

Kathleen Schaefer, Miss Stoffel, Others Brides in June Rites

In a lovely late spring candlelight nuptial service read before a large gathering of relatives and friends at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, June 15, in the Peace Evangelical and Reformed church, two popular members of Kewaskum's young set became man and wife when the Rev. Wm. G. Schwemmer united Miss Kathleen Schaefer, daughter of Mrs. John F. Schaefer, and Paul C. Kral, son of John Kral.

The church was beautifully decorated with white gladioli and calla lilies and candelabras for the impressive rite. White satin streamers adorned the center aisle pews.

Miss Charlotte Romaine, cousin of the bride, sang "Blessed" and "At Dawning" before the ceremony. The wedding march and recessional were played by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Elywn Romaine.

The bride is a graduate of the Kewaskum high school and Central State Teachers college, Stevens Point. She taught at Stevens Point and Beaver Dam before her marriage. She was affiliated with Tau Gamma Beta sorority and Sigma Zeta National Honorary science fraternity. The groom graduated from the Kewaskum high school and later served in the U. S. army during World War II being a veteran of service overseas. At present he holds a position as machinist at the Kewaskum Utensils company.

The charming bride carried a bouquet of gardenias and calla lilies against her gown of satin and net. The satin bodice had a beaded neck line and long sleeves which topped a double net skirt to which was attached a train. A long veil was attached to a headed tiara. The veil was edged with lace.

The matron of honor, Mrs. William Schaefer, sister-in-law of the bride, wore a gown of blue lace and net, her headpiece consisting of roses and a short veil. She carried a spring garden bouquet. The bridesmaids were Miss Marjorie Fisher, Port Atkinson; Miss Dorothy Averill, Kilo Lake; Miss Charlotte Romaine, cousin of the bride, Miss Patricia Brauchle, Kewaskum. All carried spring garden bouquets and had headpieces of roses on a short bell, in blue satin and marquisette, while Misses Averill and Romaine were in peach satin and marquisette. Their gowns were fashioned with square necklines, short puffed sleeves and full skirts.

Two junior bridesmaids, Miss Susan Schaefer, niece of the bride, and Miss Audrey Kral, niece of the groom, wore frocks of blue lace over peach. They were flowers in their hair and carried spring bouquets.

The bride's mother wore a printed dress of aqua and black mesh. Her accessories were black and she wore an orchid corsage.

Roman Kral, brother of the groom, served as best man, and William Schaefer, brother of the bride, and Alfred Kral, brother of the groom, ushered the guests to their places.

Following the ceremony a reception for a large number of relatives and friends was held at the home of the bride's mother. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Kral left on a wedding trip into northern Wisconsin. For her going away attire the bride wore a suit of gold with white blouse, cherry cake hat, purse and shoes.

With the arrest recently of Harry Malchow, 17, of Hartford, the Washington county sheriff's department, assisted by Hartford police, cleared up a series of burglaries which had been going on throughout the county for the past few weeks.

GAME MONDAY NIGHT

Adell vs. Boltonville (Postponed game of May 19 to be played under lights at West Bend)

The second place Kewaskum Utensils made Sheboygan Falls their fifth victim in six games when they downed them, 10 to 4, on the local field Sunday behind the 4-hit pitching of Honeck and Marx, who finished the contest. In other games Random Lake moved into the third spot by nosing out Adell while Campbellsport was idle. Cascade and Boltonville also gained a notch in the standings.

Kewaskum touched the Falls pitcher, Christenson, for 13 base knocks. Pitcher Honeck led the assault with 2 out of 4, followed by Marx, Harbeck and Uelmen who connected for 2 hits apiece. Honeck pitched his hit ball until the fifth when he was touched for 2 fluke bingles. Falls failed to connect again until the ninth when Van Engen singled off Marx.

Kewaskum drew first blood in the opening on two errors and Marx's single. There was no more scoring until the 5th when Falls pushed all of 15 4 runs over on 2 infield hits that caught the infielders napping, a walk hit later and an error. The Utensils retaliated with 4 in their half of the same frame on singles by Schladweller and Uelmen, Fritz Kral's walk, Frost's triple and Held's fly ball. Leading 5-4, the locals scored 2 more in the 7th when they made 4 straight hits, singles by Bath, Marx and Harbeck and Honeck's double. The boys made it safe in the 8th with 3 markers on singles by Uelmen and Kral, Frost's walk and stolen base and two infield outs. Fritz Kral caught in place of his brother Paul, who was gone on his honeymoon.

This Sunday the Utensils make their longest trip of the season when they play at Sheboygan in the spacious, fenced in Sheboygan State polo park. Sheboygan, in 7th place, has won 2 and lost 4 but has been dangerous all season. Its defeats were close ones.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Old Age May Mean Freedom

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"While we can make ourselves necessary to those we love, we are never old."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THERE is no more reason to be unhappy as an old woman than as a young one. This sounds ridiculous, but it is a poor heart that doesn't discover the truth of it, along the road of the fifties and sixties.

Young women are acutely unhappy. So are young men. So are old women and old men, and middle-aged ones of both sexes. It's an unhappy world.

Too many little things can go wrong. Our lives are too complicated. Nothing is perfect. The new baby arrives yelling himself purple in the face. His mother has a few weeks of complacency, albeit it is a scared and nervous sort of pride, then croup and measles threaten. Just the dear yet exhausting responsibility of him weighs her down. She isn't as pretty as she was. No more dances, no more flirting, Diddies and sitters give place to bad marks on his school cards and scarlet fever and lost rubbers. Then come girls and night clubs and the car out nights.

The bliss of a radiantly happy engagement soon clouds over. Weddings cause more mental agonies than almost any other form of social gathering. Feelings are hurt. Dresses are disappointing. Honey-moons are altogether too strange and brief to be much fun. House-keeping has its phases of inexperienced cooking, troublesome old friends, family criticism. Only one thing is worse, and that's not marrying, not having a house and husband and babies to worry about.

'Life a Delusion.'

Why not face it? Life is a delusion at all ages. We have a fight for the bright spots and pray for the serenity of spirit that rises above the pricks and disappointments and carries us into a really happy old age.

Yes, here we are back at old age, and I believe it can be the happiest time of life. I don't mean resigned, or patiently enduring, or downtrodden and saintly and long-suffering. I mean that with good health, something to do, and confidence in God's strange and perplexing ways, the 50s can be happier than the 40s, and the 60s better than either. Further than that I am not qualified to go at present, but I have no fear of the years to come.

Health in age is real health, depending on a time-seasoned body, restraint in eating, drinking, amusements, fatigues. Something to do is absolutely essential to good old age. There are one million neglected jobs waiting for old women, and a lot of the old women are idly stagnating in little warm parlors, playing occasional bridge, eating too much, and suffering from headaches, colds, blues. These are the old women who have given old age a bad name. They think it is simply dreadful.

The independence of age, its freedom, its relief from the long years of having to do things she didn't want to do, its right to do the things she does want to do, escape the notice of these narrow little cotton-wool useless old ladies. In the 60s one may give up boring dinners; one's acute maternal obligations are over. One's nights can be prefaced by good reading and filled with deep sleep.

Help with Chores.

And for work? Well, I wish I had a dollar for every one of the tired young mothers who talk to me of the difficulty of trying to get some-

Small Towns Must Provide Tomorrow's Leaders

From the small towns of the nation must come many of America's peacetime educational, political, scientific and industrial leaders. Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati, told the graduating class of Hillsboro, Ohio, high school.

"Since not a single large city in the United States is reproducing its own population, the nation must increasingly depend upon its rural sections, its villages and its towns,"

QUIET HAPPINESS

Most people dread the coming of old age. Women especially hate to think of the later years. But, as Miss Norris points out, the years after sixty may be peaceful and happy. With reasonable security and fair health, it is possible for a woman to enjoy life more than she ever did. There is at last an opportunity for reading, and for any hobbies that she may want to follow. The chance to study the wonders of nature has now come.

Most important, says Miss Norris, is for the older woman to have a real purpose. She must feel useful. Some sort of work, such as helping her daughter or daughter-in-law with the house-work or the babies, or some charity or social service—anything really worthwhile—will give the elderly woman a sense of real importance. There are even some opportunities to earn a good bit at part-time employment, such as clerking in a little store.

The freedom of old age is a great compensation for the loss of pleasures that belong to youth and middle age. The realization comes that a lot of the scurrying around doesn't matter, that a lot of the social obligations are just a nuisance, and can well be forgotten. Old age can be happier, all things considered, than any other time of life.

one to sit with the baby, do an hour's ironing, clean out the vegetable cooler, sit and chat and finish up that mending basket. Scores of elderly women will actually go to see a beloved daughter or niece and lament with her over the lack of intelligent household help. They will sit in the young mother's parlor, looking about sadly, "no one to help you with dusting dear." They will tut-tut over the heaped washing, all the while interrupting the household routine and adding cigarette stubs to the trays.

"Nancy can't get anyone," they complain, themselves perfectly fitted to step into that little household three times a week and go straight through the dish towel or the clean pillow slips. Three times a week to Nancy, three times a week to George's wife, quiet, unquestioning, cheerfully helpful, what a blessing these idle, well-manicured, 60-year-old hands could be!

A blessing not only to Nancy. It is a blessing to oneself to be busy, useful, beloved. It makes an idle Sunday a treat. It warms one's heart with the disproportionate gratitude of the younger crowd. It makes the days fly and all thoughts of age fly with them.

While we can make ourselves necessary to those we love, we are never old. Wearing what you like, reading, eating, seeing the plays or pictures you like. What more could youth offer you? Youth, with its vagaries, doubts, fears, ignorances, chances, heartaches, offers you much less.

If helplessness, illness, incapability come upon you, you need new heroism, new philosophy, new faith. But until they do—and they may never come!—don't cheat yourself out of the deep happiness and security of old age.

Mittens from Scraps

Each of 1,000 snow suits and 800 capes made for European relief by the Kalamazoo, Mich., chapter of the American Red Cross was accompanied by a pair of mittens, thanks to Mrs. Fred W. Sellers. She is an employee of the commercial firm that cut out the entire quota of several hundred snow suits. The trimmings provided material for 1,800 pairs of mittens in three sizes, made of warm tweed. Mrs. Sellers used her extension patterns and knowledge in designing the mittens.

USO WILL CONTINUE THROUGH 1947

Demobilization Set for 31st December, 1947

THE USO will continue through 1946 and until the last day in 1947, when it will complete its wartime, demobilization and reconversion services December 31, 1947.

Official announcement that USO will conduct its own fund-raising campaign next September and October with a goal to cover minimum service requirements through 1947 was made by President Lindsley F. Kimball at USO New York headquarters.

USO came into being on February 4, 1941, when six member agencies joined hands to create one organization to care for the needs of the men and women of the armed forces. So far the American public has contributed 200 million dollars to the organization.

Still Needed, Says Ike.

In a message to President Kimball, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower stated: "May I earnestly count on your organization and your hostesses and volunteers to stay with us through the dangerous and difficult period of transition to final peace?"

"We still have a pressing need for the services of USO and will be deeply grateful for your continued help in the future as in the past."

Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, chief of naval operations, also sent a message of congratulation.

For Wounded Veterans.

The need for raising a terminal fund in the fall of 1946 is due to the fact that the National War fund will finance USO only through 1946. Tentative, purely tentative, plans for 1947 call for the operation of some 350 to 400 USO clubs in the continental United States, largely in connection with hospitalized but convalescent veterans. Operation of station lounges for troops-in-transit, men on leave, and families of service people must continue. Overseas clubs will carry on in Alaska, Canal zone, Hawaii, Philippines, etc. Camp shows will still be seen and heard in 1947 by men in hospitals and men overseas.

Coincident with the announcement of the USO fall campaign, President Kimball made public his annual report, in which he says: "USO finds that at its peak of activity, it was serving 1,000,000 people a day in one capacity or another, running up to more than 1,100,000,000 the total served since the organization was created.

3,035 Units at Peak.

The number of operations, such as clubs, lounges and similar activities, reached a high point back in March of 1944, a total of 3,035. As training camps closed and the men went overseas this number declined but the over-all volume of work increased.

"The five-year peak of activity and cost came after peace in Europe and before the surrender of Japan. Redeployment of troops reopened many camps, doubled or vastly increased loads of various seaport cities. . . . Expenditures climbed to $5,800,000 a month."

New Postwar Problems.

Referring to the future of USO, Mr. Kimball says in his report: "The successful conclusion of the war does not, cannot, and will not return the United States to its pre-war status. . . . It is clear even now that our armed forces in the postwar period must be numbered in the millions.

"USO will complete its wartime, demobilization and reconversion services December 31, 1947."

THOSE WHO SERVED . . . The USO continues to aid wounded veterans. Above is Junior Hostess Lucille Massa playing checkers with a wounded vet at a Battle Creek, Mich., club outside Percy Jones army general hospital.

Highlights of USO Five-Year Record

A brief summary of USO's accomplishments during its first five years of service to men and women in uniform all over the world include the following highlights:

At peak, USO was serving one million men a day.

During the five years (February 4, 1941 to February 4, 1945) total of 1,100,000,000 served.

At peak there were 3,035 USO operations.

AT CHOW . . . Franklin P. Adams, John Kieran and Clifton Fadiman of "Informative Please" went G.I. and washed their own mess kits while on a USO-Camp Shows tour overseas.

HOPE OF TOMORROW

Future Homemakers of America Membership Now over 200,000

We are the Future Homemakers of America. We face the future with warm courage. And high hope. For we are the builders of homes, Homes for America's future. Homes where living will be the expression of everything that is good and fair.

WRITTEN by pupil delegates at a meeting of the national executive council of the Future Homemakers of America in Chicago in the summer of 1945, the foregoing creed dramatizes the broad objectives of a booming high school home economics club already numbering over 200,000 members in 45 states and Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

High school home economics clubs are not a new idea but the Future Homemakers movement represents limited possibilities offered for learning and teaching.

Designed to stimulate interest in home economics and integrate high school activities with organization work, the Future Homemakers movement evolved from plans drawn by the American home economics association and the home economics service of the U. S. office of education in 1944. Within a few months, it was accepted by the state departments of education and vocational education and the state home economics associations of a majority of states, including Puerto Rico, Hawaii and the District of Columbia.

'Toward New Horizons.'

When the pupil delegates of the Future Homemakers met in Chicago last summer they were fully prepared for formal organization of their club. Besides writing their creed and constitution, they developed policies and procedures, drew a work program for the year, decided upon red and white for their colors, the red rose for their flower, and an octagonal emblem. Fittingly, they chose "Toward New Horizons" for their motto.

National in scope, the Future Homemakers are broken down into regional districts, with state and local chapters.

Presently, Myrtle Hilton of Tip-topville, Tenn., is president; Anita Lehman of Baton Rouge, La., is vice president; Emma Jo Lewis of De Land, Fla., is recreation chairman; Joan Du Plessis of Swampscott, Mass., is secretary; Barbara Ann Boggs of Sutton, W. Va., is vice president and Marie Bresnan of East Haven, Conn., is national project chairman.

Other officers include Irene Trout of Milwaukee, Ore., treasurer; Barbara Parker of Carson City, Nev., vice president; Margaret Worlton of Lehi, Utah, public relations; Phyllis Marshall of Vermont, III., parliamentary; Deania Burnworth of Independence, Kans., vice president; and Lois K. Mueller of Seymour, Wis., historian.

Wide Latitude Allowed.

While the pupil members of the Future Homemakers are permitted the widest latitude in the formulation and development of their programs, they are assisted by experienced advisers, including Edna Amidon, chief of the home economics service of the U. S. office of education; Mrs. Dora S. Lewis of the executive board of the American Homemakers association; Emily Haydock of the National Education association, and Dr. Hazel Frost.

Successful in developing a home economics club in Oklahoma several years ago, Dr. Frost, as national adviser of the Future Homemakers, has been largely credited with the phenomenal growth of the new movement. In assuming her position with the Future Homemakers in 1944, Dr. Frost applied the same principles she employed in Oklahoma in making the new organization a close working partner of home economics classes.

Though mostly composed of girls, the Future Homemakers also admit boys to membership.

At the height of activities 700 USO shows were given daily overseas and in the United States, by more than 4,900 entertainers.

June, 1943, was the numerical peak of volunteers—739,000 of them working that month.

They worked a total of 165 million hours in the five years.

American public has given 200 million dollars to service 14 million men and women in armed forces.

Songs Don't Make Sense—Neither Does World!

CONCORD, N. C. — Today's popular music does not make sense when it comes to words and titles, but neither does the world, says an editorial writer in the Tribune, published here. If we are to have escapist books and movies, we might as well have the same in music, says the editorial.

"One-zy, Two-zy" is not what you might think it is, a mathematical problem, but a popular song. Companion piece on the other side of the record is "Shoo Fly Pie," and at the moment favorite in the most inconsistent of all places—restaurant juke boxes!"

Other plaintive tunes noted by the North Carolina writer are "I'm a Big Girl Now," "Someday," "Shame on You," "Paran Pan Pin," "Bumble Boogie" and "Money Is the Root of All Evil." "Atlanta, Ga.," is another; so is "Coax Me a Little" and "Everybody Is Saying Hello Again."

"A singing army is a fighting army, so the old saying goes," comments the writer further. "And there is that axiom in parallel about books which might be translated into 'Let me hear what a nation sings and I will tell you what it thinks.'"

The writer opines there isn't any return to the calm security of that once darning hit, "It's Three o'Clock in the morning."

NO INDIANS... But here is where some 25,000 Indian clay pipes can be made every day. The factory is at Pamplin City, Va.

In These United States

Indian Stone Pipes Are Big Industry in Virginia Town

Pamplin City, Virginia, town of 300, has the world's largest plant making Indian stone pipe pipes. The factory has a capacity of 25,000 "smokers" per day, using a kiln that will handle 200,000 at a single burning. It uses four regular employees and as many as 70 on a part-time basis.

Prefab Houses Built in 1850

HAMILTON, MO. — Prefabricated houses are nearly 100 years old in Missouri, for this town's 1,600 population built them back in the 1850s. There were no carpenters in Hamilton, so A. G. Davis sent plans for a two-story house to a St. Louis firm. He received the lumber, windows and doors with holes already bored for wooden pegs — since there were no nails available. Complete instructions for assembling the house were furnished. A few years later, Otis Richardson did likewise. The Richardson house is still in good shape. It has been modeled and is in use.

Half of Topsoil Has Washed Away

BECKLEY, W. VA. — More than 50 per cent of the original top soil on West Virginia land has been washed away, according to Walter C. Grumbel, a soil conservationist. "Where soil conservation methods have been practiced," Grumbel said, "crop yields have increased anywhere from 10 to 25 per cent." He said an intelligent conservation program would protect and stabilize the land and water supply, restore plant food, increase farm income, prevent floods and restore forests and wild life.

Man Really Builds 'Better Mouse Trap'

BAMBERG, S. C. — S. D. Bishop has finally built that "better" mousetrap and may have a path beaten to his door. But it was entirely accidental. What Bishop was really making was a fish trap. He left it overnight at the feed store where he is employed, baited and ready for a try-out. Next morning he found five rats he caught 19 more.

Ex-GI Gives Anti-Snorer To the Army

BEAVERTON, ORE. — T. M. Weed, local lawyer, who used to be a G.I. and knows what snoring sounds like in a barracks, has submitted his "no-snore kit" to the U. S. quartermaster corps. He claims snoring can be stopped or greatly reduced by a specially constructed device designed to prevent the fluttering action of the soft palate and uvula that causes the coarse, low-pitched irritating noise made by a sleeping person. Weed admits that it was the complaints of his barracks mates in 1942 and 1943 that spurred him to devise an anti-snore device. He used it for the other two years he was in the army—and made friends!

More Crop Dusting

They show, as you see, that in 1939, the public's spendable income was 68 billion dollars. The estimate for 1946 is 139 billion. Now your common sense will tell you that the people who ate meat every day didn't get all of that 71 billion dollar increase in their spending money. The low-income groups got a large part of it. In other words, America (as a whole) is eating more meat (and other things) than it ever did before, and because so many MORE people are eating so much MORE meat, there isn't as much left for the people who ate all they wanted before.

Why Allegany Never Became Great City

ALLEGANY, N. Y. — Allegany (1940 pop., 1,436) was planned as Allegany City, "the intellectual, cultural, industrial and mercantile hub of the East." But through freak accidents its dream was never realized. The proposed city had been completed and surveyed on paper and the company started to build a palatial hotel (the Park hotel recently dismantled) according to plans. Work was interrupted on the Erie

GLASGOW, MONT. — It was 61 years ago that a young French-Canadian stalked through knee-high grass in Valley county to make one of the last buffalo kills in this section. He is Alec McGillis of St. Victor, Sask., who came here to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Marie Beaudry. Mr. McGillis speaks only French

PUBLIC'S SPENDABLE INCOME DOUBLED

Personal Mail Exerts Big Influence on Congressman

By BAUKHAGE, News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. There is a great mail mystery in Washington which public reaction sleuths are trying to solve. Recent reactions of congress present a paradox. In fact, a pair of paradoxes.

Gradually, one by one, like a maiden plucking daisy petals to learn her fate and fortune, congress has been stripping the poor office of price administration of its powers, until said agency has little more control over prices than man over a skidding car on an icy pavement. And yet, according to recent polls, 82 per cent of the public is in favor of "holding the line." The March survey by that reliable poller, NORC (National Opinion Research Center of Denver university) among other similar groups, points this out.

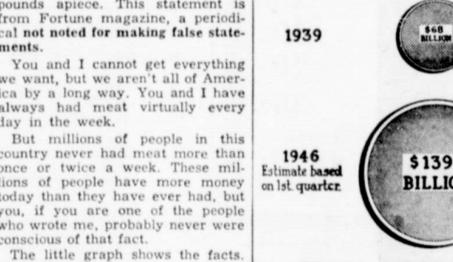

When the house virtually stripped OPA of its powers late in April, letters poured in supporting the agency, since then its head, Paul Porter, using the publicity machine built up by his predecessor, Stabilization Director Bowles, has omitted no word or act to keep his side of the arguments against ceiling-smashing before the consumer. Although congress is not now being needed as heavily as it was at the peak of the house debate, plenty of people are still asking for OPA continuation.

At the same time, of course, anti-control forces are keeping up their pressure, both through lobbyists of the interested groups, and through the paid advertising of the National Manufacturers' association, and other industrial organizations. But as far as any one can gauge, the people themselves still want price control. Nevertheless, congress has managed to whittle it down, and many observers, at this writing, consider it as among the dead already.

People Are Buying More

Recently, I said over the air that America was eating better, and eating more than it had ever eaten before. Immediately I received a squall of stormy letters, vehemently denying my statement. All of the writers regaled me with the same tale which my wife brings home each day — that the grocer's and the butcher's shelves are almost bare. Nevertheless, America is eating better and more food. Americans who ate a yearly average of 127 pounds of meat before the war are now gobbling it at the rate of 150 pounds apiece. This statement is from Fortune magazine, a periodical not noted for making false statements.

New Uses Found Demand for Potatoes Is Heavy

WASHINGTON.—With new uses for potatoes being found, along with a heavier consumer demand, is keeping the government out of the market for support purposes to a greater degree than department of agriculture officials expected. In view of the unprecedented potato shipments this spring. One of the reasons for increased demand is the entry of the distilling industry into the buying field. Distillers are buying potatoes from the growers at prices above government support prices in order to convert into alcohol. Potatoes were successfully used for livestock feeding in 1937, 1939, 1940 and 1941, officials pointed out, and in view of the feed shortage, may go into this channel. When processed into flour, potatoes also make an excellent poultry feed.

BARBS... by Baukhage

Rats Cost Half-Billion a Year But New 'Rat Killers' Found; 1946 Crops Depend on Weather

NO. 1 ENEMY: Rats Increase The rat population of the United States shot up during the war, due to a shortage of chemicals for rodenticides, and we now have over 25 million rats. They do an annual damage of 500 million dollars to food and property, exclusive of sickness and death caused by disease they spread. Government officials estimate that from 12 1/2 to 15 billion pounds of grain a year are consumed or destroyed by rats on farms. Each rat eats about 100 pounds a year, and spoils at least another hundred. Scientists of the interior department are making use of two potent rodenticides developed during the war. One is "1080," or sodium fluoroacetate, said to be the most effective rat poison known. The other is "antú," an abbreviation for alpha-naphthylthiourea.

WEATHER: Rains and Drouth

The government weather report shows that recent rains in the Middle West have benefited small grains, but that more sunshine and warmth was needed for best growth and development. Crop estimates are up. One expert predicts winter wheat production this year, as of June 1, at 751 million bushels, or 8 million bushels more than the government estimated last month. Spring wheat was estimated at 298 million bushels, slightly less than the 300 million bushels in 1945.

WAR BABIES: May Curb Influx

The bringing of very young babies of war brides from Europe to the United States may be halted, if a recommendation of a special army board which investigated a recent outbreak of diarrhea on the transport Zebulon Vance when 30 babies were stricken and eight died. The army may halt transportation from Europe of all babies under one year of age. More thorough physical examinations have been requested for war brides and their children at European staging areas before departing for this country. The war mothers themselves are somewhat to blame, it is reported, because of laxity of sanitary habits which might have contributed to the epidemic.

CANNED MEAT: 60% Set Aside

A new government order provides that federally inspected slaughterers may not produce canned meat for civilian consumption unless they deliver to government agencies 60 per cent of each week's total output. The order is designed to provide more canned meat for foreign relief shipments.

DESERT ROSE

By ROLLIN BROWN

Deputy sheriff Jim Doane sets out to track down a gang of train robbers. After he meets Dolores Alvaro and Monte Garcia he suddenly resigns his office and goes to see Star La Rue, a rancher and former gambling house operator. Jim forces La Rue to give him the ranch that he obtained from Dolores' father by trickery. He then goes to the ranch and puts a new crew in charge. Next day he starts out with two horses and encounters a posse led by sheriff Flick. The posse is pursuing five horsemen. Jim cuts across the trail and discovers Dolores in hiding. By a ruse she seizes one of Jim's horses and dashes away. The posse gives up the hunt for the day.

CHAPTER VII

Flick had been as close to success as the hound that snaps a tuft of hair from the escaping rabbit's haunch. The closing down of night was all that saved the fleeing riders. And Flick now knew that one of their number had been pushed into the brush and left behind. But tomorrow, he reasoned, would see complete success. He had already commanded fresh mounts from Tres Hermanos, and he would hit the trail at dawn.

Dawn found a gaunt, long-legged blue roan saddle-animal in the horse herd that hadn't been there the night before. The roan wore Doane's saddle. Doane knew where it came from.

Flick invited him to come along, to be in on the capture.

"Nope, sheriff," he replied. "Thanks. But I can't go. Got work of my own to do."

Flick didn't press the matter, for he was sure of his victory and relishing it. His posse had good strong mounts under them now, while the quarry undoubtedly rode the worn animals of yesterday. Doane also wondered about that . . . with the roan returned to him.

Unobserved Doane rode to the top of a hill when the posse rode off and watched them. Short miles from the ranch yards the sheriff quartered into the fresh trail . . . and it didn't look too plain to his eyes. The track hit squarely in a new direction, to the northeast, directly toward the distant Maxmillia City region. This unexpected move upset some of Flick's previously prepared ideas, yet the trail was fresh and none the less hot, and he followed it carefully. Northeast, again, a frowning wedge of the desert cut down.

There was, Doane knew, some pretty rough country around that wedge for miles in all directions. And sheriff Flick was not long in making that discovery, himself.

Midnight came again, and offered further surprise in the form of Flick, now worried, nervous and apprehensive, back at Tres Hermanos, accompanied by a lone member of his posse, a deputy from San Loreto. Twenty miles to the northeast, the trail had gone into a vast strip of up-ended, broken and eroded rock and shale land. The trail he followed had simply disappeared in the rocks. It was lost as easily as that . . . gone!

From shortly after noon until sundown Flick's men had scouted across the country trying to find where the trail came out. Meanwhile, time flew by very valuable time! At sundown the sheriff had been forced to do something more than search fruitlessly across a waste of rock and shale. Some decision had been imperative.

To Flick, the northeasterly direction of the trail, toward Maxmillia City, was ominous. He remembered what had transpired under his very nose in San Loreto. So at sundown he had split his men, the four one time Rancho Hermanos riders, led by Suarez, riding swiftly for the distant town. Flick himself, with the San Loreto deputy, intended to use the railroad from Sand Wells; arriving in Maxmillia City, he would gather more men and come down in a cross-manuever.

Serious Situation Confronts Sheriff

Granting that the pursued were riding for the Maxmillia country, the move was as canny as could be wished.

"We'll get 'em," was Flick's dogged decision. "I'll show that outfit that there are some limits to what they can do."

Doane was silent. Success for Flick might be a long way off, he thought; but he knew that the outcome of it all was certain now. Given time, Flick would do just what he said he would. Things had come to that pass. He was in too deep to back out. It was bound to happen, sooner or later. Flick and his deputy got an early morning train out of Sand Wells.

Doane was in Sand Wells that evening; he looped in leisurely, and arrived at the railroad station at about ten o'clock. He walked into Monte's office without bothering to knock, and surprised him over his instrument. He waited while Monte took down his message and turned off his key. Cigarettes were lighted, chairs tipped back against the wall.

"Well, senior el ranchero," smiled Monte through the smoke. "You have been riding, I hear! Burning saddle-leather an' wearing down good horse flesh. An' all to what purpose, may I ask?"

"Por nada," said Doane bitterly. "Nothing."

"So? Not failure?" asked Monte, in mock surprise.

"Yes, failure," mumbled Doane. "Funny how a woman can show a man up."

"A woman?"

"Or a girl," said Doane. "I did all I could, Monte. After your story, I couldn't do much less. No man could!"

"Meaning?" asked Monte, suddenly serious.

"Meaning anything," replied Doane. "I don't care. My end of this thing seems to have turned out to be simple blackmail and bluff. None the less, that bluff, with the two thousand I gave La Rue, called his bluff and won the deal. It was the only way I could touch La Rue . . . except the way the girl was going at it, taking back what she could get of her own . . . Uh . . . Monte, you remember a sealed envelope I gave you not so long ago to keep for Miss Alvaro?"

"I do. It is in safe keeping."

"Good! Flick's out for blood. Soon or late, he'll draw it; I know Flick. That's serious. Monte, you've got to get that envelope to Dolores without much delay. It contains La Rue's deed for Rancho Hermanos. The papers are made ranch is hers, legally and otherwise. There's also a signed statement from La Rue to the effect that all charges he made against her are groundless. There's not much time to waste, Monte. You can give her those papers, now. And tell her to take them and get on Rancho Hermanos land where she belongs; to put those vaqueros of hers back to work, and stay there. So far Flick hasn't a thing that'll touch her, except La Rue's complaints. And I guess that's about all I've got to say, Monte."

Monte studied Doane. He lighted a fresh cigarette. He smiled slightly. He said:

"From the first I say that I will come to like you in the end. Mees-tair deputy Jim Doane. Yes . . . jus' so, my frien', Doane, you are a man! Or, as we Spanish say, caballero, which has shades more of meaning . . . a rider, a brave man, and a gentleman. It is an expressive word, that caballero."

"Thanks, Monte. Gracias. Well, this finishes things. I'll be leaving Rancho de los Tres Hermanos by tomorrow. You might tell her that, Monte."

The sleepy day-man came into the office and took Monte's place. But it was a full half-hour before Monte returned, two handsome pearl-handled guns in holsters at his hips. The tigerish grace of the one-time gambler's every movement had somehow become accentuated.

"Shall we go now?" he said quietly.

Two men sat on a rock butte that overlooked a vast expanse of country. The hour was shortly past noon. Heat devils shimmered across the hot landscape. Eastward there was a tiny finger whirlwind that dipped playfully at a desert ridge, swirling a thin column of powdery dust skyward. One of the men searched the north horizon with a pair of small binoculars. The other man smoked many cigarettes, and he talked.

"Nevara," muttered Monte Garcia, conversationally, "have I liked being wide awake, with open eyes, in the daytime. For me days are hot an' drowsy, so a man may sleep; nights are cool, for his work an' his play. Awake in the daytime, I feel seck—or maybe so it is only too many cigarrillos."

"Take a look north," said Doane suddenly. "Looks like something stirring along the skyline there. Too far away to be sure."

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Make a Main Dish Meal of Vegetables (See Recipes Below)

Get Your Vitamins

Summer months with their wealth of vegetables give you a chance to get away those pills and remedies you've been relying on to keep going during the winter. You're especially lucky if you have your own vegetable garden because then you can gather the vegetables and cook them immediately, without undue loss of precious vitamins and minerals.

Languidly Monte looked through the glasses. "Perhaps," he said, and gave the glasses back. "Or perhaps a little dust whirlwind. But one thing troubles me my frien'."

"What is that?"

"I will be frank. It is you!" said Monte. "I do not quite know what you intend to do."

"Do you need to ask?" Doane snapped. "A hundred thousand dollars in this robbery. Two bystanders shot, one dying. Nothing less than murder, that killing! Do you have to ask what I'm going to do about it, if I get the chance?"

"Just so," said Monte. "But I do not mean the four men, who did the robbery an' shooting. I mean about the one called accomplice—the fifth rider! If it turns out that way, what would you do about—her? Eh? I wonder about that."

Silence. While Doane studied the horizon north, there was a long moment of silence. Yet Monte knew that the gesture was only mechanical and Doane saw nothing through the glasses. Sharply, he whirled.

"Don't ask me that!"

In a little while Monte smiled. "It is true then," he said.

"What is true?"

"You have seen this young lady—twice perhaps; maybe three times. But you love her. My question is answered, I, who have seen her many times."

"You love her, too, Monte?"

"Ha!" exclaimed Monte Garcia softly. "How else could it be? . . . But only as a brother. Jus' like one older brother, my frien'."

Within half an hour a definite spot of dust could be traced on the flat north horizon. It did not weave like one of the finger whirlwinds and it had lasted too long, moving slowly forward. The spot grew in size and obtained slight length across the terrain. In three-quarters of an hour the glasses revealed pin-point dark dots preceding the dust. But it was as yet impossible to count their number with accuracy.

"Holding that course," muttered Doane, "they'll hit through those rock ridges and buttes somewhere to the left of us."

Garcia and Jim Enter the Chase

Time passed. Monte Garcia watched a tiny, flecked sand lizard that sunned itself on the hot surface of a boulder. He smiled interestedly when the lizard caught a fly.

"That little fellow is like us," considered Monte. "He waits—an' catches his fly. But again it is different!—and Monte laughed ironically—the fly has no power to hurt the lizard!"

Doane passed the glasses to him again.

"Count 'em, Monte! See if I'm right."

For a long while now Monte gazed through the glasses. His face showed no emotion when he said, slowly: "Five! Five riders!"

"Yes," agreed Doane, after moments had passed.

He became engrossed in a new study, a second seeming line of dust just showing on the horizon. In time this took form, minutely but steadily, moving. It followed the first. The actual distance separating the two bands of riders was probably six or eight miles. The visual panorama of the binoculars was vast.

"Flick couldn't have lost much time getting on the trail last night," muttered Doane. "Looks like half the population of Maxmillia City in that posse with him."

Monte, too, studied the second line of dust for a long while, seeming to smile.

"Jus' so! We used to say at the gambling tables: 'Watch out for the unlucky player when the cards once turn to him.' It is a true saying, my frien'."

The two men silently worked their way to the base of the butte. The hot sunlight slanted now with early afternoon. Two mounts and a pack animal were tied in a fringe of low mesquite shade. They watered the riding animals with a scant gallon or two from the pack tins. Blankets were smoothed, saddles re-set and horsehair cinchas tightened. All this was done for a purpose, although for a pleasure trip. Doane once more rode the big roan animal.

They turned north, side by side, leaving the pack animal behind.

Decorator's Diary Reveals Designs For Easier, Safer Postwar Living

By MARION ATKINS

For a noisy household—and where there are children there is bound to be noise—a cork company introduces a new acoustic ceiling which would be ideal for play rooms, and even for the kitchen. It not only absorbs noise but reflects light. When, in the tomorrow, the average home has its own music room, a sound-proof ceiling of this type will be very useful. . . .

Flame-proofing of materials, where there is a special hazard in fire, is now being written into safety codes. This is very welcome news to home owners, for before long, curtains, draperies and upholstery fabrics can be treated with this finish, greatly reducing the likelihood of fire in the home. . . .

A recent national survey reveals the types of homes that people want in the future. One of the first requirements is a plan that is practical and simple, easily expandable and with ample storage space since attics and basements are disappearing. One story houses, the survey shows, are preferred by those living in the West; two story houses by those in the East. . . .

If you've a veteran in your family, you had better begin collecting ideas on how two families can live comfortably in one house. Forecasts say that 1946 will be the most doubled-up year in our history. Despite plans to give veterans building priority and rental preference, there will not be enough houses to go round, even with every community doing its utmost to help meet this problem. A bed-sitting room for the boy and his bride will help a lot, together with some special arrangements in the kitchen that will enable the young bride to try her culinary skill in her own way, unobstructed. . . .
