just to be funny. General Burnside's sideburns were not the rather weak things so often worn by the younger masculine element today. As the picture of him shows, they were husky and purposeful adornments that really went placesclear across the frontal features to join each other right under the nose-or is that thing a mustache?

Gen. Burnside

Why General Burnsides wore them is open to discussion. It might have been to make up for the fact that his first name was Ambrose and his second name Everett.

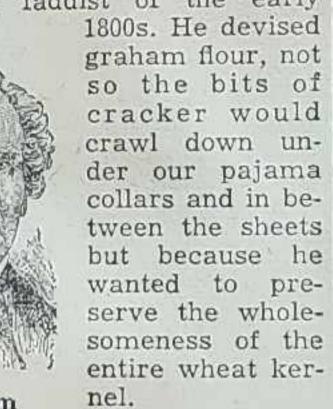

But his achievements never needed apology. He was graduated from West Point in 1847. He served in the army for a while and then resigned to go into the manufacture of firearms. He invented one of the first breechloaders, called the Burnside breechloading rifle. It loaded from the top, thank goodness, because if it loaded from the side it probably would have been called the Sideburn breechloader.

Back in the army again, he was a colonel during the Civil war, was prominent at the Battle of Bull Run and later became a major-general. He was intensely patriotic, amiable, modest and very popular. No American patriot deserved more to have his name commemorated. It's too bad it had to be immortalized in reverse!

Graham Cracker

He became a minister, also, and went through life as a Presbyterian to save his souland became a vegetarian to save his body. His theory was that temperance could be furthered by a strictly vegetarian diet which would prevent all desire for stimulants.

One new food theory of his led to another and he had a wide following. Some followed him because they wanted to save themselves from liquor, some because they wanted to preserve their health and others followed him because they wanted to break his neck. Among the latter were butchers and bakers who rioted when he spoke against meat and refined flour in Boston in 1847. He died a natural death in 1876.

The Guillotine

THE guillotine, machine used for legal beheading in France, was named for Dr. J. I. Guillotin, who prevailed upon the national assembly at Versailles in 1789 to adopt this contraption for all executions.

Two things about this need clearing up. First, Dr. Guillotin was not cruel-he was a kindly, mild-mannered physician from Paris. He spoke in behalf of the machine because it was a quick, painless method of inflicting death. Second: Guillotine is spelled with a final e that is not found in Dr. Guillotin's name. When they called the machine "la guillotine" instead of gender.

Dr. Guillotin "le guillotin" they not only bestowed paternity upon the doctor but they declared the child to be of the female sex. All French nouns must have masculine or feminine

Why the guillotine had to be feminine is not known from the standpoint of French grammar but it is decidedly appropriate for something devised to make a man lose his head . . . quickly and painlessly! (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

amined the glowing body. He noted the right leg drawn up close. The Bey told, and Hellwald translated, the history of the case.

Jebb glanced toward Hellwald with one word:

"Appendicitis." By this time someone was kneeling at his side with a ewer of steaming water and a basin. He filled the chamber of the hypodermic needle and paused for the tablet to dissolve. Then he looked about for the first time.

In the background hovered a young man in a shabby European costume. Jebb decided he was a Scotchman.

When the opiate was dissolved, Jebb made ready for the injection. The terrified boy fought him away but Jebb overcame the boy's feeble resistance and thrust the needle in the shivering flesh. Gani Bey screamed as if he had a deathwound, and the women echoed him piercingly. Even the father closed his eyes and toppled against the Jebb alone was calm. He was almost smiling at his success in inserting the opiate so near the center of pain. He took under his thumb the boy's wrist and mechanically felt for his watch. It was not there. He turned to Hellwald: " "Bitte, wie viel Uhr ist's?"

Before Hellwald could answer, Jebb heard someone say:

"Fourrrteen minutes to eleven, doctorr."

And a watch was placed in his palm, by a hand that lingered to clasp his, as the donor spoke: "I am glad to see a real doctorr here, doctorr. You are an Amayrican, I presume. My name is Murison, Donald Murison. I am a Presbyterian missionary, not a physician. I have done my best, but it

With much circumlocution Murison broached the subject to the parents and they were affrighted at the thought. Jebb explained it to Hellwald and he joined forces with Murison. And now Jebb began to wonder it he might not have lost the child in some other city. Salonica was a long journey from his last definite memory of Cologne, and there were various ways of arriving there.

On the third day of Gani Bey's convalescence-a servant brought to his room a request that he grant an audience to Fehmi Pasha, Miruma's husband.

The name set Jebb's nerves atingle, and he stammered as he told the servant to bring the Pasha up. He determined to make a brave front and, taking a hasty glance at his Turkish grammar, found the

There was something of the faithful husband, too, in his formal courtesy, for Nahir Hanim was lying in the next room and weeping weakly, a sick woman in great dismay.

The Pasha received Miruma's homage with a poor attempt at lofty majesty. Then he remembered Jebb, and spoke of him in Turkish with an evident flourish in his praise. Miruma, thus licensed, turned her eyes full upon him and the Pasha made the presentation in his best French.

Jebb bowed, Miruma lifted imaginary dust and placed it on her breast, her lips, and her brows.

Then the Pasha raised the portiere to his wife's room and Miruma went in, trembling with fear and bowing with all the deference required of a second wife before the Bash-

What I also understand is that I love you very much, in spite of your foolish notions, and that you are not the sort of girl, Grace Baldwin, who is going to be content with just a career, if that's what you call it."

"I'll always go on caring a great deal for you, Frank," she said, "Only now that I've got my degree

Grace wanted to succeed in some sort of business. She had specialized in economics and had taken several courses in finance, and on the whole felt that she would be an asset to any banking house or other establishment needing business ability of the first order. So one fine day she went to the city carrying with her some nice little letters of introduction to officers of several banks which she had begged from the president of her home bank.

As for the bank officers-they didn't even take the trouble to see her, Grace was told that she would have to send in a request by mail for an appointment if she really wished to see them.

here to help run this business," he growled after she had hopefully recounted her qualifications. "Our payroll is too big as it is. Nobody's really interested. They just do their own little jobs and draw their salaries and hurry home at five. Do you think any of the girls around here would take it upon themselves to see that my private office was kept tidy? Not much. All they'd have to do would be to keep after the cleaning womanstay after hours once in a while to see that she did the work. But no, they wouldn't think of such a

"Perhaps what you have said will give me an idea," Grace said "One or two of the other men I've talked to seemed to have trouble of somewhat the same sort."

But when Grace reached her home that week-end she was thoroughly discouraged. True, she had a little plan in the back of her mind, but when she came to consider it, it didn't seem so very good after all. Late that Saturday afternoon she telephoned to Frank.

"I'm sorry I said what I did to you," she said. "Maybe it is cowardly, but I'm going to ask you to give me another chance. You see, be a chance for me in the big busikeep offices clean. But nothing came even of that. So, Frank, if you want me you can have me."

And of course Frank took Grace in his arms, beyond measure pleased to find her in this humble frame of mind. A few days later came a letter, signed by Mr. W. M. George. "I didn't see any chance of giving you a job," said Mr. George, "but since reading your letter and considering your plans for an officecleaning agency I think perhaps we could come to some agreement. 1 see you have brains and courage. I'm interested in your plan and would be willing to back such a venture and finance it. We could make it a sort of side issue. British traditionalism again prevails. Sir Muirhead Bone, official artist of the World war, is again officially appointed as the artist of the navy, and it is understood that he also will render the graphic records of the conflict on land as well. Sir Muirhead, 64 years old, of Scottish birth, is one of the world's most distinguished etchers. He is also a painter, but in the years between the big wars he has turned more to etching. That is, with the trend of the times, as a modern war is decidedly an etcher's war. Skeleton trees on a blasted hillside, zig-zag trenches, the splintered chaos of peasants' huts, the angular dynamics of war machinery, all lend themselves to Sir Muirhead's superlative drypoint. There isn't much of the painter's mass and color in an up-to-date war-no gay plumes, bright uniforms and snorting black horses. > There were plenty of bands playing when Sir Muirhead was appointed official war artist in 1916. He painted boldly or etched deeply his pictures for the war museum, for which he later became trustee. Much was made, not only of the importance of a minutely observed pictorial record of the war, but of the availability of so great an artist to render its full aesthetic values. This time, there is a perfunctory announcement, only a few lines, of Sir Muirhead's appointment. Not even in the graphic arts is war getting its accustomed fanfare. This writer remembers well Sir Muirhead's masterful drawings in the "international studio" of an earlier and happier day-mellow architectural studies, or placid landscape in English byways where no airraid siren ever sounded. He was the son of a Glasgow journalist, studying art at a night school. It was in 1901 that he went to England, to become an honorary doctor of letters at Oxford and one of the most famous artists of England. He has exhibited in New York several times and has an enthusiastic following among critics and the American art public.

his opponent, Gov. Carl E. Bailey, had the active support of whole matter. I wrote to Mr. his "organization of 5,000 state employees," and of various members of the New Deal cabinet. Representative Miller, running as an independent against "machine politicians," achieved a sensational victory, as he won the seat of the late Joe T. Robinson. He was the first independent elected to a major political office in Arkansas since the early reconstruction days. His success was acclaimed as a triumph over patronage politics. Today, by one of those curious reversals of political form which make news, Senator Miller is the most conspicuous opponent of the extension and strengthening of the Hatch law, directed against political job-holders mixing in politics. He would not only block its extension to cover state job-holders supported in part by federal funds, but he would repeal section nine which bars governmental employees from political activity.

What Every Good Cook Should Know

There are certain principles of food preparation which every good cook follows, whether or not she's conscious of doing so, or understands the reasons on which they are based.

To be sure, every so often we find a recipe which seemingly contradicts every principle of cookery
