There are many millions who take either a keen or a casual interest in what happens day by day in baseball. But these have nothing like the passionate interest some three or four million golfers have in reducing their score.

Baseball's major interest belongs to spectators. Golf's major interest belongs to the players and competitors. Golf is one of the greatest health-making and training games of all time for the multitude.

Baseball is one of the greatest fan games or mental relaxations for the crowd, minus any physical aid. The golfer's interest is largely personal. "How can I chop off a stroke or two," asks Bill Brown, "so I can trim that fathead, Jack Smith, who makes me play him even?"

There are things you can do or at least try. For example here are tips that came direct from Harry Vardon: "Vardon gave me a great tip," Walter Hagen told me one day. "It was about playing shots from heavy rough or from the sand in bunkers. I used to go into the rough or walk into a bunker gripping a niblick as if it were a matter of life or death. It meant power."

"Don't do that," Vardon told me. "Grip the club lightly or gently in your hands. Get the full play of your hands and wrists. Eliminate tension, as far as you can. Most people in trouble, in the rough or the bunker, nearly always develop too much tension. This is the spot where you can't afford tension. Just ease up."

Another Vardon tip came years ago from a British publisher whose short game was phenomenal.

"I'll tell you who helped me," he said. "It was Vardon on chip shots. Vardon showed me how to pick out a spot or a target just an inch ahead of the ball. This helped me to chip or swing through the ball. It prevented stabbing or jabbing."

"Vardon is an amazing man," the publisher said, "on the simple side of the game. He doesn't use a straight left arm. He breaks his left elbow, bends it. But his left arm is straight at impact. That is when it counts. That is where almost everything that counts takes place. At impact."

On chip shots you might try the Vardon system—picking out a spot an inch beyond the ball as the target.

Golf Is Personal

Golf is your game. To a large degree baseball, football and boxing are someone else's game. Golf is the playing game. Tennis is a playing game. The others are spectator's games.

How can you pare away that extra stroke or two—maybe three or four strokes? Here are just a few more tips:

BEN HOGAN: "At the finish of my swing, the right hand is in control. The left hand is important until the final smash."

"But I can give you another good tip. It concerns putting. Most putts are missed because there is knee-and-body motion when you stroke the ball. I concentrate on locking my knees so there can be no knee-and-body motion. Putting belongs entirely to the hands and wrists. Keep the body still and then stroke the ball. But concentrate on stroking the ball."

GENE SARAZEN: "The big weakness in golf is the tension most golfers develop in being too slow. They say golf is not a game of motion. It is with me. I hit a drive. Then as I walk up to the ball I make up my mind on the club I need. That won't take over a second or two."

"It's the same way on the green. Don't hurry. But don't get tied up. Keep moving. When you've decided on the club you need, forget everything else. Concentrate on that club only. But never hurry any swing."

"Here is an excellent tip. Never hurry any swing or any part of a swing. You can loaf on your backswing. But it is more important to loaf on your downswing."

Delay in Downswing

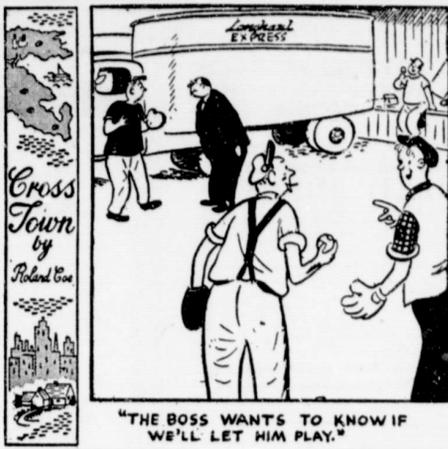

"In my opinion," Tommy Armour has told me several times, "the delay in the downswing is the most single important feature in golf. This was a big factor in Vardon's swing, the finest swinger I ever saw play. It was a big feature in Bobby Jones' swing in his later campaigns, I mean after 1922. Hagen was never in a hurry. He was a magnificent timer."

"I wonder how many golfers know they start their downswing before they finish their backswing? They simply can't wait to hit the ball. They get about two-thirds back and then the downswing starts."

"I would say this is the biggest common weakness in golf. The main idea is not to hurry anything. You can loaf on your backswing—you can loaf on your downswing. Not too much, but enough to keep everything smooth. Don't ever rush that downswing. That even goes for chip shots."

"Lawson Little came to me once for lessons before he went abroad to play in the British Amateur championship," the former champion continued. "I did only one thing for him. I got Lawson to delay his downswing. That's all. Nothing else. Just take a little more time on starting his downswing. Lawson won the British Amateur twice in succession and later won the U. S. Open."

No golf instructor can give you too many things to watch at a time. As a rule just one thing is enough.

"THE BOSS WANTS TO KNOW IF WE'LL LET HIM PLAY."

HOW IT STARTED
WET YOUR WHISTLE: In England, long ago, it was popular to use a cup which had a whistle. The drinker blew into the handle and created a piercing blast whenever the tankard needed refilling. Such cups were popular in the age of the poet Chaucer, who wrote in his Canterbury Tales: "So was her jolly whistle wet."
 Partridge's dictionary of slang defines a drinking cup fitted with a whistle as a "whistle cup" and says the last drinker capable of blowing the whistle received the cup as a prize.
 The same dictionary states that whistle is slang for mouth or throat, thus to wet the whistle is to take a drink.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE
 by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: How can I put a maple finish on an unpainted wooden table?
ANSWER: First rub down the wood with fine sandpaper and steel wool until the surfaces are smooth and "satin"-like; then wipe off the dust with turpentine. If you wish to have an orange maple color, you can get this effect by the application of two coats of pure orange shellac. The first coat should be thinned half-and-half with denatured alcohol. For other shades, apply an oil stain, selecting the color that you prefer from a color-card at your local paint store. Apply the stain as directed on the label and finish with two coats of quick-drying varnish.

QUESTION: The mortar is powdering between the bricks of our chimney. How can I repair it?
ANSWER: Clean out the old mortar to a depth of half an inch or so, wet the grooves with water, then pack with a mixture of 1 part portland cement, 1 part hydrated lime and 5 parts of clean coarse sand with just enough water to make a workable mixture.

Open Letter to All Oil Burner Owners

Dear Mr. Oil Burner Owner:

While oil companies are expanding their facilities so enormously that almost any future demand can be met, it will be wise, nevertheless, to help facilitate deliveries by your oil dealer wherever you can.

One way of doing this is to install a second fuel oil tank in your basement to double your storage capacity and, then, to have your oil dealer fill both tanks this summer. This will mean added convenience for you too.

We have oil storage tanks available for immediate installation. Be prepared for next winter, and help your oil dealer at the same time. Phone us today. The number is 20 Kewaskum.

Warmly yours,

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman's 'Non-Political' Tour in West Breaks Precedents, Also Hits Snags; Senate Fights to Recover Aid Slash

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of the newspaper.

ODDS ON SECURITY... Seeking to end what he termed a 'desperate gamble' with the nation's security, Sen. Charles McNary (Rep., S. D.) (left) opened senate debate on the measure to draft youths aged 19 through 25. Chairman of the senate armed services committee, Gurney here is discussing the draft bill with Senators Leverett Saltonstall (Rep., Mass.) and Richard B. Russell (Dem., Ga.).

NON-POLITICAL: Truman's Tour

President Truman's "non-political" swing through the West could be described as non-political only in the sense that Mr. Truman, as a candidate for Democratic re-nomination, had jettisoned many of the rules of standard party politics.

It was a lone wolf fight he was waging—going over the heads of party leaders to talk directly to the people. And most of what he had to say to the people concerned the Republican inaction and what he termed its inaction.

In Chicago, speaking before the Swedish Pioneer Centennial association, he hammered out a platform upon which he can be expected to base his chances for re-nomination.

Specifically, he lashed out at the idea that communism can be legislated out of existence.

From Chicago the President, with his entourage, headed for the heart of the farm belt, Omaha, Neb., and it was there that he was set sharply back on his heels.

He continued his lambasting of the Republican congress—this time concentrating on GOP farm policies—in a speech at the Ak-Sar-Ben coliseum in Omaha. Fantastically, in the coliseum which has a capacity of 10,000, fewer than 2,000 persons were present to hear Mr. Truman talk.

This phenomenon was variously interpreted. Some said the President's box office appeal had wilted. Others claimed the Nebraska Democratic machine had done a miserably inadequate job in promoting his appearance.

Probably closer to the truth was the plain fact that the "non-political" label of the presidential trip had backfired seriously. He made a political speech and had expected to get a crowd of friendly Democrats to fill the hall for the occasion.

But the White House previously had told the Democratic organization in Omaha to lay off the political hoop-la, and the organization acted in compliance with those instructions. Payoff came when no body else showed up to fill the aching void which the Democrats created by staying away.

It was an unpleasant blow for the campaigning Mr. Truman and one that might produce grave political repercussions.

But the President was resilient. And in a more or less happy frame of mind he left Omaha on his train and rode away into the setting sun in search of happier hunting grounds.

Among the date issues that arose during the senate debate was the old bugaboo of civil rights. After an abortive two-hour filibuster by southern Democrats, the senate voted 37 to 35 to outlaw the poll tax as a requirement for voting in federal elections so far as members of the armed forces are concerned.

Actually, it was a minor issue, inasmuch as most of the seven southern poll tax states still have in effect wartime suspensions of the tax for members of the armed services.

Under the senate measure the draft would be authorized for five years, but the program is left flexible enough so congress each year could raise or lower both the regular and reserve forces to meet shifting world conditions.

Drafted men, after completing two years of service, would have to serve in the reserve for five years or, as a matter of choice, volunteer for an additional year in the regular services or two years in the national guard.

Earlier experiments with jet-driven propeller aircraft have shown that speeds well in excess of that for standard engines can be attained.

Indications are that the AAF is trying to achieve a bomber with a speed somewhere between the true jet's 600-mile-an-hour velocity and the 200- or 250-mile-an-hour cruising speed for heavy bombers.

To date jet bombers have fallen considerably short of the 4,200-mile range of the B-29 or the estimated 4,000-mile range of the B-36.

MINE TALKS: More Snags

As usual John L. Lewis was mining the latest series of contract discussions between him and representatives of the soft coal mine operators.

The explosive UMW chief planted this time was a demand that the operators first guarantee welfare aid for distressed miners before they can expect his union to sign a new contract.

Thus, the "Lewis situation" in the United States was being brought to the fore again.

Already the possessor of enough government injunctions to paper the den of his Springfield, Ill., home, Lewis received another one before he would consent to bargain with the operators on a new 1948-49 contract. (The old contract expires June 30.)

U. S. District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough issued the latest injunction ordering Lewis to bargain with the Southern Coal Producers association. The mine chief previously had refused to bargain with the association because the 14 member groups were being represented at the contract talks by just one man.

However, Lewis bowed to the injunction and agreed to talk.

In the course of this talk one of the first things he did was to call the mine operators "fat cats" and then gave an arrogant claim at them with these words:

"We assume that you would deplore any impairment of your abnormal income after July 1. Such an assumption would seem to be a logical predicate for the making of a new wage agreement before that date."

Briefly, it looked as though Lewis was determined to strike again. Deprived of one snag, he immediately grasped another. As a result the first round of contract talks was fruitless.

Secretary of State Marshall stated that the Gearhart bill would destroy the substance of the reciprocal trade theory, a theory which is not only the cornerstone of our general foreign trade policy, but the principle which we have insisted must be followed by nations participating in the European recovery program.

The secretary said that "only the shadow of the original act would be preserved in the substitute bill proposed by Representative Gearhart, while its substance would be destroyed."

He pointed out that any serious weakening of the trade agreements act at this critical period in world affairs would almost certainly be regarded by other countries not only as a surrender of our leadership in the international economic field, but as a repudiation of much that has been accomplished under our leadership in that field.

Presumably he meant this: When we agreed to the European recovery plan (E.C.A.), one of the things we emphasized, demanded in fact, was that the countries receiving our aid would have to break down tariff barriers against each other and the rest of the world. We knew there couldn't be economic recovery if there was not a free flow of world trade.

Even before the E.C.A. was ever thought of—since 1934, as a matter of fact—by vigorously pursuing the reciprocal idea, by concluding reciprocal trade treaties with so many countries (we have them with all but six or seven of the Marshall plan participants) we have encouraged the world to reduce tariff walls. Thus it would hardly seem consistent suddenly to reverse ourselves and go back to the old days of high tariff economic isolationism.

The measure as the house presented it had another drawback in the eyes of Secretary Marshall and supporters of his point of view. The bill would force the President either to accept the recommendations of the federal tariff commission on adjustments above or below a certain bracket or submit them to a congressional veto. That sounds reasonable in theory, but what it does is to smash absolutely the whole basis for reciprocal trade negotiation.

A nasty little joker in the measure stating that tariff commission recommendations must be made on the principle of protecting the special interests concerned revealed the intent of its framers. That provision would destroy the purpose of negotiation by removing trade agreements from the field of the "general good" and narrowing them down to a question of whether the particular industry is to be protected from competition. Thus, not only would international relations and conditions have to be ignored entirely, but broad national interests as well.

Secretary Marshall used strong words in criticizing this clause when he said: "The bill, in effect, makes pure protection the sole criterion for tariff action."

Very few groups outside of the big industries which want to keep down foreign competition oppose the reciprocal trade program. The great majority of the chambers of commerce are for it. Earl Shriver, national president of the Chamber of Commerce, has said that any Henry Wallace said he didn't mean it when he said no children should be born on marginal land farms. We always have to account for marginal errors in political speeches, and other matters too.

Be sure your new bicycle has a light and horn. Good bicyclists, (if they expect to last) should be seen and heard as well.

Washington Digest

Reciprocal Trade Is Vital To Well-Being of the World

By BAUKHAGE

News Editor

WASHINGTON.—Despite the spirited battle over extension of the reciprocal trade agreement authority, nothing which even its best friends could hope to do about it would be definitive, for every-one knew from the start that final action must be postponed until next year.

Reciprocal trade agreements have been a definite part of our foreign trade policy for 14 years. If they were of any value in the past, they are of even more value now. But with an election a little more than four months off and congress trying to break a log jam of legislation, lengthy debate on the subject was impossible.

Putting it backwards, the reciprocal trade agreement policy is this: If a country is prevented by a high tariff wall from selling to us, it can't get the dollars to buy from us. Or, if the country has borrowed money from us, it can't get the dollars to pay us back. That's what happened after World War I, and the breakdown in foreign trade was one of the great factors in bringing on depression.

But that isn't the only thing that tariff walls do. They tend to force isolationism, extreme nationalism on a country and behind the tariff walls, as ex-Secretary of State Cordell Hull used to say so often, grow the roots of war.

Secretary of State Marshall stated that the Gearhart bill would destroy the substance of the reciprocal trade theory, a theory which is not only the cornerstone of our general foreign trade policy, but the principle which we have insisted must be followed by nations participating in the European recovery program.

The secretary said that "only the shadow of the original act would be preserved in the substitute bill proposed by Representative Gearhart, while its substance would be destroyed."

The Great Game

PHILADELPHIA.—If sheer noise and enthusiasm are any criterion, if size of delegations and visitors is a yardstick, if bands and speeches and parades and demonstrations are a measuring rod—then this 24th quadrennial Republican national convention in historic Philadelphia convention hall tops them all. For this is the great game of American politics as it is played and played for keeps.

Back of all the noise and fun, however there is serious business, for there are many who will swear that the man who emerges as the nominee of this convention will be the next President of the United States.

Monday morning at the opening session, as Carroll Keenan of Kentucky, national chairman of the Republican party, called the convention to order for its temporary organization, there was a huge shout from the galleries and the delegates on the floor, and as the chairman presented the keynote, Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois, the temporary chairman, another tumultuous outburst greeted this favorite son of the Sucker state.

Tuesday morning was spent in organization of the convention, the seating of the various delegations on report of the credentials committee and report of the platform committee. Tuesday evening the permanent chairman of the convention, Speaker Joe Martin, took over and made his address.

On Wednesday the roll call of states for the nomination for the presidency started.

For more than a week prior to official convening of the convention the huge resolutions committee composed of two delegates from each state has been busy writing the platform upon which the nominees will base their plea before the American people.

Senator Taft made a pre-convention statement declaring that every plank should be specific so that the Democratic convention, when it comes along next month, must also be specific, particularly with relation to civil rights.

Senator Taft, while he did not go so far as to hamstring entirely the reciprocal trade law, wants it curtailed to a one-year extension with some congressional strings tied to it.

Prior to the vice-presidential nomination there was considerable talk throughout the convention hall about Governor Warren of California and even Governor Green of Illinois. Both Senators Lodge and Saltonstall of Massachusetts; Democratic Senator Byrd of Virginia, who voted more Republican than Democratic in the senate; Senator Baldwin of Connecticut; Congressman Halleck of Indiana and others were put forth as likely candidates for the vice-presidency.

One factor which bothered the platform committee considered was what to do about the long list of issues which the 80th congress neglected to pass before recessing for the convention. Social security, housing, agriculture, national health, federal aid to education, a new minimum wage law and other issues are included in the list. Should the convention depend on congress to go back to Washington and clean up its program before election or should they regard the issues as closed insofar as this congress is concerned.

That these subjects will be campaign issues is positive since President Truman has needed congress on them in special messages and dwell at length on their neglect in his swing across the country.

Down in Washington the other day Paul Hoffman, boss of the ECA who has billions to spend for European recovery, and John Huber of New York, chairman of the house appropriations committee who deals in billions in appropriations, lunched together in the house restaurant. Both reached into their pockets to pay the check. It didn't make any difference about who out-fumbled whom, for neither had enough money to pay the tab.

Senator Taft is learning to play. At a Washington cocktail party attended by this reporter, the senator actually was seen to laugh heartily and to tell a funny story or two himself. Taft's official mien is that of a man who is all business and no fooliness; but the fact that he can relax from that attitude is a healthy sign in the man who conceivably could be our next president. It was a revelation to those who have considered Taft only as an automaton.

Russian Composers Charge Hollywood Stole Their Music

MOSCOW.—Four of Russia's best known composers are accusing a Hollywood film firm of pirating their compositions to use in the movie, "The Iron Curtain."

They are Dmitri Shostakovich, Serge Prokofieff, Aram Khatchaturian and Nicholai Miskovsky. The Soviet newspaper Izvestia published their charges.

SANTA BARBARA, CALIF.—An 11-year-old boy, apparently bitter against society because his face was scarred in an explosion, was charged with attempting to wreck two trains.

Authorities found a large piece of scrap iron, a can of bottles and a 30-pound rock on the Southern Pacific tracks.

The boy will be placed in an institution for treatment.

SAN FRANCISCO.—San Francisco police, who for weeks sought Charles H. Largey on a $250 worthless check charge, found him—and got the surprise of their life.

Largey turned out not to be a "he" but a "she"—a female ex-convict.

Police inspectors, acting on a tip, arrested Largey and took him to the rest room to "frisk him." It was then that "he" confessed that "she" was Miss Billie Larue.

She told police: "I always wanted to be a man. When I'm not in prison, I always go as one."

Beauty Culture

As Pegler Sees It

By Westbrook Pegler
Released by WNU Feature

THE best answer that the New York Herald Tribune has been able to offer to observations on its party line and the dominant personalities in the strange new household of this fine old Church of England paper, has been an essay by John Crosby, who does the radio column. I would not go as far as to say that the party line of the H-T is also the party line of the Daily Worker. There are some points at which a professional Muscovite ideologue can make out a charge of first-degree here and there in which I can detect no positive H-T line at all.

I find Crosby, of the radio column of the H-T, at loss for answers to revelations of embarrassing facts regarding his paper.

He speaks of me as an aging journalist, as aren't we all, and far from resenting this impudence I take this opportunity to observe that Mrs. Helen Rogers Reid, who now runs the H-T or thinks she runs it, looks prettier than ever since her hair turned white and her age turned 60. I hope I have her vigor at her age. Even so, I find in the reference to the stately march of time, no answer to points of allegation by me about the H-T.

What I said was that Joseph Herzberg, the city editor, in his official capacity appeared on an radio program as the guest of William S. Gailmor, a thief, a renegade of journalism and of the clergy of his faith and a preacher of the Communist line in the United States.

The certified text of this broadcast confirmed the fact that Herzberg either was, or falsely conveyed an impression that he was, an old friend of Gailmor, calling him "Bill and being called "Joe."

Just by would have it a that I am out of customary, in the radio business, for the performer to use the familiar "Bill" and "Joe" form, even though they be strangers.

He says that Bing Crosby calls Jimmy Durante "Schnozzola," but I have to fault him there because Bing Crosby and Jimmy Durante are not strangers as he would have us believe that Herzberg and Gailmor are.

Long experience in the analysis of Communist documents and editorials prompts the observation that Crosby denies nothing. He doesn't dare to say that Gailmor and his city editor were strangers who had just shaken hands. I might nail him on that. But he tosses out the idea. That seems to be the character of the Herald Tribune now.

I went further and pointed out that although the H-T had given Gailmor praiseful publicity as a leading worker in the political campaign of Henry Wallace, it had not once mentioned the evil facts of his career. I find that the defense offered by Crosby entirely avoids that important issue.

I do note on the positive side, however, an attitude in Crosby which is important to the people who read so much about New York, Hollywood and Washington and especially about the night life.

He says that Pegler spends much of his time in Arizona, as though, in the ancient flippancy of George M. Cohan, "When you're away from old Broadway, you're only camping out."

The last one who made a similar criticism was a Washington comic journalist who thought I should be spending more time in the capital. We have people in Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia and Tennessee, states which I have just canvassed. And I would say, as Americans, they are much better people per capita than the people of New York. Fewer of them squaled for American high-school boys to go over and slaughter Germans. THEY LET NEW YORK DO THE SQUALING.

But when the fighting came off, fewer of them, proportionately, got away with ruptured eardrums, as that heroic celebrity of Crosby's radio, Frank Sinatra, did; or got away with that certain "mental attitude" which was noted in the case of another great New Yorker, Danny Kaye.

THE NEW LOOK

By WILLIAM CUTHBERT

JOE KAUFMAN stood in front of the mirror. Two years in the penitentiary hadn't taken the plumpness from his body nor the color from his cheeks. The tint of silver about his temples was becoming, and the change from drab, loose fitting prison gray to tailor-made banker's gray gave him confidence.

"I've got that new look, Pinky," he said to the man who had been his cellmate during his first year of confinement.

"Don't get any new ideas, Joe," Pinky said as he sat on the edge of the bed, "you better do like I'm doin'; go straight!"

"Hogwash," Joe laughed. "The cops have me figured as a counterfeiter, but I'm giving up that angle. They'll never suspect me of being a stickup man."

Pinky stood up. He was tall like Joe, but thin. "If you won't take the job I've got for you, Joe, then this is good-by."

Joe was thoughtful for a minute, then he said, "So you don't know who is putting out that new batch of counterfeiters, eh?"

"I thought you said you were givin' up counterfeiting," Pinky snapped.

"I am," Joe assured him. "I guess it's just professional jealousy to hear that someone else is putting out stuff that is almost perfect."

"All I know is that you've got to use a magnifying glass to find the flaws," Pinky told him.

"Let's see," Joe mused. "Batsom is still up the river, Jaeger and Sims are in South America, Pete and Wilson have dropped out of sight and nobody knows where they've vanished to, and Barody stopped a bullet when the cops raided his plant. It just can't be any of the old gang. Somebody new must have moved in."

Pinky shook his head and said, "You'll learn that you can't win on the wrong side of the fence, but I'm afraid it will be too late. Good-by, Joe."

Joe dismissed his former cellmate with a wave of his hand. Plans already were forming in his mind for the first holdup.

News had drifted into the prison that Lee Stanley was going places, and fast. Lee had been only a petty racketeer a few years back, and Joe never had liked him, but apparently Lee had found a way to become big-time. He was the new owner of the Roxy night club, and Joe knew it for a swanky place.

Joe snapped his fingers. He knew the layout of the Roxy. It would be easy to get to Lee's office, and it would give him satisfaction to get hold of some of Lee's profits.

He went to the closet and found the hidden wall hole he had made before his arrest. The revolver and a box of cartridges were still there. They were about the only things the police hadn't found.

With a handkerchief and a piece of wire, Joe cleaned the barrel, then loaded the chamber in case he should have to use it.

Then he turned to the window and looked outside. Sergeant Cain was on the corner leaning against a telegraph pole. Joe was annoyed, but not disheartened. The cops always put a man on you after you did a stretch up the river. And this was the same copper who had caught him with a pocketful of counterfeit bills two years before.

It would be several hours before he would be able to go to the Roxy, so Joe decided to play with the detective before losing him.

When Joe stepped out onto the pavement, he saw Sergeant Cain straighten up. He walked to a restaurant, and took his time ordering and eating, noticing that the sergeant was keeping a hungry eye on him outside the window.

Joe then spent a couple of hours in a cheap movie, and was aware that Sergeant Cain was sitting only a few rows behind him.

Then he decided it was time to give the detective the slip. He was followed from the theater, but kept his eyes open as he walked along the street. Suddenly he saw of a stack of crisp, new twenty dollar bills on top of the desk.

Dismissing his voice, Joe said, "Be a good guy and don't act up, or you'll get hurt," as he moved cat-like toward the desk. But he knew Lee was going to get hurt.

Working with precision, Joe's left hand scooped up the money, and his right hand brought the gun barrel down across Lee Stanley's head.

He jammed the twenties into his pockets and tiptoed to the door. With a quick glance he saw that no

With a quick movement he was inside the cab and snapping orders to the driver.

what he was waiting for, a cruising taxicab.

With a quick movement he was inside the cab and snapping orders to the driver.

The taxi leaped forward, and Joe looked out of the rear window in time to see Sergeant Cain waving to a taxicab that was traveling in the opposite direction. Joe's taxi turned half a dozen corners before he was definitely satisfied that he had lost Sergeant Cain. Then he had the driver take him to within a half block of the Roxy.

Joe worked his way cautiously to the back of the night club. He smiled when he saw the fire escape. It was the kind that needed weight to carry the bottom section down to the ground.

Joe climbed a rainspout and reached out and grabbed the side rail. As he rode the section to the ground, the rusty iron's screech filled the night, and Joe stood still for a full minute, waiting to learn if anyone inside had heard the sound.

He decided finally that the other noises out in the street had drowned out the sound. He went up the steps until he reached a window which opened into a corridor. He forced the window without too much trouble and climbed inside.

Music was playing out on the dance floor and the sound of laughing voices penetrated the walls, but nothing stirred in the corridor.

Joe tied a handkerchief over his mouth and nose, and pulled his hat down over his eyes. He glanced around to refresh his memory, and smiled. Apparently this was to be one of his lucky nights. He saw the light through the glass in the door of the room he sought, and shoved the door open.

Started, Lee Stanley looked up from behind a desk at the gun which Joe held in a steady hand. There he had entered the corridor, then he ran to the window.

There was no way of knowing how much money he had in his pockets, but he felt sure that it was enough for him to leave the city and have a free and easy life for a few months.

A half hour later, as Joe stepped into his room, he was chucking to himself. He envisioned Sergeant Cain hurrying about the city trying to pick up his trail.

He switched on the lights, then froze. Sergeant Cain was leaning against the wall, toying with his Colt police positive.

"What—what do you want?" Joe stammered.

"The way you gave me the slip," Sergeant Cain said, "I figured you were anxious to contact that new counterfeiting gang. Also figured the best place to pick you up was right here."

Joe relaxed and sat on the bed. He said, "I'm through with counterfeiting." At the same time he eased the gun from his hip pocket and deftly pushed it under the pillow.

"How about if I see what you have in your pockets?" Sergeant Cain asked.

Joe stood up and smiled. He had nothing to fear. The detective had no way of knowing where the money came from, and he felt sure that Lee Stanley wouldn't report the holdup to the police. He didn't know how Lee had become big-time, but he was sure his method wasn't honest, and he wouldn't want the law pegging into his business.

Sergeant Cain found the twenty dollar bills and stepped back a safe distance from Joe. He took a small magnifying glass from his pocket and examined a twenty.

Instead of giving the bills back to Joe, he stuffed them into his own pockets and said, "You sure work fast, Joe. Loaded with counterfeit money already. Come on, you're going to headquarters."

"Counterfeits!" Joe gasped. Thoughts began to race through his mind. So that was how Lee Stanley had become big-time! He was using a printing press—and if Joe told the police where he got the money, his life wouldn't be worth a dime.

Sergeant Cain snapped a pair of handcuffs on his wrists.

Joe looked at his tailored clothes and realized he was about to lose that new look.

As he started to walk toward the door, he wondered if Pinky would keep that job open for him, for a couple of years?

Tricks for Teens
By NANCY PEPPER

Trixie Teen Says—
Life for a teen not only has its ups and downs; it has its INS and OUTS. Being IN the smooth crowd and the big doings can make your four years of high school the "Best Years of Your Life." Being OUT of them can make them seem like 40 years of solitary confinement. You don't need a key to get IN; you need a good personality, a smooth appearance, a spirit of cooperation—and, maybe, a little more aggressiveness than you've been able to muster up until now. Once you make the effort, you'll see the results. Instead of eking out a day-to-day existence, you'll be riding a date-to-date merry-go-round.

Vaunted Maginot Line Reverts to Pasture
PARIS—Once highly vaunted as an impregnable defense, the Maginot line now has reverted to the status of a pasture. The French government has offered for rent as pasture the sections of land in which the Maginot line was built and through which the German panzer divisions pushed so rapidly in 1940. Some of the old fortifications can be seen from the highway.

Male Grouse Termed Vain as Any Female
WASHINGTON—The male grouse is more vain than any female. Authority for that assertion is government scientists of the fish and wildlife service.

All we have to do is stick a mirror in a wire box trap and we can catch all the male grouse we want," insists Dr. Bennett Logan. In the past, Logan asserts, grouse have been so hard to catch that little is known of their habits, especially as to why 80 per cent of them die off every 10 years.

As a phase of its present campaign, the wildlife service is building better grouse traps in order to band the legs of the birds.

To determine where to put the grouse traps, all a scientist has to do is listen to the grouse "booming." Twice a year the male picks out an old log as his "territory." There he stands for days, beating his wings to attract the female.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

JEAN ARTHUR has a way of stamping a role as her own so definitely that it is impossible to imagine anyone else playing it as well. Returning to the screen in "A Foreign Affair," she has taken on an assignment that many actresses would shun. She plays a dowdy, too earnest woman who loses her head completely when a handsome man makes love to her. True, the young man is John Lund, who is much like Clark Gable in Gable's younger days. Marlene Dietrich completes the trio. Most of the picture was shot in Berlin, and while it is a comedy, there are serious undertones.

Errol Flynn is turning sports-caster when he fills in for Bill Stern on the "Sports Newsreel" July 23 while Stern is in London for the Olympics. Stern may relate his sports stories at the Palladium, for $4,500 weekly.

Anne Burr, menace on "Big Sister," did three unsuccessful auditions in an attempt to break into radio. So she turned to Broadway, and appeared in five plays. The last, "The Hasty Heart," took John Lund and Richard Basehart to Hollywood and gave Anne a leading role—without an audition. Because of her deep voice, she draws many "menace" roles.

Lowell Thomas, veteran CBS newscaster, is investigating the possibilities of short-wave broadcasting from Palestine if he goes there this summer to do a series of on-the-spot broadcasts, but nothing is settled yet.

Nine-year-old Luana Patten, featured in Walt Disney's "Melody Time" and "So Dear to My Heart," will mingle with real-life characters in her next picture, a Universal comedy with Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray.

Jane Wyman has sold her first oil painting. She was inspired by the beauty of the California coast when she went on location for "Johnny Belinda." The price was $150. The frame cost Jane $4.

Jerry Wayne, a singing star a few years ago, is singing his way back to the top. You heard him on "The Ed Wynn Show," "The Hit Parade" and "The Jerry Wayne Show," now he is acting as manager of ceremonies and singing five times a week on CBS. It is a "varley show," with a vocal or instrumental guest star each evening.

Barbara Bel Geddes, who did so little in "I Remember Mama," will have a real chance to display her undeniable talent as an actress in RKO's "Bed of Roses." She will play a youthful, captivating woman who uses her charm ruthlessly—what actress wouldn't jump at that role! She went to Hollywood after making a hit on Broadway, and should be a big star there.

Odds and Ends . . . Three well-known names star NBC's summer list—Morton Downey, Jane Pickens and Jack Pearl . . . And two daytime serials have returned to the air—"Hilltop House" and "We Love and Learn." The latter permanently replaces "Katie's Daughters" . . . Wanda Hendrix, one of Hollywood's tiniest actresses, eats five meals a day, under a doctor's orders; meals were served every two hours on the set of "Now and Forever" . . . Ninety-one of Hollywood's most beautiful girls were screened at Warners for 48 roles as bathing girls in "The Girl from Jones Beach." Those who have seen the place won't recognize it!

In Earl Wrightson, "The Family Hour" has a male star for the first time, perhaps because he can do both popular and classical songs authentically. He was a regular member of the cast from May, 1945, to September, 1946, and has sung in opera, concert, a Broadway musical and television. Since he was in his teens he has paid for music lessons by holding a full-time job. The first was in a Baltimore bank, where he met his wife; they were in adjoining "cages."

Eye Arden says she has spent so much money on her summer wardrobe that she can't afford a vacation. She'll have a chance to wear the clothes when she does summer stock in California, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Thomas Gomez, 300-pound actor, suffered arm and leg bruises when he fell into the ocean from a raft in a scene for "Key Largo." The "ocean," however, was only 18 inches deep.

Baby Girl Sweater Falls To Fit Cocker Spaniel

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Two former school classmates met in a Terre Haute, Ind., elevator one day and began informing each other of the latest events in their lives.

Paul Hartwig remarked, "We have a beautiful four-month-old baby girl at our house. You must see her."

Mrs. Parker, who is Hartwig's former schoolmate, bought a little wool sweater for the baby and had it delivered to the Hartwigs.

She received a letter which thanked her for the gift but apologized: "Our baby won't be able to wear it. Our darling girl is a registered cocker spaniel!"

GOD'S PROMISES

OUT of an olden golden book I take bright words and weave them into a trusting thing:
A bow of promise for my own heart's sake,
A glory for my spirit's comforting,
And when the day is dark I see it there
Where I can see its colors on the air,
In fabric spun of God's own precious words,
His everlasting covenant to man.
It pierces through the darkest cloud, it girds
The whole of earth and heaven in its span:
These promises that I have set apart
Into a bow of comfort for my heart.

Holstein Breeders' Meet Draws Record Attendance

Close to six hundred (600) Holstein breeders attended the annual summer meeting of the Washington County Holstein Breeders association held at the Christ Mayer farm near Silver last Wednesday evening. This was the largest attendance, according to Chuck Brace, fieldman for the National Holstein Breeders association, at any county meeting in the state. Breeders from eight neighboring counties were present.

Ray East, Rockfield, who is president of the county association, served as chairman of the meeting and presided with appropriate comments. The speakers and local entertainers.

The program got under way with separate judging contest for the adults and for the junior. Winners of the adult contest were: Robert C. Schiller, Route 1, Slinger; Herman Engelreiter, West Bend, Route 3; Harry Endreia, Route 3, Hartford.

In the junior division the winners were: Harvey Pickard, Wm. Kurth, Don Lutz, Elizabeth Mabel, Wilbur Pamperin, Ralph Schaefer, Donna Dell, Armand Becker, Thomas Kuenzi, Roland Krueger.

The speaking program was presented within the barn where ample seating accommodations had been provided. Mr. Brace, after a few complimentary remarks showed two interesting motion pictures. The first such picture showed scenes taken at the state Holstein breeders picnic on the Pabst farm. This was of special interest insofar as many of the local Holstein breeders were in the picture. The other was a movie of how cattle were transported by means of aeroplanes. The film was an actual shipment of Wisconsin cattle from the Brace farm near Lone Rock, Wisconsin, to Guatemala.

Glen Housholder, director of the extension service of the national association at Brattleboro, Vermont, next spoke. He complimented the Mayer family for the excellence of their herd. He spoke at quite some length on the model cow of the future. He indicated that all breeds were trying to develop larger animals and with proper feeding, care and management will produce more milk than is now being produced. He predicted a decline in the number of livestock on the farms.

Entertainment was provided by Betty Mayer and Elizabeth Mabel, who presented several pleasing vocal duets and Beverly Mayer playing numbers on the piano accordion.

The attendance prize, a valuable seven week old bull calf, was won by Hiram Larson, an ex-serviceman and now operating the Wm. Meuschke farm, West Bend, Route 2.

Sandwiches and coffee, under the supervision of Mrs. Christ Mayer, were served to all present. The county Holstein breeders association extends their appreciation to the Mayer family and to all who helped make this the good and successful meeting it was. Mr. and Mrs. John Klumb and son Ronald of Town of Scott visited Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Rob. Rameil.
