1, Hartford.
A. J. Cleary, R. 1, Hartford.
Thos. J. Manning, R. 1, Hartford.
Albert Lofey, R. 1, Hartford.

- Richfield—
George Roebel, Hubertus.
John Youngbauer, Colgate.
Elmer Ebeling, R. 1, Richfield.
Walter Boetner, Richfield.
Robert Laubenhelm, Richfield.
- Farmers and farm leaders, the agricultural extension service and the United States Department of Agriculture have a cooperative interest in land use planning. This is especially true of those activities which enable local people to participate in public programs designed to secure better rural land use and more stabilized, balanced agriculture. To accomplish these objectives the planning programs must be applied to the needs, characteristics, and land use problems of each community. This information can best be supplied by those living within a given community, hence the need for the opinions and suggestions of community committees whose judgments should prove practical and constructive.

WISCONSIN HOLSTEIN BREEDERS TO MEET FEB. 15 AND 16.

Washington county Holstein-Friesian breeders will want to attend the annual meeting of their state association to be held at Waushara on Thursday and Friday, February 15 and 16. The banquet will be held on Thursday evening, February 15. A very good program for the two days' meeting has been prepared. If you are a breeder of Holstein cattle, you will want to attend this meeting.

ANNOUNCE NEW HYBRID OAT AT FARMERS' WEEK (Madison)

Members of the Wisconsin Experiment association, attending the annual meeting of the organization at Madison, February 1, were introduced to a new hybrid oats which will be available to them in 1911.

E. D. Holden, secretary of the association, reports that the new variety, developed by H. L. Shands and other members of the agronomy staff at the College of Agriculture, in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture, possesses unusual qualities of sturdiness and rust resistance. He also reports that association members will discuss new ways of supplying foundation seed and of certifying seed stock in getting the new oat started on its career in the state.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LABINE

Britain Loses World Sympathy Through Harsh War Measures; U. S., Japan Protest Sea Action

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

LINLITHGOW CRAIGIE LOTHIAN

There is trouble in the Lowlands and Rumania, too.

GREAT BRITAIN: U. S. Trouble

IF U. S. public opinion once favored the British 'against Germany, it had shifted by late January until most Americans looked with equal disdain on both sides.

ambassador Sir Robert L. Craigie a note demanding amends, calling the incident an "unfriendly act" and warning that repetition would aggravate Japan's anti-British sentiment.

Lowland Trouble

WHEN Winston Churchill made a speech demanding that Netherlands and Belgium join the allies in fighting Germany, the press and government of these countries shouted angrily.

Indian Trouble

MOHANDAS K. GANDHI'S independence demands for India broke into print when Britain began demanding war assistance from the empire.

But those things are behind us. There is confronting us, now, today, a momentous question.

Japanese Trouble

ALREADY irked because Britain has been friendly with China's "rebel" Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, Japan's ire was heightened when a British warship stopped a Japanese passenger vessel in the Pacific.

Moreover, we cannot be blind to the fact that the question of aid to Finland comprehends a decision wherein domestic matters are just as vital as those involved in the international relationship concerned.

Rumanian Trouble

KING CAROL of Rumania has remained cautiously neutral despite British wooing. But in mid-January, when German troops were reported occupying the southern part of Russian Poland the British struck again, confident Carol would accept their aid gratefully.

POLITICS: Break

"I am convinced that, with the conditions now confronting the nation and the satisfaction now permeating the minds of the people, his candidacy would result in ignominious defeat."

Thus, before his United Mine Workers convention at Columbus, did C. I. O. President John L. Lewis score Franklin Roosevelt.

Next day he explained his speech: "I intended (it) to be a distinct jar to professional politicians in the Democratic and Republican parties. I intended it to serve notice that labor was not to be taken for granted."

JAPAN: Treaty Lapses

In a single week the Tokyo government found its relations with two major nations approaching the crisis point. The English were persona non grata for having searched Japanese records (See GREAT BRITAIN).

American Involvement in War Is Crux of Question

Succinctly stated, the question which lies in the background; the footpad that awaits an opportunity to slay unsuspecting innocents; the man-killer that must be watched for in American involvement in the current world war!

It is a situation so fraught with dangers to our future, as a nation, that almost anything can happen.

THE WARS: Russo-Finnish

Helsinki claimed 20,000 Soviet troops left when the Finns repulsed Russia's strongest invasion of the war northward of Lake Ladoga.

Allied-German

Only four days after Britain's destroyer Grenville was torpedoed with a loss of 81 men, the destroyer Exmouth went down in the North sea carrying 175 crewmen to the bottom.

Places Our Country at Forks of National Policy; Possible Involvement in Current War Seen as Great Peril; Other Nations Might Come Begging.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

William Bruckart

WASHINGTON.—The question of aid to valiant little Finland is a proposition that is getting right close to home. Whether we like it or not, it can hardly be denied any longer that the proposal to extend money help to the Finns has brought the United States to a fork in the road of national policy.

It is accepted as a fact that our sympathies as a nation and as individual human beings are with the Finns. There can be no question that almost all right-thinking persons hope that the butcher, Stalin, and his dastardly schemers, meet ultimate destruction.

Moreover, we cannot be blind to the fact that the question of aid to Finland comprehends a decision wherein domestic matters are just as vital as those involved in the international relationship concerned.

JAPAN: Treaty Lapses

NEUTRALITY: Winking

In New York, the Herald-Tribune gave its version of how the administration was "winking" at one form of neutrality violation.

And, further, does anyone hold the conviction for a minute that there would not be a veritable deluge of propaganda in this country in behalf of loans to Norway or Sweden or even England and France, once the ice is broken by help to Finland.

Sen. Johnson

What then becomes of the iron-clad Johnson act? That law, pushed through by Sen. Hiram Johnson, the California Republican, makes it impossible for any government to borrow money within the United States if that nation has not paid its war debts to the United States.

President Roosevelt, I believe, was a bit tricky in the way he presented the proposal for a Finnish loan to congress. At first, we writers were informed from mysterious sources that there was a drive under way at the Capitol that was to lead to a loan for Finland.

President Avoids an Open Frank Recommendation

Eventually, the situation was clarified. Mr. Roosevelt sent identical letters to the speaker of the house and the president of the senate, He called attention to American sympathy for the plight of the Finns. He indicated that the bulk of the people hoped that, if anything should happen to Stalin, it would be something of consequence.

What Mr. Roosevelt did on the proposal for a Finnish loan, therefore, was to say to congress, in effect: "I am for such a loan but the responsibility is yours and if it has a bad flareback or if it gets us into trouble, you will have to take the blame."

Distinction Between Selling Goods and Lending Money

It seems to me there is a distinction to be drawn between permitting the warring nations, or any of them, to come here and buy supplies and pay cash on the barrel-head for them, and the course that is not suggested. They buy them, pay for them, cart them away in their own ships that are manned by sailors of their own nationality.

Last Newsmen to See Borah Recalls How 'Lion of Idaho' Kept Mum in 1936 Campaign

Didn't Favor Landon, So He Played Ball With Home State Dems.

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
(Co-author, with Drew Pearson, of "The Washington Merry-Go-Round.")
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Wate just doesn't seem the same without Senator Borah.

He was the first leader I came to know intimately as a cub Washington reporter 15 years ago, and I saw him last the day before his fatal accident. I think I am the last newsmen he talked to.

It was late in the afternoon. I knew that the President's message on the Finnish loan was due the next day, and I dropped into Borah's office to get his views. Wrapped in an army blanket, he was lying on a couch, reading an article on trade treaties. He motioned me to a chair, which I pulled up near him. On the marble mantle directly over him was a striking photograph of himself which he liked very much.

Duty Came First.

Borah looked well, but frail, and recalling that during the Christmas holiday he had told me he was thinking of taking Mrs. Borah south, I said, "What about your trip?"

"I guess that's off, Robert," he replied. "Mrs. Borah won't stay if I don't, and I can't."

"Why not? Things aren't so active now. A few weeks of warm weather and sunshine would do you a lot of good."

"Yes, but I can't leave. Those trade treaties are up and I've got to be on hand to keep an eye on developments. It's a close fight and we can't take any chances. I would like a little rest, but I feel it's my duty to stay on the job and oppose this act."

"What about the Finnish loan?" I asked.

"That's a very distressing dilemma for me, Robert," he said. "My heart goes out to those gallant people, but at the same time I have grave misgivings about lending money to anyone in Europe. Once we let down the bars we can't foresee what it may lead to. We must keep out of that mess regardless of our personal sympathies."

Dilemma of 1936.

I remember another time when he was in a dilemma. It was in 1936.

That spring, at the age of 71 and for the first time in his long career, he decided to make a serious try for the presidency. There was considerable popular response, but the machine politicians were against him. He went to the Cleveland convention empty-handed—and he knew it. The night Herbert Hoover made his speech—which he secretly hoped would stampede the delegates—I countered Borah leaving his hotel. It was past midnight, hot and sticky.

HE WATCHED LANDON—Senator Borah waited for Alf Landon's campaign before "prejudging" him, but he later confided: "I am not for him."

"Come along, Robert, and walk with me," he said. "It's cooler out here."

So we walked about the deserted streets and he talked about Hoover, the convention, and Alf Landon.

Doubted Landon's Ability.

"They'll nominate Landon tomorrow," he said. "The stage is all set. Hoover tried to run away with the convention tonight, but they don't want any of him. It will be Landon and Knox, you mark my word."

"And then what are you going to do, Senator?"

"I don't know. I'll wait and see what Landon says. But what I'm wondering is what can he say. He knows nothing about national or foreign affairs. I am told he is a nice gentleman, but the country needs more than that in the White House these times. I don't want to prejudge Landon. I shall hear him out, but I have a strong hunch I will not support him."

He Didn't, Either!

Borah's premonition was right. Three months later I spent a day with him in Boise as he campaigned for his sixth senatorial term. We had a long talk that night in his room before he retired. I remarked that I hadn't heard him say a word during the day about Landon.

"And I don't intend to say anything about him," Borah replied quietly. "I am not for him."

"Are you for Roosevelt?"

"Well, Robert," he said, "I've got a lot of Democratic friends in Idaho and I think they know where I stand." And then with a gentle smile he added, "That's a pretty good news story, isn't it?"

It certainly was. It was the big scoop of the campaign.

Patent Office Kept Busy by Gadeteers

WASHINGTON.—Seven hundred human problems, most of them inconsequential, are solved every week at the United States patent office.

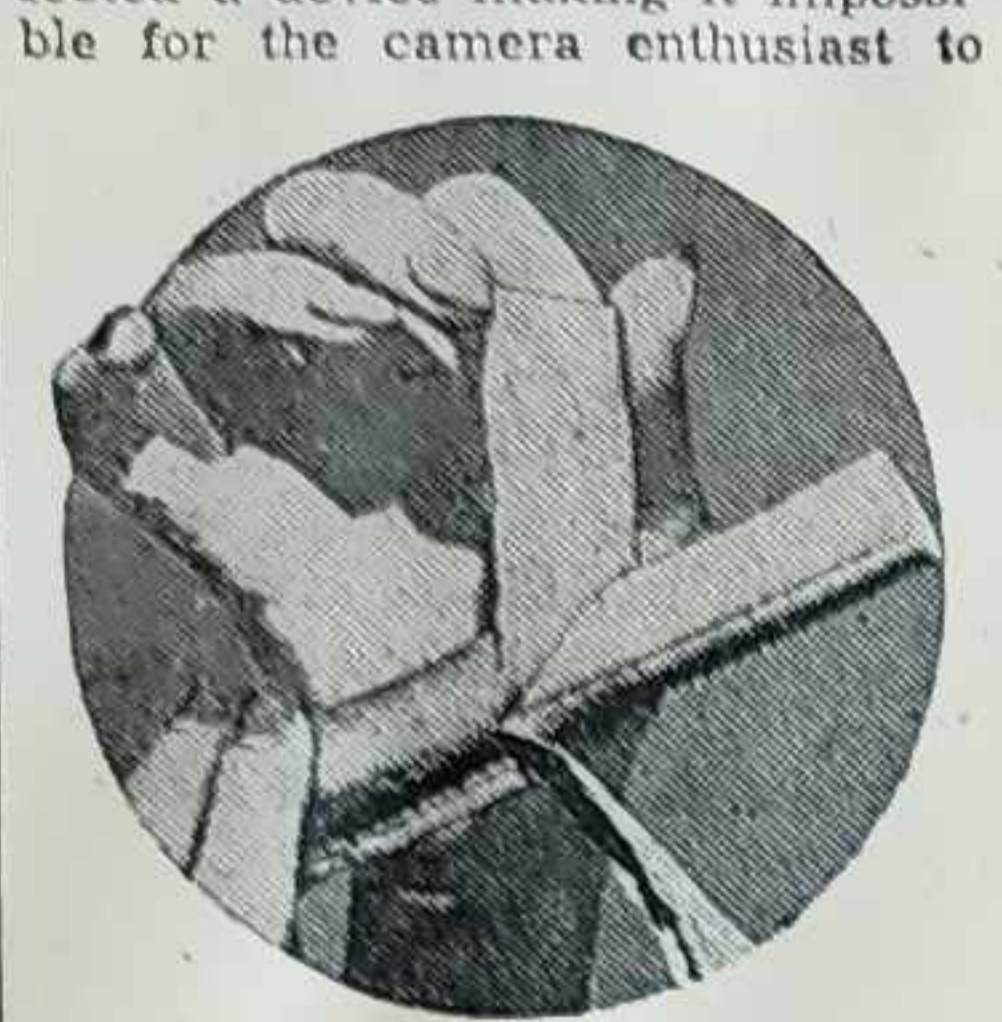

Inventions ranging from thumbless boxing gloves to fluorescent theater aisles continue pouring in to prove how wrong was the patent director who resigned 100 years ago because there wasn't anything left to invent.

If nothing else, it proves there's no slump in enterprise these days. The past year, for example, brought forth this collection:

At the University of California botanists discovered in the juice of milkweed an active substance that can tenderize meat.

A Philadelphian solved the problem of that first cigarette in the package with a strip of transparent film that tears off the seal, destroys the revenue stamps, opens the flaps and pulls out two cigarettes.

No Double Exposures.
An amateur photography fan perfected the device making it impossible for the camera enthusiast to take a second picture without winding the film—thus preventing a double exposure.

ZIPPER HOT DOG—The wienie has a perforated casing which operates on the zipper principle.

take a second picture without winding the film—thus preventing a double exposure.

Peter J. Gaylor of Elizabeth, N. J., developed a synthetic rubber invaluable for elastic threads in clothing because it does not deteriorate rapidly.

Many inventions, here and abroad, have made it easier and cheaper to wage war. Germany, for example, is treating mineral, vegetable and animal oils with an electrical discharge process that increases their viscosity. American chemists have discovered a less expensive—but just as deadly—way to make more poison gas.

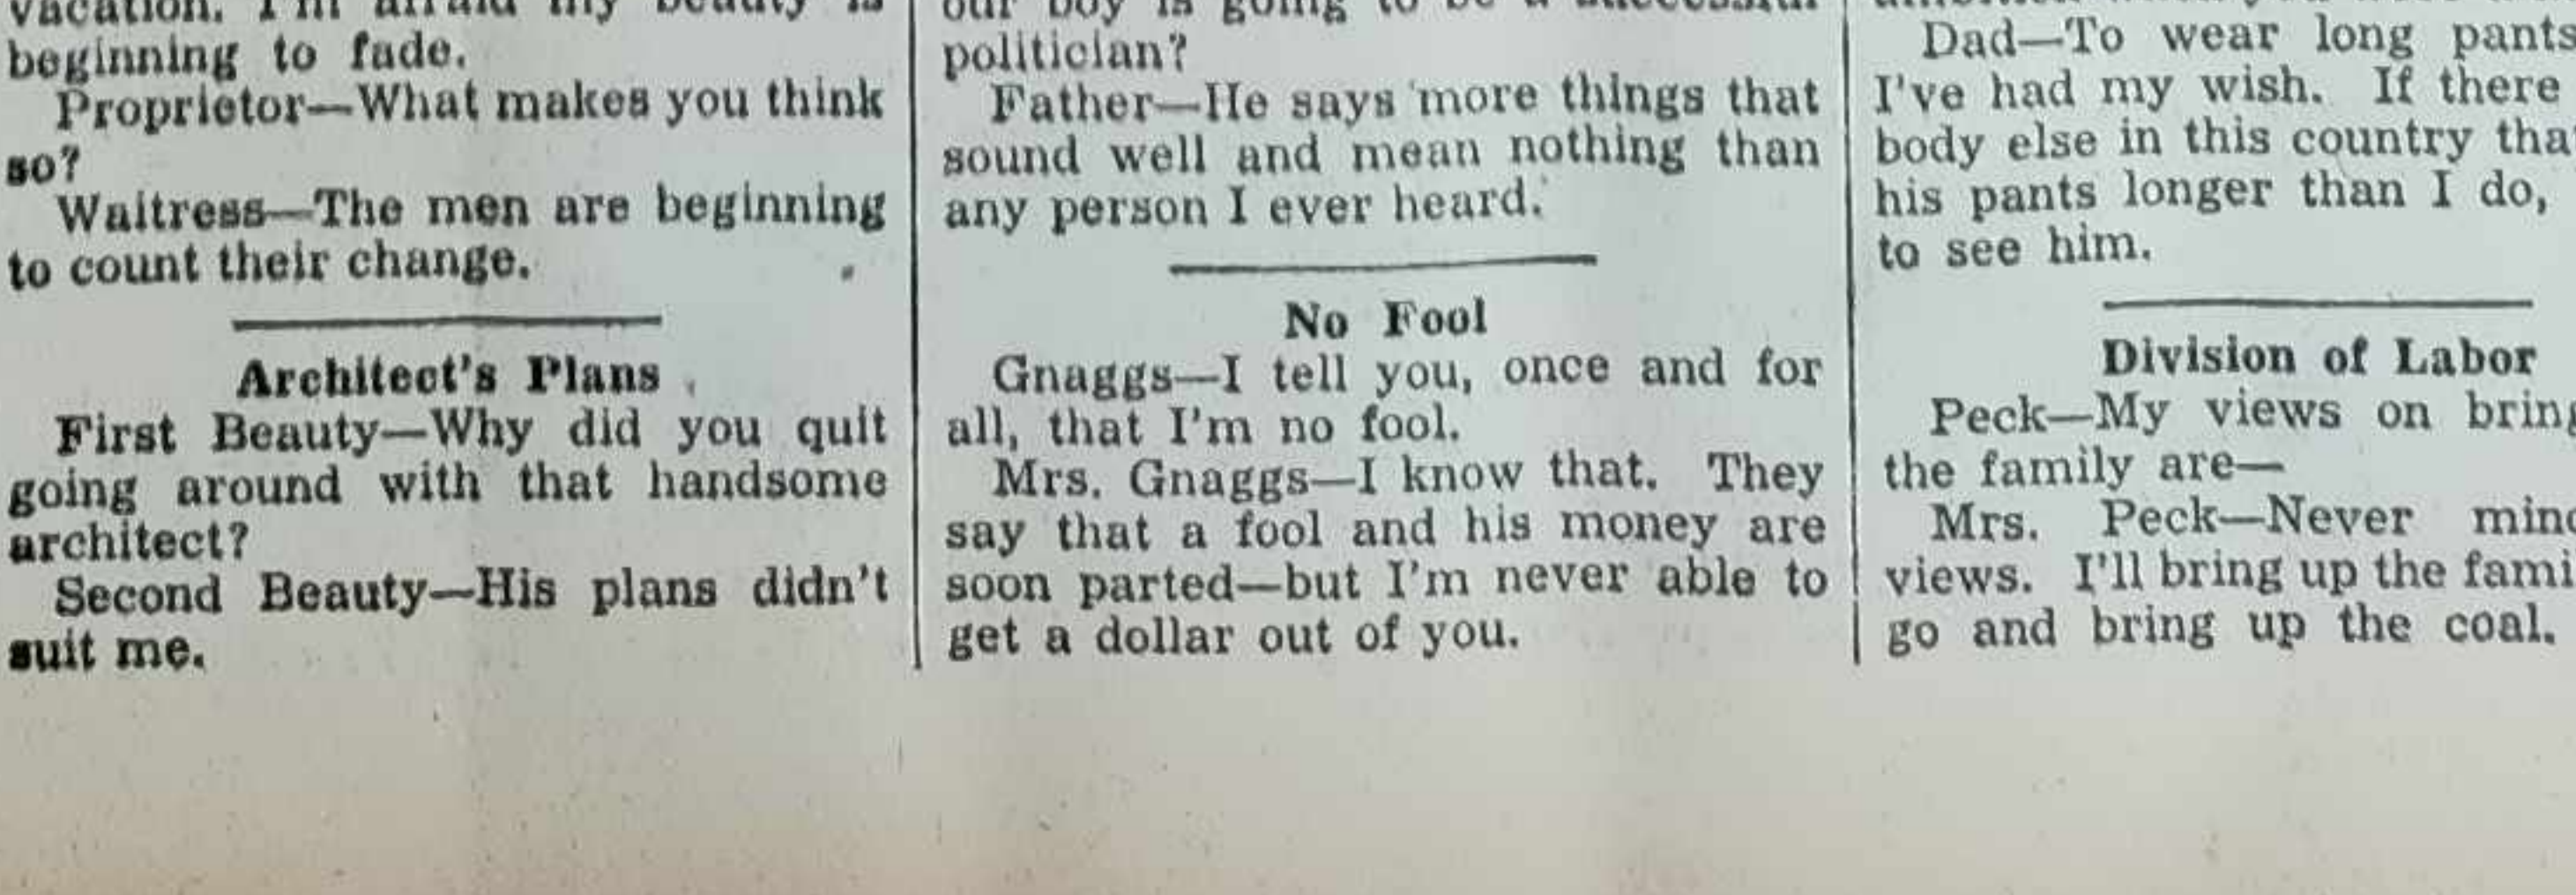

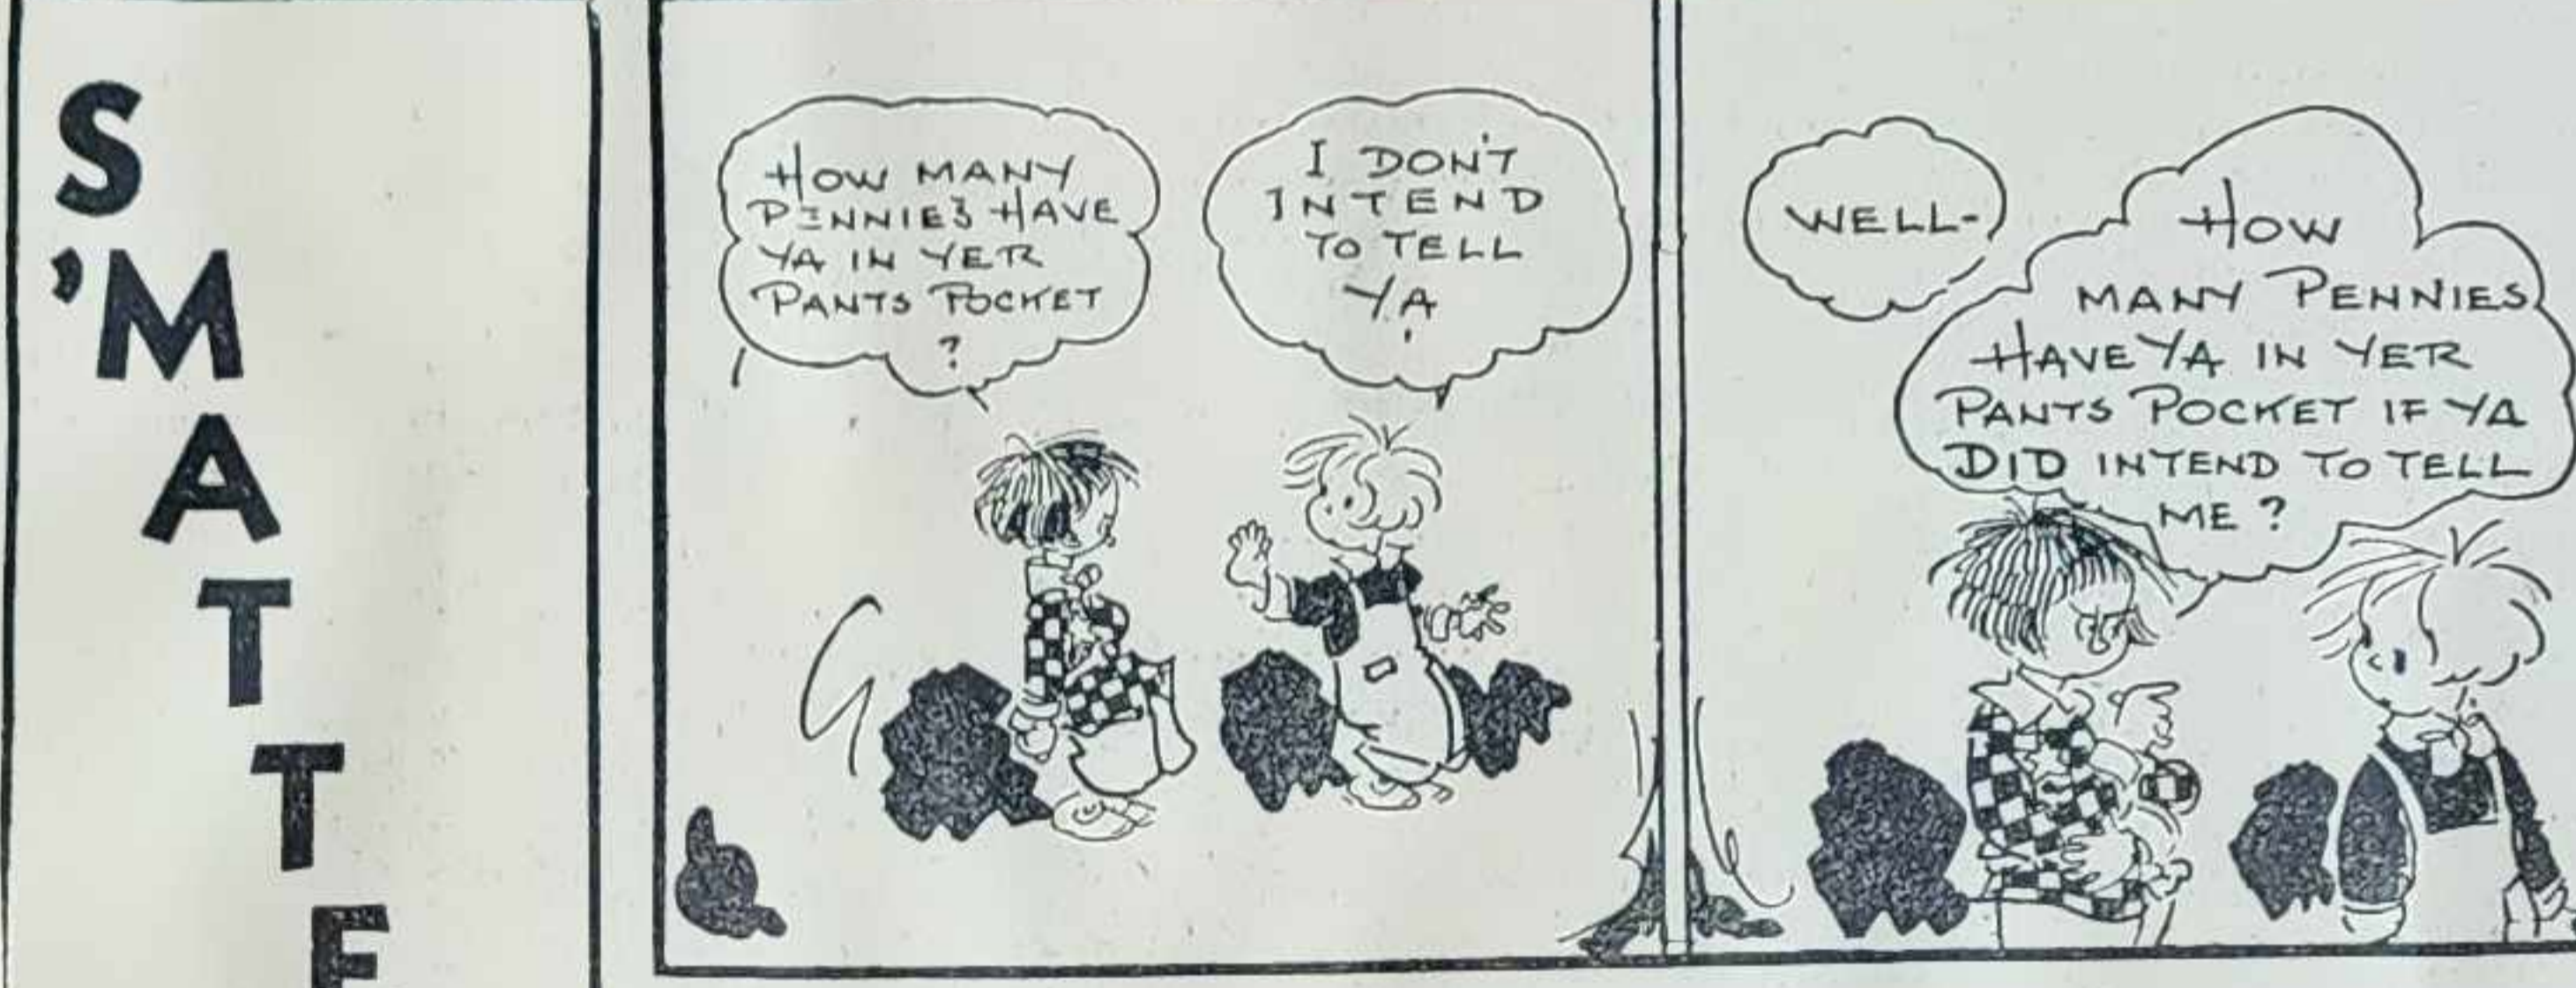

Another Invention Needed.

Some inventions are designed to soothe ruffled nerves. There's a new spring cap for tooth paste tubes, but nothing to make father squeeze it out from the bottom instead of the top. A drip-catching device has been invented for umbrellas, and somebody perfected a helical coil of wire which, as part of a cigarette holder, keeps ashes from falling on the rug.

There are two important developments in photography. One camera can expose standard film at a speed of 2,500 frames per second, enabling you to study the wing structure of houseflies or the action of a golf stick against a ball. On the more massive side, Prof. E. Newton Harvey of Princeton university has a

Events in the Lives of Little Men

Mannerisms Mark the Man—They All 'Perform' Off Guard

NEW YORK.—Al Smith jingles coins in his left pocket and the duke of Windsor straightens his necktie. Franklin D. Roosevelt jerks his head sideways.

Call them habits, mannerisms or just plain nervousness, but they're among the distinguishing features you've noticed when famous men make speeches or appear before the news-reel camera. Most of us, great or little, are thumb twiddlers, button twisters, arm swingers or fist clenchers in our forgetful moments.

"This is the Point."

A widely known Boston professor used to enter his classroom holding a short, well-sharpened pencil which he twirled as he talked.

"Now this," he would say at intervals, "is the point." Each time he would jab the pencil at the class, until his amused students finally made up sweepstakes on how many times he'd do it each hour.

The late William Jennings Bryan combined his mannerism with practicality. Before his platform appearances he would have someone bring an old-fashioned dishpan with a piece of ice to the rostrum. As his fiery speech-making warmed him, Bryan would run the palm of his hand over the ice, then over his forehead. To break this routine he would occasionally step to the front of the platform, weaving back and forth while the audience gasped for fear he would topple into the front row.

A Monocle Swinger.

Bertha Wells of Boston, who was formerly in Chautauqua work with Bryan, recalls the platform gestures of many other speakers. Dudley Crafts Watson, director of music at the Chicago art museum, went through a repeated routine of taking off his monocle, swinging it around in his hand and replacing it to the eye.

"One woman speaker asked me for a handkerchief just before she went on," Miss Wells remembers. "All through her lecture she stood twisting it in her hands. When she returned it, the handkerchief looked like a cruller."

Sen. James Reed of Missouri used to have a habit of chewing tobacco in the courtroom, while Sen. David I. Walsh of Massachusetts can never speak without thrusting his left thumb into the corner of his trousers' pocket.

Psychologists who have watched such carryings-on from the spectators' seat don't believe it's necessarily a matter of nervousness. Sometimes the speakers are merely throwing off excess energy. Or, as one psychologist suggested, it may not be so much the energy or the audience as what the speaker had for dinner.

REMOTE CONTROL SMOKING—It keeps smoke out of your eyes, but you'll break your arm lighting a cigarette!

camera which snaps pictures two miles under the ocean. This gadget is a steel ball which resists terrific water pressure. It has two windows, one for the camera and the other for projecting a beam of light.

X-Rays 'Blow Up.'

Closely akin is the giant new X-ray projector which enlarges a standard chest plate up to the size of a regulation motion picture screen, thus allowing several hundred people to consult over the medical problem at hand.

There's a new type hypodermic needle in which the medicine is ejected by a charge of compressed air, but it probably hurts just as much those first few moments.

Two important automobile patents have been granted, the first to Henry Ford for an easily removable liner for motor car cylinders. It can be taken out with a screw-driver, contrasted with the powerful presses employed heretofore. Another patent covers an anti-skid device for autos running on icy pavement. A sharp-edged wheel is pressed against the ground by a strong spring fixed downward from the under side of the running board.

They're making airplane propellers now from a composite material made of light wood, hard wood, plastics and metal.

If none of these inventions catches your fancy, the patent office offers a scalloped-rim wrist watch for the blind, a streamlined baseball bat with a hollow-shell attachment, a gasoline tank for the rear mud-guard, a solo bridge playing device or a device to put wavy corrugations in the rims of pie. Take your choice!

Slip Is Dart-Fitted To Slenderize One

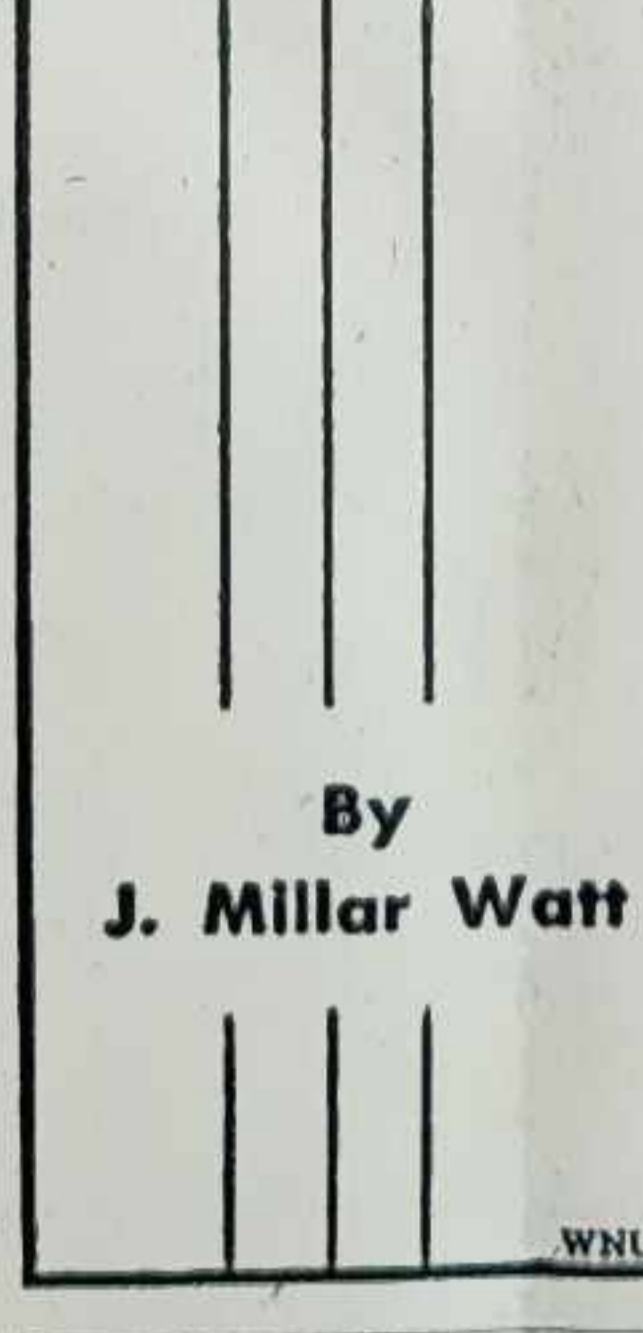

DESIGNED especially for large sizes, this slip (1821-B) assures a perfection of fit that you can't otherwise achieve. Not that it is difficult to make. In fact, it's very simple. But skillful designing has placed darts under the arms, to give ease and not a trace of looseness or bulkiness over the bust. Darts at the waistline mold it into your figure, a smooth silken sheathe beneath your fitted dresses. You can make it either strap style or with built-up shoulders. Pattern provides for both. You'll want a whole wardrobe of such slips, light and dark, and now's the time to make them, when you can get grand values in the fabric sales—luxurious pure dye satins and lingerie crepes. You can afford long-wearing luxury fabrics, when you make your own. Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1821-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Size 38 requires 2 1/2 yards of 39-inch material for built-up shoulders; 2 3/4 yards with straps; 1 yard ribbon for straps. For a pattern of this attractive model send 15 cents in coins, your name, address, style, number and size to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill.

Judge—You're wrong—I'm going to give you 30 days.

Fleeting Youth
Pretty Waitress—I must take a vacation. I'm afraid my beauty is beginning to fade.
Proprietor—What makes you think so?
Waitress—The men are beginning to count their change.

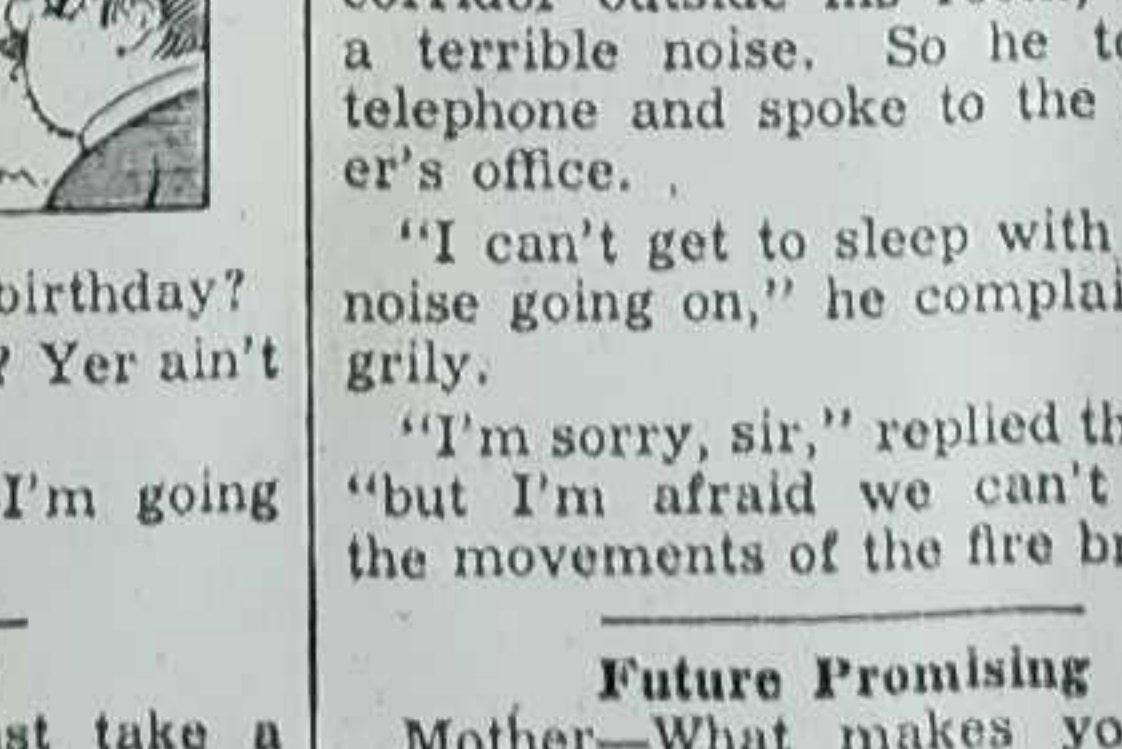

Architect's Plans
First Beauty—Why did you quit going around with that handsome architect?
Second Beauty—His plans didn't suit me.

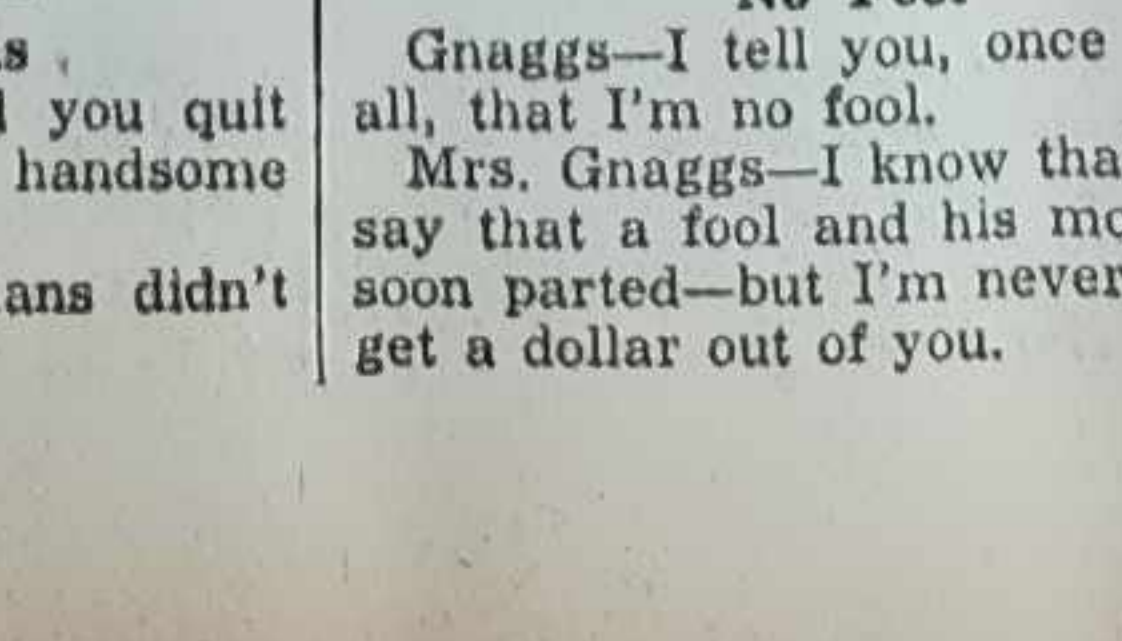

BEGGING?
WHO WAS BEGGING?

Horn—I've been on a toot!

No Jurisdiction
The hotel guest was thoroughly annoyed. People were running backward and forward along the corridor outside his room, making a terrible noise. So he took the telephone and spoke to the manager's office.
"I can't get to sleep with all this noise going on," he complained angrily.
"I'm sorry, sir," replied the clerk, "but I'm afraid we can't control the movements of the fire brigade."

Dad's Ambition
Son—Dad, what was your great ambition when you were a kid?
Dad—To wear long pants. And I've had my wish. If there is anybody else in this country that wears his pants longer than I do, I'd like to see him.

Division of Labor
Peck—My views on bringing up the family are—
Mrs. Peck—Never mind your views. I'll bring up the family. You go and bring up the coal.

CAN YOU IMAGINE

1. Lynes Fellenz sitting still in one place very long?
2. Lydie Belger not talking in study hall?
3. Kate Schaefer not worrying about fingerprints and Latin?
4. Mr. Rose forgetting to take the attendance?
5. Arleigh Ehnert not looking neat as a pin?
6. Ruth Wesenberg without lipstick?
7. Armin Opperman not blushing?
8. Three senior boys always agreeing to do what the teacher tells them?
9. All the juniors with their history finished? (That would be a miracle.)
10. Delbert Petermann not having fondness for the fair sex?
11. "Cisoo" Buckus as a snowman?
12. Buddy Naumann drinking cocoa with pepper in it?
13. The sun shining for two consecutive days?
14. Bob Schmidt causing any trouble in study hall? (We can't.)
15. The freshman girls giving facial?

WHO'S WHO

With "Eed" as his favorite expression, this freshman boy is the last of a line of students from one family all the rest of whom are in school also. He is short and has his hair cut equally so. Full of pep and energy he is always bursting with the answers in class. He has shown his interest in school affairs by taking part in both the operetta and the junior Christmas play.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the student council was held Tuesday and the following things were subjects for discussion:
It was suggested that a committee appointed by the president, Curtis Romains, confer with Mr. Rose on the building of a trophy case for taking care of the trophies here in K. H. S. The same committee will take charge of cleaning the banners which hang in the assembly.
For furthering the guidance talk lectures which are to be held, the group is now sending out letters setting dates for different speakers to come. The entire project has been arranged for the benefit of the student body and should prove very interesting.
By way of fun and frolic, the council suggested that students and teachers bring pictures of themselves taken several years ago and that a "Rogues gallery" be made.
With final discussion on this subject the meeting was adjourned.

GRADE SCHOOL PEEKS

The intermediate room had a grand surprise the other day when they heard from WHA, Madison, that one of their members had sent in a story good enough to be chosen as one of four best sent in from the state. The author was Barbara Ann Schaefer, who wrote the story of "Ujo, the Monkey." Several other people received honorable mention. They were Bernice Bunkelman, Argie Bilgo and Jean Rosenheimer.
The intermediate room is also working on a boat and have appointed various committees for the purpose of finding out about plotting the boat, the various kinds of boats, the size of boats, and what is necessary to go traveling. They have found it very interesting so far.
The primary room surprised the intermediate room the other day by singing five songs for them during their singing period. They sang "The Singer," "The Wind," "The Snowman," "The Farmer in the Dell," and "Pipity-Flop."

SPORTS HI-LITES

For the second time this year, Kewaskum defeated Campbellsport on the home floor by a score of 25 to 23 last Friday evening. The game looked like an easy win for K. H. S. during the first half, but those boys from C. H. S. lost no time in catching up. The second half was a nip and tuck affair, with both sides fighting hard. The final score showed Kewaskum ahead by one basket which really finished the game in good style. However, the C. H. S. team is something to be watched in the tournament for they are not only old standing rivals, but also are not going to give up the title without a struggle.
Due to a rearrangement of schedule the next game is to be played on the Kewaskum home floor with Lomira on Friday, February 9.

WASHINGTON NEWS

FROM CONGRESSMAN
FRANK B. KEEFE

The House by an overwhelming vote put its stamp of approval upon the work of the Dies Committee, and with only 21 votes against, authorized the committee to continue its work for another year. The House unanimously appropriated $75,000 to finance the work of the committee. The vote on this resolution should serve notice to all un-American and subversive groups in this country that the patience of the American people has been sorely tried and is about at an end. I have received numerous communications from C. I. O. union groups and many Communist front organization groups condemning the Dies committee and demanding that it be discontinued under the plea that the Dies committee was violating the civil rights of citizens. The Congress of the United States, however, knows well the influence that prompt such contentions.
I was privileged to address the House during the debates on this resolution, and among other things, said: "I can see a clear line of distinction between those groups that owe fealty and loyalty to our government, but who demand the right to advocate change in our social and political structure, and those groups of individuals who claim the benefits and protection afforded by our constitution, and yet who secretly have taken an oath to support and defend some foreign dictator should the occasion arise."
"I will defend the right of any group or any American citizen in pursuit of liberty of thought and progressive action to belong to any political party or to express any doctrine compatible with our democracy. I shall never vote to suppress or curb the right of any citizen to express his judgment or opinion on a political, social, or economic problem, because I have a right to assume that if the test ever comes between a revolutionary program of a Stalinist or a Hitlerite and the orderly processes of change under our system of government, such a citizen, no matter how radical he may be, would stand firm for the protection of our constitutional form of government."
"I, for one at least, believe the time is here now, when those who assemble in Madison Square Garden or any other place under orders from Stalin or Hitler should be told in no uncertain terms that the mantle of free speech and free assembly can no longer be used as a cloak and a protection to those determined to destroy our form of government."
"I can no longer countenance alien or citizen agitators or groups who owe secret allegiance to Moscow or Berlin, and who have sworn that in the event of trouble between this democracy and the Soviet or Nazi governments, they will defend the Nazi or Soviet governments, being permitted to continue their efforts to break down our form of government by force and violence and to substitute another type of government to which they have secretly or openly sworn allegiance."
Mr. Earl Browder and his followers do not owe allegiance to the United States government, but openly boast that they take their orders from Moscow, and in the event of trouble between this country and the Soviet they would defend the Soviet. How then can Communists claim the right to protection of the liberties guaranteed by our Constitution while they are openly and brazenly attempting to tear it to pieces?
The right of free speech and free press ought not to extend so far as to permit destruction of the very instruments that guarantee them.
I was pleased to note that Mr. William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, vigorously supported the Dies Committee and very definitely urged that it be continued.
This committee has despite its traducers, accomplished a great public good and the fact that the Stalinists and fellow travelers are squealing so loud about civil liberties is proof conclusive that they cannot stand the spotlight of publicity. While the committee may have made some mistakes in its earlier undertaking, all in all, its work has been exceedingly worthwhile and its report to the Congress was unanimous.
It is exceedingly interesting to note the numerous letters from organizations of various kinds who seek continually increasing appropriations for their particular interest and I sometimes wonder whether any of the individuals who write requesting me to vote for this or that appropriation really mean what they sometimes say.
For example, the President of a Wisconsin association of statewide influence recently wrote me requesting that I vote for an appropriation of $25,000 to construct a new building adapted to their needs here in Washington. I immediately advised him that I could not support any such legislation and would oppose the appropriation in the interests of economy. In the next mail I received a letter

FARM AND HOME LINES

Milk is our most widely used food, the farmer's largest source of cash income and the basis of an industry which for service and volume has few equals.
Farmers today pay over twice as much for horse drawn cultivators, mowers, corn planters, grain drills, and harrows as they did in 1913, a recent survey shows.
Good laying hens which are being fed for heavy production may have a tendency to lose weight at this season of the year, poultrymen report. Where this happens, the birds are likely to be thrown into partial moult.
In dairy herd-improvement association work a sire is proved by comparing the production records of at least five of his unselected daughters with the production records of their dams.
Tests with sugar beets in Wisconsin have shown that brax not only prevents heart rot, but under some conditions may increase yields as much as 40 per cent.

pointed. All got their money's worth and more for the price of 200 and 100, considering they saw a double-headed, the Gehl Mfg. Co. team of West Bend also playing Kewaskum in an exhibition game. The only off thing was Kewaskum's passing, and snoot-ling, which was quite faulty at times due to the exceptionally fast pace set by the Benders. Their speed didn't allow the local players to get set.
At the end of the first quarter Kewaskum had forged ahead 8-4. The Benders closed this gap in the second quarter, which ended in a 12-12 tie. The home team had the best of it in the third stanza and led 16-14 going into the last period, in which West Bend again came up to tie the score at 20-20 as the regular time of play ended. After a short intermission the 5 minute overtime was begun and this turned out to be more exciting than any of the others. West Bend dropped in 2 baskets and it looked bad but with only a couple minutes left Kewaskum came back with 2 and it was still a deadlock when the 5 minutes elapsed.
A second 5 minute overtime period was started and this time the locals came through with a hard earned victory. Kewaskum scored a basket, then the Benders, and then Kewaskum again. The team held the opponents scoreless in the last minute and the horn ended the affair at 28 to 26, Kewaskum.
R. Marx and Wilkomm won the scoring honors, each netting 9 points for their respective teams.

KEWASKUM 22; GEHLS 16

Following the game with West Bend Kewaskum played an exhibition game with the Gehl Mfg. Co. team of West Bend and in this contest coasted to a 22 to 16 victory. Most of the time substitutes and those who had not played much in the first game participated. Kewaskum took it easy after their hard, long opening game of 4 quarters and 2 overtime periods. The same local team played nearly 10 quarters of basketball in one evening, which is an awful lot. If one doesn't think so, try it. Theisen paced the Gehl team with 8 points. "Jennie" Schlosser, who did not play in the opening game for Kewaskum, was the only one who played the entire game and was high scorer with 6 points. He missed 6 free throws at that but kept the crowd in good humor.
Lineups and the number of points made by each player follows: Gehls—Wachs, rf, 4; Sauer, lf, C; Heiting, lf, 0; Husting, c, 3; Theisen, rg, 8; Kocher, lg, 0; Werner, lg, 1; Arndt, lg, 0; Kewaskum—Schlosser, rf, 6; H. KEWASKUM 34; PORT WASHINGTON 30

Kewaskum played another home game Tuesday night against the Port Washington State Banks and again came out on top by a score of 34 to 30 after a clean, interesting contest.
The game was close enough at all times to keep both teams hustling for victory. Port used only 5 men, Kewaskum used 8 men and substituted freely. The locals played without Werner and Dorn, the latter of whom also failed to play in the West Bend game because of illness.
The teams battled to an 8-8 tie at the end of the quarter but then it was mainly Kewaskum which took a lead of 20-16 at the intermission. The locals increased their lead and going into the final quarter had built up a 30 to 23 advantage. Port netted 7 points to 24 for the home club in the last frame but the latter's lead was enough to gain a 4-point victory.
Carlson was "hot" around the hoop for the winners and paced both teams with 12 points, followed by Honeck with 10. Hallada was best for the Banks with 11, one better than his teammate, Wolf, who made 10.

THE Gift Wife

by... RUPERT HUGHES

A thrilling story of love and adventure in the Near East. Action centers on Dr. David Jebb, skilled surgeon, who while in a strange land, given temporary custody of a little girl. Cursed with an overpowering fondness for drink, Dr. Jebb finally succumbs to temptation, even in the face of his responsibility. When he regains his faculties, David finds himself in a foreign land, inhabited by a people unknown to him. The child has disappeared. But that's enough—you want to find out for yourself how David Jebb untangles the threads of his life. "The Gift Wife" is one of Rupert Hughes' greatest stories.
