

Reach 25% of Red Cross Fund Drive Quota After One Week

Slowed by unfavorable weather during the first week, the fund campaign of the West Bend chapter of the American Red Cross was being intensified this week by city, village and precinct chairmen in order that the drive may be completed by the closing date, Monday, March 15.

Reports from the various chairmen Monday indicated the solicitors had reached about 25% of the $230 quota during the first week of the drive and it was believed that an all-out effort would be needed to reach the quota before Monday.

Drive Chairman Matt Goring urged all campaign volunteers to make their calls as soon as possible and forward

FLASH!

VILLAGE FIRST OVER TOP Edw. E. Miller, local chairman, reported Thursday that the village of Kewaskum was over the top in the Red Cross drive. The village went well over its quota of $315.00 already on Monday, to be the first unit in the county over the top.

Kewaskum was also tops in the March of Dimes drive and, as on many occasions before, has done it again in the Red Cross drive.

returns to the drive headquarters in order that the chairmen may know the status of their precincts.

Several townships were near their quotas Monday, according to Goring, and competition was developing among the various chairmen with each one hoping to be the first to announce his area had achieved its quota.

West Bend Chapter Chairman Stephen O'Meara said Monday the fact that drive workers had attained 25% of the quota during the first week despite exceedingly inclement weather and bad road conditions, was an indication that the campaign volunteers were giving the same splendid cooperation which has typified their work in previous years.

O'Meara said he felt confident the quota would be reached before the drive closes Monday.

"The people in the West Bend chapter area have never failed and we are confident that they will generously support the Red Cross this year as in the past. The services of Red Cross are so important and so near to us that we simply cannot afford to be without them."

In response to queries from solicitors, particularly those assigned to West Bend residential areas, as to where receipts should be turned in, Chairman Goring said returns may be made either at the Red Cross office in the public library building, at his headquarters or at the homes of the respective chairmen.

News that the neighboring Milwaukee county chapter had far surpassed its quota, raising over $600,000 in eleven days, spurred the local campaign headquarters Wednesday morning to call for an all-out effort to put West Bend over the top before Monday.

Kewaskum Legion Moves Into Finals of Lomira Tourney

Team Wallops Hustisford Sunday, Beats Fox Lake in Semi-Finals Wednesday; Plays for Championship Sunday Night

The Kewaskum Legion cagers, who were members of the Lakes circuit the past season, will play in the finals Sunday night for the championship of the Lomira Lions club gold medal basketball tournament. The team drubbed Hustisford, 69-31, in its first round engagement Sunday afternoon and Wednesday night the Legion defeated a very good Fox Lake team, 47-42, in the semi-finals. Kewaskum is assured of second place and the silver medals that go with it.

Other teams which emerged victorious in the first round Sunday were Fox Lake, which defeated Campbellsport, 59-42; Rosendale, which knocked over Oakfield, 48-36; and Lomira, which tripped Marytown, 71-57.

In the semi-finals Wednesday night the Sunday afternoon losers, Campbellsport and Hustisford, tangled at 7:30 in the consolation bracket with the Belles winning. In the second game at 9 in the championship bracket Kewaskum clipped Fox Lake, 47-42.

The second series of semi-finals was played Friday night with Sunday night's losers, Oakfield and Marytown playing in the consolation flight and Lomira and Rosendale, Sunday night winners, tangling in the championship flight.

Kewaskum will take on the winner of the Rosendale-Lomira fracas in the title tilt Sunday night at 8, Campbellsport, winner over Hustisford on Wednesday and the Oakfield-Marytown winner will face each other for consolation honors in the first contest at 7:30. Fox Lake, losers Wednesday, and the loser in the semi-finals Friday will play Sunday afternoon for fifth and sixth places.

Kewaskum played a bangup game in trouncing Hustisford Sunday afternoon, 69-31, and won by a margin of 38 points. With Krueger leading the way with 17 points, all of the boys played good ball and hit the baskets repeatedly from all angles. The Legion had a lot of drive and pushed in many rebounds against a weak Hustisford club which Kewaskum defeated twice during the regular lakes season. Wenzel was second in scoring with 12 markers. E. Hackbarth and Rosender led the losers with 7 points apiece.

Wednesday night, as was expected, the Legion bumped into a really tough fighting and fast Fox Lake side in the semi-finals. Tourney officials and fans anticipated this encounter as the big game of the event and so it proved to be with Kewaskum coming out on top, 47-42, after a close, exciting battle. Again the Legion cagers played one of their better games and were rewarded with a victory after a fighting, hard tussle to gain the finals.

The contest was close throughout with Kewaskum holding the lead all the way although never by more than a few points. Fox Lake snatched the Legion basket for basket but four buckets in a row by the "Kums" right at the start accounted for the difference between the teams and provided the margin of victory. Kewaskum led at the quarter, 9-5, at the half, 25-19, and the third quarter, 34-25.

Fox Lake's rugged forward and ace of the team, Schultz, who scored 17 points against Campbellsport Sunday, dropped in another 14 points against the Legion to tie for high honors with Fox Lake's big center, McCarthy, who also collected 14. Schultz, a fast, aggressive player with a lot of skill, was one of the best ball players the locals have run up against this season. "Hifty" Backhaus was top man for the Legion with 12 markers, followed by Allen Tessar with 11, but praise must go to all the players as a whole for their play in winning.

The Waterloo-Kewaskum tussle was a dog fight throughout with Waterloo holding the upper hand most of the way. Waterloo led, 16-7, at the quarter but the Legion tied it up at 20-20 at the intermission. The Dairies went ahead again at the third period's end, 23-27, and that's where they stayed. Forward Cronins 14 points capped top offensive honors, with W. Tessar next in line with 11 for the losers.

By virtue of its win, Junesau will represent District No. 5 in the state meet at Waunakee, Mar. 18-20. The crown they won at West Bend also entitles them to enter the state tourney at Hartford Mar. 11-21.

Tri-County Forensic Contest Here Mar. 16

The 1948 Tri-County league forensic contest will be held in the Kewaskum high school auditorium on the afternoon and evening of Tuesday, March 16.

Schools sending representatives to compete in the various branches of the contest are Campbellsport, Lomira, Oakfield, North Fond du Lac, Rosendale and Kewaskum.

The afternoon contests will begin at 1:30 and the evening contests at 7:30. This year for the first time, the league voted to employ two judges, making it possible to hold two contests in both the afternoon and evening sessions at the same time, thus cutting considerably the length of time that it takes to hold the contests. It was felt that all contestants appearing on the same program makes the length of the program too long to be enjoyed by either contestants or spectators.

Admission price for the contest will be 25c for either session, with the spectator choosing what particular contest he wishes to witness.

It is hoped that the people of Kewaskum will lend their support by witnessing either or both of these sessions. The host school would like to show the other schools in the league that Kewaskum supports wholeheartedly this fine type of activity.

Waterloo Drops Kewaskum Out of West Bend Tourney

The Kewaskum Legion was eliminated in the second round of the strong Wisconsin Recreation Director's District No. 5 cage tournament at McLane gym, West Bend, last Thursday night by the fast, accurate Waterloo Sunrises Dairies, 42-35. Kewaskum played poor ball in losing to Waterloo, champions of the Madison Home Talent league. The team had an off night but we think the Legion has a better team than the Dairies and could beat them with little trouble on the home floor.

Kewaskum advanced to the semi-finals by defeating Hartford in the opening round Wednesday night, 45-43.

A big, fast Junesau aggregation won the tourney title by nosing out the Horicon Legion of the Lakes Major loop in the championship finals Sunday night, 47-46. After beating Kewaskum, Waterloo advanced to the third place playoffs but was upset by the West Bend Schachts in the consolation finals Sunday, 52-35. Other teams in the event were Cambria, Pewaukee, Mayville, Hartford, Columbus and Campbellsport.

By virtue of its win, Junesau will represent District No. 5 in the state meet at Waunakee, Mar. 18-20. The crown they won at West Bend also entitles them to enter the state tourney at Hartford Mar. 11-21.

The March of Dimes chairman pointed out 50 per cent of the contributions will accrue to the chapter's treasury for use locally in the treatment and care of poliomyelitis victims. The

OKLAHOMA

(Editor's Note: This is another in the "Stories of the States" series.)
By EDWARD EMERINE
WNU Features.

From tents to towers, from No Man's Land to a mighty state, Oklahoma's development has been recent and fast.

Lands of the Creeks and Seminoles were thrown open to homesteaders on April 22, 1889, and 100,000 people raced into Oklahoma.

Fight Over Statehood.
Agitation for statehood began almost immediately. Whether there should be two states or one was an argument that lasted for years.

NATIVE SON... Oil man and rancher, Roy J. Turner was elected governor of his native state of Oklahoma in 1946.

Finally passed an enabling act in 1906 which provided for admission if white and Indians could come to an agreement.

Once on its way, Oklahoma could not be stopped. Settlers found a state that was three blessed—rich soil, a favored climate and vast mineral resources.

A glance at Oklahoma's agricultural production for 1946 shows that it ranked first in broomcorn and mung beans; third in pecans, grain sorghum, alfalfa seed and sorghum forage; fourth in wheat, and sixth in peanuts and sudan grass seed.

Rich, Fertile Plains.
Oklahoma's crop diversification is aided by its physiography. It lies entirely in the Mississippi river basin.

the Arkansas and Red rivers and their tributaries. Surface of the state as a whole is a plain, mountainous only in the northeastern part where the Ozark mountains rise.

Household Hints
When finishing unlined coats, or garments made of sheer fabrics, press the seams open. Then by turning the edges back on themselves, stitch along the turned edge. Do not stitch through the right side of the garment, however. Dainty even running stitches make a neat job.
Glue a small piece of cloth measuring tape to the inside of the wooden frame of your knitting bag. You'll find this handy when sewing or knitting.
A watched kettle never boils—especially if you leave a spoon in the pan. The spoon conducts heat away from the liquid and retards boiling.
Do not immerse the electrical parts of an appliance in water, particularly the motor, heating element, thermostat, or switch.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family.

VA to Cut Personnel

At a time when services of Veterans' administration are expanding, personnel of the administration will be cut approximately 8,500 to come within the proposed 1949 budget, according to announcement by Carl R. Gray Jr., veterans' administrator.

Cuts will be made on a staggered schedule with 8,810 employees being cut from the field administration in the 13 regional branch offices. On December 31, 1947, employment in these branch areas totaled 77,978 in the administrative programs. This number will be cut to 71,570 on March 31, 1948, then to 71,379 on April 30 and to 71,168 on May 31.

There will be no reductions made in medical services, according to Gray. Rather, in VA's recommended budget for 1949 an increase is proposed in the medical program.

Questions and Answers

Q. My husband is a former marine. After his discharge he drew unemployment pay, $20 per week for five weeks. We have heard the remainder will be paid the veterans in a lump sum in April, 1948. Is this true? If not, please explain it to us. Also how may the veteran receive the money he paid for insurance while in service?—Yet and wife, Appalachia, Va.

A. There is no lump sum of unemployment compensation to be paid veterans that we know of. If the veteran is out of a job he may apply to the unemployment compensation office and receive up to $20 per week for a maximum of 52 weeks under certain conditions. If he obtains a job, of course, his compensation stops. The veteran is not reimbursed for premiums paid on his war insurance. He paid these premiums for protection and received his protection when his policy was issued.

Q. In 1942 at Camp Wheeler, Ga., during basic training I had the misfortune to injure my back. I went to sick call for it and was told it was a strain. I finally recovered from it, but when we arrived in North Africa the condition recurred. I was treated and recovered, but it came back again in Italy. Was again treated and recovered and was not bothered until after my discharge December 4, 1945. I began to have considerable back trouble and have lost considerable time from work and the doctor bills have been running at the rate of $100 a month. I wonder if it would be possible to get medical attention through Veterans' administration.—R. J. A., Detroit, Mich.

A. Certainly your disability is service-connected and would show on your service record, so I believe you would have little difficulty obtaining medical treatment at a VA hospital; and if the disability is severe enough you would be entitled to aid for a disability rating and compensation.

Q. I have been hospitalized for a service-connected disability and wish to call my personal physician for consultation. He has treated me for several years and knows the case history of my disability. May I do this?—W. E. G., Atlanta, Ga.

A. No. Arrangements for consultant service are made only by the hospital's medical staff.

Q. My question is a simple one. In order to save time and to keep from making a lot of unnecessary queries I should like to know what is the first step necessary to obtain an immediate loan under the G.I. bill of rights.—J. P. F., International Falls, Minn.

A. You either may contact a lending agency directly or request your contractor to make arrangements for such a loan.

Q. How may I apply for admission to the United States naval home?—C. F. P., Cincinnati, Ohio.

A. Application should be made, in duplicate, to the Governor, U. S. Naval Home, Philadelphia, Pa. Applications may be obtained from the governor or from the Bureau of Navy Personnel, Navy department, Washington 25, D. C.

Q. I'm writing about the veterans' bonus and would like to know if Wisconsin is paying one or if there are planning to pay one later on.—Mrs. W. F. B., Big Rapids, Mich.

A. Insofar as we know there is no bonus law in Wisconsin. It is our understanding the Wisconsin legislature adopted a resolution to submit the question of whether or not there should be a 3 per cent sales tax enacted to raise money for a veterans' bonus, at the general election in November. Suggest you write for details to the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs at Madison, Wis.

Q. I have lost my discharge papers. I was a World War I veteran but in moving my papers were lost. Now it is vital that I have them to get a job. What can I do about it?—C. C. M., Plainfield, Wis.

A. To save time, if there is a recruiting office in your town or near you go there and ask for a form necessary to fill out a certificate of discharge. Send it to the Office of Demobilized Personnel Records, Adjutant General, 4300 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo. If you cannot get the form, write to the above address for it also.

RAS'BRIES

By SETH BABITS

AMONG the million-odd things Spence wanted to do was visit Topley's. He'd had a yen for Topley's back there on the desert wastes. He craved it as a cat would catnip or a homesick Eskimo, an iceberg.

And now, as he hurried his chunky form up the narrow street, the blue neon above Topley's window blazed welcome in letters two feet high.

Spence slid into a seat. He breathed, "Razzberry soda, please. Topley special."

He closed his eyes and envisioned a monument of pink and white.

A girl's voice, clear and soft, reached him.

"Ras-bry soda," she informed. "Without ras-bries."

He raised his head. Her eyes were warm and gray. An amused smile bowed her lips.

"Without—" he faltered.

Her manner humored his confusion. But Spence didn't see that. It struck him she was part of the soda. That the dream also took her in.

He watched her scoop out a gob of ice-cream, drop it into a tall glass, squirt in a crimson syrup and heard the harsh gurgle of carbonated water. The glass was placed before him.

He placed his lips to the straw and pulled. Coldness luxuriously flowed over his tongue, daubed his palate, trickled down his throat and touched off revelations of deliciousness he'd almost forgotten. It evoked imagery. Lying face upward in a shallow mountain lake... elastic stars shimmering on water above... night winds whispering of giant pines... drifting... drifting in a rowboat... and a girl beside him... gray-eyed and pretty... a girl like... and he looked up. He felt the impact of her presence.

She said, "You enjoyed that?"

Enjoyed! He'd known the pricelessness of a cold glass of water. He grinned.

"Hit the spot like a letter from home."

Spence expected a smile, but she merely picked up his empty glass and erased the moist ring beneath with an efficient stroke of a damp cloth. He felt he'd missed the target, but wide. He rose awkwardly and plunged a hand into his pocket. His coin vibrated on the counter. A frustrated ring.

The cash register cringed in dismissal. Spence half-wheeled to go. In turning, his eye caught the tab, NO SALE! The girl's hand swept to her blouse pocket. The clink of metal told him his coin had joined others.

It was none of his concern, yet the act had been so brazen. He heard himself saying, "Don't they treat you right, here?"

Spence couldn't make out her expression. "They do," she answered succinctly.

"I saw you pocket that money."

"So what?" her coolness irritated him.

"If the owner caught you—"

"There's nothing he could do about it," she began to straighten a row of glasses before her. The gesture tokened disinterest in his opinions. More, it infuriated him.

"I wouldn't have believed it," he managed.

Instantly he was sorry for her. He noticed that dark lashes rested on her cheeks. He realized also his heart was thumping and there was a quaver in his voice that she couldn't control.

"Why don't you ask for a raise?"

"I can't."

"Then quit. Get another job."

A tall man loomed in the doorway. He was thick shouldered, and muscles like Idaho potatoes bulged his arms, laden at the moment with two big paper bags.

Spence glanced at the girl. Beneath her coolness, he thought he detected an undercurrent of excitement.

She said courteously, "Did you get everything?"

The man shrugged his shoulders and laid the bags on the counter. "Yeah," he grunted. "Exceptin' powdered sugar." His tone was gruff. He tore the bag down the center.

Spence stared. There, tucked in between two packages lay a jar of raspberries. Atop the pile glistened another of cherries, bright, red, full, exciting and prophetic of delight.

Vaguely, he could hear the man counting. Meaningless numbers. He'd have to have a Topley special first, then take care of the girl. Spence regarded her expression. Injury dominated her fair face and a pensive smile hovered about her lips. It rebuked him.

With sinking heart and forward thrust of lean jaw, Spence gulped and announced:

"Sir, I want to talk to you."

"What's botherin' you, son?"

Spence cleared his throat. "You look like a regular guy," he began. "Now, supposin' you had a conscientious employe. You'd want to keep her, huh?"

"You said it," the man nodded vigorously.

"Now if you had a person like that and you felt she was competent to take care of the store," Spence took a deep breath and plunged, "would you give her a raise if she was to ask you. Would you?"

"Guess so," the man acknowledged.

"How much?"

"Well," the man's thick shoulders heaved. "Maybe ten," he said at last.

"You heard him," Spence turned triumphantly toward the girl, "I'm a witness."

She nodded. Her eyes were glowing.

"If you'll excuse me, son," the man was saying, "I'm kind of busy. I got a lot of deliveries to make." He handed a paper to the girl. "Here's the bill," he remarked.

"Thanks. I'll file it. Oh, yes," Spence saw her reach into her blouse pocket. "I've got two new quarters," she offered.

"Swell," he glowed with delight. He placed a fifty cent piece on the counter. "I just need about six more," he said as she rang up the money, "and I'll have enough for the kid's birthday. Thanks a lot, Miss Topley."

Spence was up. He was past the threshold and into the street. A detaining hand touched his shoulder. He brushed it off.

"Pu-leez," and a slim figure twisted around and blocked his passage. "What's the big idea," he demanded.

"I couldn't help it. Once you got

Spence visioned maraschino cherries floating on a rose pond above submerged raspberries. He also discovered lights in her eyes, flashes of radiant promise. He placed her arm in his. The action seemed most natural. "I'm glad you've reformed," he grinned. They went back into the store.

So You Think You Have Moods

A young navy lieutenant, not too long out of the service, told me over the luncheon table the other day that he became very much discouraged over himself. I pointed out he hadn't any reason to be. He has a good job. He's doing it well.

"That's just the trouble," he said. "I'm not doing it well. I know I'm not. One day I feel sure that I have everything a man needs to be successful and happy. Then the next day I'm clear down in the dumps. It's my moods. Isn't there anything a person can do about moods?"

I told him, as I am presently going to tell you, that of course there is something anyone can do about his moods. I told him furthermore something he never heard of before, that having moods is perfectly normal, perfectly natural, and a good rather than a bad thing.

We know a good deal more about moods now than we did a few years ago, for now we know that at certain times we are going to be happy, regardless of how things break for us, while at others we are going to feel depressed, also regardless of how things break.

Largely responsible for this information is Dr. Rexford Hershey of the University of Pennsylvania, one of the first scientists to study our emotional curves.

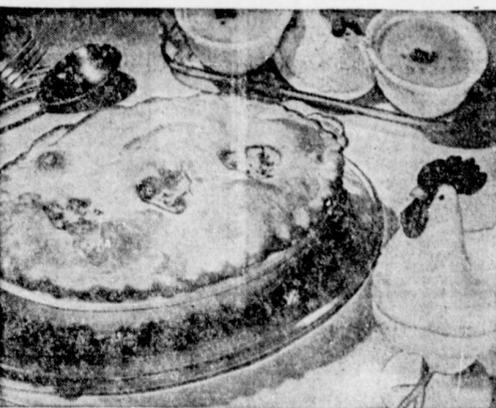

By his researches Dr. Hershey proved that we all have our ups and downs and these occur with regularity. We are elated, cheerful, pleasant, uncomplaining, peevish, grouchy. That is one cycle. Then we become elated, cheerful, pleasant, and so forth, again. Our lives are a series of cycles—emotional cycles.

These cycles, moreover, appear with almost exact regularity. With some persons they appear every month; with others every two or three months. Highly emotional people go through their emotional cycles often in less than two-weeks' time, then start all over again; they are always in a dither. But long or short, each of us has his emotional curve.

Maybe you are wondering what you can do to control this curve. You can't control it, but you can disguise it, so that regardless of how you really feel, you put your best foot forward where the rest of the world is concerned.

And how do you do that? It's simple. Just remember that we take our emotions from our actions, not our actions from our emotions. In other words, to feel cheerful, just act cheerful. The next time you reach the low point of your emotional curve, try that. Act cheerful, talk cheerful, and you will be cheerful.

LYNN SAYS: Are You Smart About Leftovers?

Yesterday's roast makes a welcome casserole, quick stew or hash stuffed into green peppers.

Don't let your bacon drippings get rancid. Refrigerate them and use in place of butter for seasoning vegetables.

Sweet cake and cookie crumbs may be used for dessert if combined into a soufflé or mixed with ice cream.

Have some leftover squash? Use it in making biscuits for interesting flavor.

Leftover rice makes nice griddle cakes, soups, stuffing for meat or poultry, or rice pudding.

There are many ways in which to serve leftover vegetables. Add them to soups or casseroles. Or, add them to meat loaf to extend it and add flavor. Don't forget to add them to gelatin or other fresh vegetables for a salad.

Leftover sandwiches take on new life when they are buttered and toasted in skillet or grill.

IF YOU DON'T HAVE QUITE ENOUGH MEAT TO MAKE HAMBURGERS, YOU CAN EXTEND WHAT YOU HAVE WITH MASHED POTATO, THIS MAKING POTATO BURGERS.

Juice left over from canned fruit can be saved and thickened with cornstarch to make a clear sauce for desserts.

Left over bacon or frankfurters can be used with hard-cooked eggs, chopped, and mixed with mayonnaise for sandwich spread.

Leftover sausage is excellent for flavoring vegetables or soups.

Have you odd dishes of leftover fruit? Combine them and use them as a topping for that upside-down cake. Apricots and prunes go well together; so do cherries and pineapple, peaches and apples.

Leftover fruit also can be cooked, if that already has not been done, and used for a cobbler with extra rich biscuit dough.

A cupful of gravy left over from the roast makes a nice base for soup.

Always save that liquid from canned soups. Use it for gravy or soup base.

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK. For 200 years after its first appearance this form of timepiece was known as a tall, floor or long-case here and abroad. THE QUESTION MARK (?). This is a contraction of the Latin "Quaestio." The initial letter was placed on top of the final letter, a kind of 8 with a tail in the middle. In time this became simplified the query mark now in use.

'Columbus Clocks' Found To Be but Fair Souvenirs

At the Chicago World's fair (Columbian exposition) in 1893, thousands of souvenir clocks were sold bearing a portrait of Columbus and the date 1492, says Collier's. Years later upon the death of the original purchasers, a large number of these souvenirs came into the possession of descendants and others, many of whom, believing they owned "a clock brought over by Columbus," sought an estimate of its value from clock authorities and antique dealers, only to be disillusioned.

A Church Spire at Sunset

Grace Noll Crowell

ABOVE the city street a church's spire is climbing its bright ladder to the sky. The steeple's slates glow red, its tip is fire. A single burning finger there, and high above that peak a flying white dove swings. A scarlet light upon its lifted wings.

These are God's emblems, and they call to men

Above the darkening shadows of the street, Beckoning to them, bidding them hope again, Bidding them stay a moment their swift feet, Calling to them to lift their eyes, and there, Seeing that pointing finger, breathe a prayer, And the white bird flying heavenward bids them cease

The clamor of their hearts and find His peace.

Research Pooled by Small Firms in United Kingdom

Early every morning 40 men hurry through the massive front door of a creper-clad country manor near the little town of Stoke Poges, in Buckinghamshire, England. Until 6 p. m., when they leave, they are secluded. No one may visit the building during the day without a special permit.

Through the mullioned windows of the Edwardian house can be seen a strange assortment of testing machines and special apparatus—glass tubes, copper coils and drilling needles.

Vital discoveries for the future are in the making here. The 40 men are working out top-secret industrial processes. They are highly-trained scientists—some of the best in Britain—and they form the staff of Fulmer Research Institute, a new private research center for the small manufacturer.

Many progressive industrial firms in Britain cannot afford to build their own laboratories for experimenting on new inventions and developments. Yet their projects are too specialized to be handled on a big scale by government research centers.

Fulmer Research Institute has solved this problem. Small industries now can "hire" fully-equipped laboratories and a team of first-rate scientists to explore their new ideas.
