

Naumann Nominee for Sheriff Over Baehring by 113 Votes

Holtebeck Victor Over Laubenstein; Only 241 Votes Cast in Village

The primary election Tuesday in Washington county was highlighted by the race for sheriff on the Republican ticket. In a close race, Sylvester "Fat" Naumann, Barton, won over Herbert "Fat" Baehring, West Bend, former sheriff, and Ruben C. Wittis, Hartford.

Naumann received 1,808 votes, 113 more than Baehring's 1,695. Wittis polled 1,842. Rufus Justman, who had no opposition on the Democratic ticket, received 335. The total vote for sheriff was 5,180, of which 4,415 were GOP votes.

The village of Barton, his home town, swept Naumann to victory with almost a unanimous ballot for him. He swamped Baehring, 355 to 18. That village gave Wittis 10 votes and Justman 13. The village of Barton was the last precinct to report. Before the village reported, Baehring led, 1,677 to 1,463 but the Barton total wiped out Baehring's lead and decided the race. Naumann also carried the village of Kewaskum by 59 votes. He polled 115 to 65 for Baehring and 21 for Wittis.

In the only other race for county office the incumbent assemblyman, Theodore Holtebeck, West Bend, defeated Harold Laubenstein, town of Barton, by the margin of 2,747 to 1,702. Clinton Laubenheimer, Democratic candidate, polled 325 votes. The total vote for assemblyman was 4,757. The remaining county officers were without opposition. The Democrats had no candidate for district attorney and there was a smattering of write-in votes, with Atty. Thomas O'Meara, West Bend, getting most of them.

Incumbent Gov. Oscar Rennebohm outdistanced his GOP opponent, Ralph M. Immell, in Washington county, 4,835 to 1,967. These candidates tied in the village of Kewaskum which gave each 105 votes. For governor on the Democratic ticket Carl W. Thompson beat Wm. D. Carroll in this county, 259 to 95.

The vote in the county was comparatively light. Following are the complete results:

Loraine Eberle Bride, Henry Backhaus Wed

The first day of autumn, Wednesday, Sept. 22, was chosen by Miss Loraine Eberle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Eberle, Kewaskum, for her marriage to Joseph Backhaus, son of Mrs. Josephine Slesar, also of this village. The young couple was wed by the Rev. F. C. La Buwi in a 9:30 a. m. ceremony in Holy Trinity church before an altar adorned with white gladioli.

The bride was attended by Miss Mary Slesar, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor. Bridal aides were Miss Lois Koch and Miss Marjorie Schmidt, friends of the bride, and Mrs. Rosemary Slesar, sister-in-law of the groom.

Frank Slesar served as his brother's best man. Ushering the guests to their places were Vincent Polyak, cousin of the groom, Homer Schaub and Leonard Peter, friends.

The bride was gowned in a gown of white slipper satin with net yoke trimmed with French lace bertha caught at intervals with slivers of beads. The very full skirt featured a lace peplum. A matching French lace double held the full length veil of bouffant illusion. She carried white orchids, stephanitis and miniature gardenias in a cascade arrangement.

The maid of honor wore a gown of American Beauty satin. The bridesmaids had a stole effect neckline and the full skirt gathered in front to tiny bows. She wore a matching satin bonnet trimmed with aqua flowers and carried a muf of satin with aqua flowers in a cascade arrangement.

The bridesmaids wore gowns identical to the maid of honor, only in aqua. American Beauty roses trimmed their hats and muffs.

The bride's mother wore a grey crepe gown and chose black accessories. The bridegroom's mother chose a green dress with light accessories. Both wore orchids. The bride's grandmother wore black with a corsage of white roses.

Dinner was served at the Cedars, Cedarburg, at 12 noon to 25 guests. Later a reception was held at the Bar-N-Ranch for 200 guests, after which the newlyweds left on a honeymoon trip to an undisclosed destination.

The bride is a graduate of Kewaskum High school and the Business Institute of Milwaukee. She had been employed at the Bank of Kewaskum. The groom, a graduate of West Bend High school, is engaged in business in West Bend where he has a glass shop.

BACKHAUS-ESSLINGER
Christ Lutheran church, Oshkosh, was the scene of a wedding ceremony at 4 p. m. Saturday, Sept. 18, in which Miss June Elizabeth Esslinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Esslinger, Oshkosh, became the bride of Henry O. Backhaus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Backhaus, Kewaskum. The Rev. H. H. Hoessel performed the nuptial rite. On each side of the altar were bouquets of chrysanthemums, palms and ferns and candelabra also trimmed the altar.

Organ music was played by Dennis Ehrlicke, noted radio organist. "At Dawning," "Gloria" and "The Lord's Prayer" were sung by Richard Barr. Throughout the ceremony "Serenade" from "A Student Prince" was played softly.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin with fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and a peplum effect at the waist. The long tapering sleeves were pointed at the wrists. The skirt was silk marquisette with a full train. The fingertip was edged in lace which held her head by a chantly lace open crown headpiece. With it she wore a string of pearls. The bride wore a cascade of white gladioli centered with a detachable natural orchid corsage. The cascade was trimmed with ivy.

Mrs. Jane Frank, the bride's twin sister, was matron of honor. Her gown was of green moire tulle with fitted bodice and was fashioned with a silk marquisette yoke with shirred bertha collar trimmed with silk marquisette. Soft covered buttons ran down the back of the dress. Bustle back trimmed the fitted gown with which she wore three-quarter length mitts of the same material. Her headpiece was a halo of green shirred marquisette with a Gibson Girl bow. With it she wore a pearl bracelet, a gift of the bride. Her flowers consisted of a cascade of orchid gladioli tied with an orchid ribbon. Ivy trimmed the cascade.

The bridesmaids wore Misses Germaine Esslinger and Betty Lou Esslinger, sisters of the bride, and Veronika Backhaus, sister of the bridegroom. Their gowns were identical to that worn by the matron of honor, only in orchid color. They also wore identical headpieces in orchid. All wore pearl bracelet gifts of the bride. The flowers were cascades of white gladioli trimmed with ivy and tied with a green ribbon.

Judith Ann Frank, niece of the bride, and Joanne Schmidt, niece of Large Crowd at St. Kilian Centennial

An 11 a. m. solemn high mass Sunday marked the centennial observance of St. Kilian's church at St. Kilian. More than 400 members filled the church and overflowed onto the parish grounds.

The people heard a sermon by the Rev. Peter K. Flasch, a son of the parish and pastor of St. Catherine's parish, Milwaukee. The priest is a relative of the Andrew Flasch family in whose home the first mass of the district was said 100 years ago.

Saying the prayers at the foot of the altar with the officers of the mass was Archbishop Moses E. Kiley, Milwaukee. He then left the altar for the sanctuary where he prayed the mass in cappa magna.

The Rev. Peter J. Burelbach, Jefferson, was celebrant of the mass; deacon, the Rev. Charles Mayers, Burlington; sub-deacon, the Rev. Michael Jacobs, Jefferson; master of ceremonies, the Rev. Francis Eschweiler, St. Michaels; thurifer, the Rev. Leo Skalitzky, Allenton.

Sixty members of the clergy were in attendance, among them Msgr. George A. Meyer of St. Leo's church, Milwaukee, Msgr. Joseph Lederer, St. Joseph's convent, Campbellsport, and Msgr. Edward Rokunkrich, Waukesha.

At a dinner attended by members of the clergy and invited guests after the mass, the archbishop spoke of the fine work done by St. Kilian's through its 100 years of growth. The dinner was prepared by the women of the parish.

Father Flasch dwelled briefly on the history of the parish in his sermon. He lauded the pioneers, priests and people who have worked for the parish during the last century, and spoke of the fine school and church building.

Assistants to the archbishop assisted at the mass. The Rev. Francis La Buwi, Kewaskum, was probyter assistant. The Rev. Anthony Bliwer, Campbellsport, and the Rev. Michael Groff, Theresa, were the chaplains. The Rev. Joseph Emmenegger of the chancery office in Milwaukee was master of ceremonies and Charles Straub and Donald Sarauer were pallbearers.

A social in the parish hall took place in the evening with more than 400 members and former members of the parish present.

Three sons of the parish, including Bishop Flasch, have gone into the priesthood, and 29 young women have entered the convent.

$15,000 Fire at Bauer Mill, Campbellsport

The Kewaskum firemen were called to Campbellsport about 1:45 a. m. on Tuesday where a fire believed to have been caused by an electrical short, caused a loss estimated at $15,000 to the feed grinding and mixing building of Bauer Bros. The blaze was under control when the local department arrived but the Kewaskum squad made a very hurried response to Campbellsport's call.

The north part of the building was gutted by the flames and damaged or destroyed with it were an elevator shaft, motors, bolts, supports, loading platform, machinery and a large amount of feed and minerals.

The structure will be rebuilt according to Floyd Bauer, manager of Bauer Bros.

Henry Schultz, Town of Auburn Farmer is Killed in Auto Crash

Henry Schultz, 75, town of Auburn farmer, residing on Route 3, Campbellsport, about three miles north of Kewaskum, was fatally injured at 4:20 p. m. Tuesday when the car he was driving crashed into a truck on County Trunk V, three miles north of this village. Schultz, a bachelor, was the 13th traffic fatality in Fond du Lac county this year.

Two witnesses told Traffic Officer Harry Rook of the Fond du Lac county police that Schultz was traveling north at a slow rate of speed. He approached the town road where he intended to turn off toward his home which is about a half mile west on the town road. Schultz is reported to have made a wide sweep off the highway and drove directly into the path of the truck which was operated by Robert Dreger, Milwaukee.

Dreger substantiated reports of the witnesses, Myron and Glenway Backhaus, R. 3, Kewaskum, and informed police that the trucker swerved his machine to the far right of the highway in an effort to avoid hitting the second car.

Schultz' auto was extensively damaged. The truck tipped over after ramming the front of the car and landed directly onto the rear of the Schultz machine. Coroner Joseph E. Murray of Fond du Lac county said there would be no inquest.

Schultz was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital, West Bend, in a Fond du Lac county ambulance and given emergency treatment. He failed to respond, however, and was pronounced dead at about 5 p. m. A Kewaskum physician who was called to the scene attributed Schultz' death to a skull fracture. The victim also suffered internal injuries.

Mr. Schultz was born in Milwaukee county on Nov. 7, 1872. He came to his home in the town of Auburn with his parents when a young child and lived on the same farm since.

The deceased is survived by a brother, William Schultz, of this village and nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held at 1:30 p. m. Friday from the Miller Funeral home and at 2 o'clock at the Peace Ev. and Reformed church, the Rev. Wm. Schwenmer officiating. Burial took place in the parish cemetery.

Pallbearers were Wm. Stagg, Herman Schurr, Robert Schurr, Roy Bartlett, Albert Frost and Arnold Baum.

OTHER ACCIDENTS REPORTED
A Milwaukee Veterans taxi cab, a 1947 De Sota sedan, driven by Kenneth W. Link, 25, of the Roosevelt Hotel, Milwaukee, was extensively damaged in an accident on County Trunk H. In the town of Wayne, three miles west of Kewaskum Sunday morning.

Traveling east, Link turned out at the crest of a hill when he met another car traveling in the opposite direction and driven by Gregor Wetzstein, R. 3, Kewaskum. The Wetzstein car was slightly to the left of its lane of traffic after the driver pulled over to avoid a third machine driven by Sylvester Campbell, who had halted in a farm driveway before driving onto the highway. In turning out Link's cab hit loose gravel, skidded along the ditch on the right side of the highway and across the road where it struck an embankment and rolled over. Link was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, West Bend, with a shoulder injury.

Cars driven by Peter Metz, Kewaskum route, and George Mathieu of Campbellsport were damaged slightly when they collided in front of Miller's Electric store on Main st. Tuesday morning, in making a U turn Metz failed to see the Mathieu car approaching and the two collided. Neither driver was injured.

TELEPHONE COMPANY INCREASES FACILITIES

NEW KEWASKUM SWITCHBOARD

A. J. Sukawaty, Mid-West States Telephone Company of Wisconsin, Inc. manager at Kewaskum, announced this week that a new two-position switchboard was installed here Sept. 9. The new Western Electric board replaces a one-position switchboard in service here for many years.

The installation was supervised by D. H. Carroll, state equipment supervisor of Commonwealth Telephone Co. which operates the Mid-West properties.

The extra position now available will allow two operators to handle calls during busy hours and doubles the number of conversations possible at one time. The new switchboard is equipped with 200 lines, 50 more than the old switchboard. The company's business office has been rearranged to accommodate the new switchboard, and improved lighting for switchboard operators has also been installed.

According to Mr. Sukawaty, long distance facilities have also been increased here this summer. The fifth and sixth long distance circuits between Kewaskum and West Bend were placed in operation on July 25.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

1948 Election Campaign Hits Stride As Democrats, GOP Vie for Labor; Soviets Aggravate Berlin Situation

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: What follows are expressed in three columns, they are those of the writer. The editor's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.

THE GOLDEN KEY . . . Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, beams as he accepts from former French Premier Robert Schuman a golden key as a symbol of France's temporary surrender of sovereignty over the Palais de Chaillot, where the U. N. general assembly opened on September 21. What treasures of peace that key might unlock this year is a question that gives pause to the entire world.

CAMPAIGN: Trumpets Sounded

Politicians cleared their throats as with the sound of trumpets, and as the 1948 presidential election campaign swept into motion.

The first skirmish between Democrats and Republicans featured President Truman and Harold E. Stassen, who carried the word of their respective parties into the great industrial area around Detroit.

THAT INDICATED that, for the time being at least, the pivotal factor directing the policies of both GOP and Democratic campaigns would be the labor vote.

To win the election this November Mr. Truman probably will need the same proportionate amount of the labor vote that turned out in favor of Roosevelt in the 1932, 1936 and 1940 campaigns. Whether he will get it is very much open to question at this stage.

Truman

Launching his battle for re-election in the Detroit area over the Labor Day week-end, President Truman fired at will.

AT GRAND RAPIDS, Lansing, Detroit, Pontiac and Flint he exhorted all the "little people" of the U. S. to register and vote in the November 2 election.

If a heavy vote turns out, he insisted, not only will he be re-elected, but the Republican majority in congress will be replaced by a Democratic one.

"IF YOU STAY home next November and keep these reactionaries in power, you will deserve every blow you get and you can expect a barrage of body blows," said Mr. Truman. This was a repetition of an idea—that "you'll get what you deserve"—which he had expressed earlier in the year and which, at the time, was received with some animosity by the people to whom he addressed it.

"You can elect a reactionary administration and go into an era of fear, or you can elect a congress and an administration that stand ready to play fair with every element of American life and enter an era of new hope. We're in a hard, tough fight against shrewd, rich opponents. They don't count on you vote; they just don't want you to vote."

Judging from his Labor Day speeches, President Truman is planning to shape his campaign around these contentions:

- 1. THAT THE MAIN issue boils down to Republican special privileges as against Democratic concern for the little man.
2. THAT THE "DO-NOTHING" 80th congress, under GOP control, has done nothing to justify its reelection.
3. THAT ANYTHING EXCEPT an all-out vote by labor on election day would be a betrayal by labor of its own interests.
4. THAT IF THE MASS of the nation's voters go to the polls on election day a Democratic victory is assured.

Stassen

Just a step and a half behind Mr. Truman came Harold E. Stassen, striving valiantly to scatter the coals of the bonfire the President had kindled in Detroit.

Apparently blessed by Thomas E. Dewey, GOP presidential candidate, Stassen's speech in the motor city was billed as the official kickoff of the Republican campaign.

Employment Record

The U. S. rounded the turn from summer to autumn with its civilian employment at the highest level in the history of the nation.

Approximately 61.5 million workers are employed, while the unemployed number only 2,227,000 as compared to more than 12 million during the gloomy depression years of the early 1930s. Personal prosperity now depends, however, on the impact of inflation.

Generally, the insidious inflationary forces operating in the ever rising costs of living have tended to offset the gain in employment and higher wages. "Creeping inflation" still is carrying consumer prices steadily upward, with danger to the entire economy and untold loss to workers," declared a survey by the American Federation of Labor which represents about seven million union workers.

Only optimistic note on inflation is that food prices might—just might—drop a little next year.

STASSEN SPARED no words in taking President Truman to task, referring to him as a "complaining" failure who had resorted to "demagogic appeals" in seeking reelection.

Specifically, he charged that Mr. Truman had "dishonored labor with an extreme demagogic appeal to set class against class."

In thus resorting to the time-honored political device of attacking and reproaching the opponent from a personal standpoint, Stassen had gone Mr. Truman one better. In his Detroit address the President did not even mention Thomas Dewey.

THE DEFEATED GOP aspirant for the party's nomination declared that Mr. Truman had come not to laud labor for its record, but "as a complaining candidate for election seeking labor's vote."

"His scolding, threatening, complaining speeches" indicated that he lacks the leadership "in affairs at home and abroad so vitally needed in these next crucial years," said Stassen.

"He failed when he had a Democratic congress to work with."

"He failed when he had a Republican congress to work with."

TURNING TO the political football which the election year has made of the issue of Communist activities in the U. S., Stassen asserted that the Republican party is "driving the red herring out of the official waters of the Potomac" by means of congressional inquiries into the Communist problem.

"Too many red herrings have been in Washington for too long a time," he blasted. "The President should help man the red herring nets instead of complaining against the fishermen."

BERLIN: More Trouble

There was, it appeared, no end to the Russian-sponsored trouble in Berlin, and it was having its grimly detrimental effect on the fiber of the peace.

Latest incident piled atop many other instances of petty Soviet encroachments, needed little more than a small flame to turn into a funeral pyre for what is left of world harmony.

IT WAS A FLAGRANT invasion of American offices in the Berlin city hall by armed Russian-controlled police who kidnapped 19 western sector policemen who had sought sanctuary in the building.

What the purpose of the raid were became quite clear. On the surface it looked like pure terrorism carried out as part of the overall Soviet plan eventually to get control of the entire German capital.

AN AMERICAN protest by Col. Frank Howley, American commandant in Berlin, was rejected bluntly by the Soviet commander, Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov, who flatly warned the U. S. officials "not to interfere in matters which don't concern them."

Kotikov's letter followed rejection of French protests that demanded the release of another 19 anti-Communist western sector policemen who were kidnapped by Soviet police while traveling in a French convoy under a Russian guarantee of safe conduct.

In the face of these intolerable developments, how could East-West negotiations for a Berlin agreement continue? Apparently they couldn't, except under almost impossible strain.

SECRETARY OF STATE George Marshall charged that the Berlin city hall kidnappings were aimed, at least in part, at disrupting the talks by the four military governors who were, ostensibly, seeking the road to a settlement of the Berlin problem and the issue of uniform currency.

Thus, it was easy to understand why U. S. diplomatic authorities were concerned with the possibility of an early collapse of the formal negotiations. It was likely that the Kremlin would be the first to flash the red light.

Fire at Will

Sen. George D. Aiken (Rep., Vt.) of the senate executive committee reported that 199,173 civilian employees were cut from the federal payroll between January 1, 1947, and July 1 of this year.

That reduction was achieved, he said, despite an increase of 27,490 employees in the agriculture and interior departments and the assignment of 43,306 to foreign aid and defense agencies.

CABINET: Sil Vous Plait

They couldn't find a government in France. As a political situation that appeared slightly ludicrous from across the Atlantic, but Frenchmen were becoming sorely worried for fear that they had lost the ability or power to govern themselves.

AFTER PREMIER Andre Marie's cabinet fell, President Vincent Auriol appointed Robert Schuman as premier and gave him the usual instructions to form a cabinet.

Schuman duly gathered together an administrative body and then, 64 hours later, watched it fall apart when he was defeated on a technical proposal to postpone questioning of the new cabinet by the national assembly. In short, he failed to get the necessary vote of confidence.

Desperate by this time, President Auriol then named Henri Queuille, veteran Radical Socialist, to succeed Schuman.

WHAT QUEUILLE could do to produce some kind of order out of political confusion and economic travail no one knew. He is 64 years old, a little known political figure in France, was a wartime assistant of Gen. Charles DeGaulle.

The situation pointed up the alarmed belief, becoming more predominant in France, that no individual or group can command the working majority that will enable him to govern the nation successfully.

It is a paradox that the parties in the moderate center of the political scale in France can speak for less than 25 per cent of the people. General DeGaulle, on the right, commands 45 per cent of the vote, and Communist groups hold another 30 per cent.

Although the past few weeks have not been conducive to a coherent examination of the political situation in France, the principal trend seems to be toward a return of General DeGaulle and his right-wing beliefs to power.

ANYTHING NEW? Bloomin' Sage

That sagebrush is mighty pretty when it blooms purple, and the song-writers can't be blamed for making something out of it.

But out West they hate that sage. It swatches nearly 96 million western acres in a tough, resistant blanket, and ranchers and federal range managers alike consider it an almost complete nuisance.

THEY WANT TO REPLACE the whole 96 million acres with nutritious grasses for cattle and sheep. Some of the sage would have to be retained to prevent erosion, but most of it could go.

They were talking about the problem of eliminating sagebrush at the annual meeting at Fort Collins, Colo., of the American Society of Agronomists and the Soil Science society.

Despite efforts to control or eradicate it, the sage continues to spread and probably covers a greater area now than before the pioneer settlers went West.

MOST HOPEFUL development is the new brush-land plow, 10 of which are being built for further trial. Also, congress will be asked next year to provide more money for range reseeding and improvement.

About five million acres of western range already have been reseeded. These pastures almost invariably carry more nutritious and abundant food for cattle than the original prairie, according to U. S. forest service officials. Animals make better gains on it.

IN THE LONG RUN that could mean more and cheaper meat.

Lip Service

First frothy by-product of the fermentation of the 1948 presidential campaign is the "Dewey duster," a false, Deweyesque mustache to tickle the fancy of stiff-upper-lip Republicans. Soon to appear on the counters across the nation, the gadget consists of a bit of black chenille clipped to the upper lip in true-blue GOP style.

POLIO: Mice Cured

Columbia university has announced the development of a new sulfite-type drug, called Darvisol, that cures one kind of infantile paralysis in mice and is also a successful preventive to the disease in mice.

Despite extensive tests during the past summer, it is still not known whether the new drug will prove effective against polio in human beings.

One of the most promising factors connected with the development of Darvisol is that it is the first drug ever to have cured or even affected poliomyelitis of any kind, either in animals or human beings.

Currently, medical experts have been debating how closely the Columbia mouse infantile paralysis resembles the kind that strikes humans. There is no agreement on the point, although originally the virus that was used to produce polio in the mice was taken from human beings.

Autumn Offers Many Joys For the Faithful Beholder

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—You are reading these lines, I trust, not too long after the autumnal equinox, which I hope you celebrated with the proper ceremonies.

The word equinox is Latin for "equal night" which implies equal day. All over the earth there is that kind of equality at this time.

Thus the Creator established equality of such nice perfection that neither the strongest telescope nor the most accurate micrometer can question it. Equality was something that had no measure of weight until the philosophers proclaimed it and until it was preached to the western world by a lowly carpenter's son of Nazareth.

We worked nearly 2,000 years before a political goal embodying this philosophy was written into the Constitution of a nation—the United States.

It is a paradox that the parties in the moderate center of the political scale in France can speak for less than 25 per cent of the people.

General DeGaulle, on the right, commands 45 per cent of the vote, and Communist groups hold another 30 per cent.

Although the past few weeks have not been conducive to a coherent examination of the political situation in France, the principal trend seems to be toward a return of General DeGaulle and his right-wing beliefs to power.

Suppose you were to approach the 10 men—or twenty or thirty—who have spent the most time studying this particular subject, gathering all the facts, checking all the records available, as long as authentic records have existed. If you asked them if it is true that there are especially bad storms at this time of year, they could answer (in carefully worded and virtually understandable sentences) "That is the bunk!"

At the equinox the sun is in the process of crossing the celestial equator. That is the circle parallel to our equator which if expanded would touch the sun. The sun does this in the spring (vernal equinox) and in the fall (autumnal equinox).

At this season, if you live in my neighborhood (or within several hundred miles thereof) you will heed this piece of advice in the Hagerstown (Md.) Almanack which says:

The ravages of the tent caterpillars go unnoticed by many persons until the leaves are eaten from a tree. Naturally it makes extra work for the tree to produce another set of new leaves, which weakens the tree, and after a few years of this extra work, the tree is in danger of dying.

The greatest natural enemy of the tent caterpillar is the common house wren. These are valuable birds to have in your gardens during the growing season."

And now after that piece of advice, which is not seasonal for my friends "down under" where the autumnal equinox heralds the coming of summer and not fall and winter, let us return to our meteorological mutton.

I will not become technical but I think it is just as well to get better acquainted with the phenomena, natural or otherwise, which surround us. There is no reason why, if one rises late in the night to let the cat in (or out) he need crack a shin on a chair, once he understands why and in what position his wife has moved it since he last noticed its location—and the stars are just celestial furniture.

What Is This Thing 'Retrograde Motion'?

There is a certain "retrograde motion" from east to west of the equinoctial points, which I won't go into in detail for several reasons, one being that I haven't the slightest idea what the phrase means.

Nevertheless, I will mention that retrograde motion was discovered by a gentleman by the name of Hipparchus in the year (about) 120 before Christ. Experts say this motion accounts for the changes in the position of the Pole star, the North Star as it is usually called.

Some people think the Pole star doesn't change. A number of important people since Hipparchus have thought so. Take one, William Shakespeare. Remember in Act III of Julius Caesar when a petition for repeal of the disenfranchisement of Publius Cimber is presented? Cassius drops to his knees to beg for the repeal but Caesar says:

"I could be well moved, if I were as you; If I could pray to move, prayers would move me; But I am constant as the northern star, Of whose true fix'd and resting quality There is no fellow in the firmament."

What a wonderful three-point landing, said the little kangaroo to its mother.

There may be a new King of Spain. Nice work if you can get away with it.

Although the special session of congress was mad at the President for calling them back, they gave the reading of his proclamation assembling them a tribute rare in history. They stood up while it was read. They got up because they thought the invocation was about to be made and they didn't like to sit down and reveal their error.

The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks. They are all fire and every one doth shine. But there's but one in all doth hold his place . . .

Perhaps Shakespeare had never read Hipparchus. (Some say he couldn't read but if so, where did he get his plots?) Anyhow, Hipparchus said, (and nobody has disproved his theory) that the position of the Pole star does change (from our viewpoint). One authority explains it this way:

"The pole of the earth is swinging slowly as if it were the axis of a top, or as if the earth, rotating, were a kind of gyroscope." The study of what is called the "precession of the equinoxes" (their moving backward in relation to the constellations) is fascinating. But I have no intention of reading a lecture on astronomy here—for several reasons, including the one mentioned before.

But I do want to mention some things which George Stimson (with whom I have just been talking) brought up. You remember George? He comes from Anamosa, Iowa, where he has just been spending a wonderful vacation with his mother who, at 77, does her own cooking because she likes it better (and, according to George, for good reasons) than anyone's else.

George, to whom most Washingtonians turn when they want the right answer, says that records for a period of 50 years show that there were actually fewer storms during the period between September 20 and 25 (which overlaps the equinox) than there were immediately preceding September 25. The same, he says, is true of the vernal equinox.

"The notion about equinoctial storms in one form or another," says George, "dates back to at least 1748 and probably originated among seafaring people."

All this information is in his "Book About a Thousand Things" and if I had thought to look it up I wouldn't have interrupted him in his work on his book about a thousand (or more) things regarding American history which will be his next opus and which I'm willing to say in advance of publication is going to be good.

So much for the equinoxes, with whom, since we meet them twice a year, we ought to get better acquainted.

Blackjack Pershing's Life and Times

Speaking of books, Col. Frederick Palmer sent me his latest book entitled "General John J. Pershing." It was written some time ago, recently brought up to date after Palmer's last interview with Pershing, but in accordance with the author's stipulation, was not published until after Pershing's death.

"It was not to be submitted to him or to appear in the light of an official biography or one authorized by his heirs."

This is stated in the foreword and Palmer elaborated on his attitude to me during a luncheon shortly before the book appeared.

Colonel Palmer is the elder statesman of the war correspondents. But years are of small account to him. He is pert, active and his memory is phenomenal. I knew of him in connection with the Russo-Japanese war although at the time of that conflict my military experience was limited to playing with a painted fleet of warships.

The warships were a Christmas present received while I was still building with blocks and shooting Indians with bows made of umbrella ribs and drilling in an infant cadet corps.

Later I came to know a colleague of Palmer's in that war which gave Japan the toe-hold in the Far East that made her the power she was in World War II. His colleague was Photographer Jimmy Hare, the dean of his clan for many decades.

The Pershing book I have not read at this writing but as soon as I do I'll tell you about it.

Although the special session of congress was mad at the President for calling them back, they gave the reading of his proclamation assembling them a tribute rare in history. They stood up while it was read. They got up because they thought the invocation was about to be made and they didn't like to sit down and reveal their error.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: I would like to know if I may use varnish on asphalt tile flooring.

ANSWER: Varnish is not recommended for asphalt tile, neither is paint or lacquer.

QUESTION: My walnut chair has been painted with gray enamel. I have tried to take off the paint with paint remover, but it doesn't work. Is there any way I can remove this paint?

ANSWER: Give the paint remover time to soften the paint, and don't be in too much of a hurry. Try a paste remover next time. Try when the paint softens, use a scraper and steel wool to get the paint off.

DOLL FOR LUCK
By GENE GILBERT

PALMER soared through the sky with a light heart. He was leaving a hard life behind, years of hand-to-mouth existence, years of depending on occasional charter trips and the students able to pay the high rates on his big machine. The future opened before him: He would get a new ship, one of those long-range, all metal jobs, go in for long-distance competitive races. And he would have a swell-looking girl with a pile of dough to pay the bills.

He glanced at the instrument board, saw that everything was all right. The cabin ship roared steadily over Connecticut at four thousand feet. There were scattered clouds beneath him, but not enough to hide the ground. His luck was breaking right for the first time, just right. Reaching up, he patted the mascot swinging from the roof on a length of ribbon.

It was a small doll, black of face, with two pearl buttons set in the satin for eyes, a piece of red silk stitched across the lower half of the face for a mouth. It was garbed in a loud plaid dress green and red.

That rag-stuffed little figure had been hanging in this ship for over two years. Palmer had come to believe it was lucky. The girl who had loaned him the down payment on the machine had put it there. He had met her one summer when he had been barnstorming with a small, old ship, and they had knocked around together for three months. She had been pretty sure of herself, Palmer recalled, loaned him money, talked about how "we" were going to make a fortune with the larger ship.

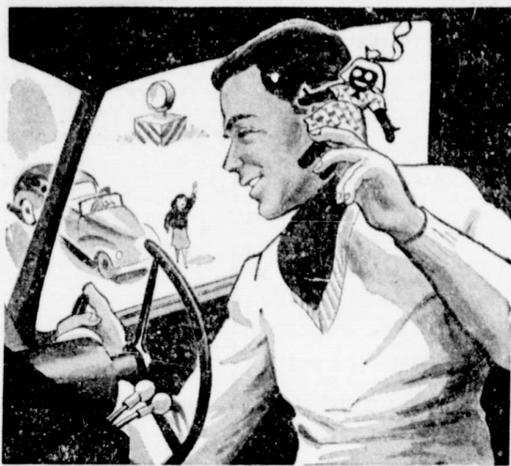

He recalled the night when they had won the doll at a small carnival, in one of the ring-toss games. He had made up his mind already to pull out sometime soon. And it had annoyed him somewhat to see her having such a gay time. But he could not tell her, there was no need to say goodbye tearfully and have her bawl and carry on in front of him.

On their way home she had insisted that they go to the field where his ship was staked down in the open, and sit in the cabin for a few minutes. She had been big, and light blonde and sentimental. Just before they had left the cabin, she had pinned the thing to the upholstery on the ceiling. "That's our luck, Eric," she had said. "As long as she's there, we'll always be safe."

Palmer had smiled, kissed her and taken her home. At dawn of the same morning, he had taken off and come East. He had never returned. Once in a while, a letter from her had caught up with him, but he had not answered. What was the use? He had intended to send her back the loan when he could. He was grateful for the help, and everything. But how could he explain without hurting her, that they were just not suited to each other?

When the letters had stopped coming, he had thought that she had understood. Then some fellow who had known them both, had handed him a clipping, without a word. She had been killed in a crossing accident. It seemed that her car had stalled on the tracks, and that she had made no effort to get out. The fellow evidently thought she had done it on purpose. Palmer knew better. That girl had had character, she would not have done away with herself over a few hundred bucks and a broken engagement.

He had been tempted to take that doll down. Then he had reasoned that it would be, in a way, an admission of remorse. And he had nothing to blame himself for. The doll had brought him luck at last. Eleanor. She had looks and background and money. Furthermore, she had the kind of a spirit he liked, which he needed close to him. To her, a ship wasn't something to work for a small house, for an ordinary living. She enjoyed what he enjoyed, fame, her name in the papers. She loved him, all right, but she would always understand that he must take long chances.

He jerked the doll loose and tossed it out through the open side window.

AHEAD, he saw the small field where she was waiting. They would drive to her home, be married, and fly away. He tipped his left wing, banked lazily over a field. A bright spot of color detached itself from a long, sleek, dark car. Eleanor waving her scarf. That was service—already: His girl waiting for him with a sixteen cylinder bus, complete with chauffeur.

His spirits surged higher. This was a private airport, no inspector would be around, so he was safe in giving her a show. He slammed the motor full on, nosed down then hauled the ship up and over in a tight loop. He leveled off and eased her around, a few wing-overs—and level flight again.

Something caught his eye, the doll, swinging from the roof, grinning like a punching-bag a few times, glanced at his altimeter. He still had fifteen hundred feet. One last stunt and then he could land. He circled the field once more, swung around and when he was almost over the car, shoved the throttle full on and dove in a screaming fall. The moving doll again attracted his glance.

Eleanor had tightened her lips when he had told her it was a souvenir from a dame, before he got serious with her. It might be frighten her. He hauled back further on the wheel. It yielded an inch—and stuck. He pulled again, harder, and the wheel stuck—the wheel stuck—

He must get her nose up, level off—he was doing better than two hundred and the ground was close. Too close . . .

Caught between the horizontal stabilizer and the counterweight for the elevators, the small black doll in the loud green and red plaid dress seemed to widen the grin of her scarlet satin mouth.

TRICKS FOR TEENS

By NANCY PEPPER

Mock Turtle.

The latest fashion to turn into a tad is the long-sleeved, turtle neck cotton knit T-shirt.

You're wearing it in white only and you tie one of your shaded silk scarfs under the roll collar with the long ends hanging down in back. On the front of your turtle neck shirt you wear your trickiest pin or set of matching pins. At a CALLING ALL GIRLS fashion show held up in Stamford, Conn., we counted no less than eight of these shirts, similarly scarfed, in the first row of the audience! Your favorite teen department has the T shirts, you have the scarfs—so what are you waiting for—a date with Lon McAllister?

Time Marches On.

Oh, happy the days when dates were for eating. And happy the days when dates were for learning; But, now you're a teen, there's no retreating— Dates are for making, breaking—and yearning. You Said It—and You're Glad! "Well, Mock My Shodest"—Expression of surprise which you could give to mean, "Well, Shock My Modesty." Only it wouldn't be so much fun that way. "Glad to Hear It"—Your comment on any good news. "Sad to Hear It"—Ditto on any bad news. "Concoct a Witticism—Very formal for "pop a corny." "That's Your Red Wagon"—That's your worry. "Icky Bird"—New name for a drip and no relation to the Dicky Bird who announces spring in that popular song. "T Man"—Top man, formerly known as your O. A. O. "Once in a Red Moon"—Indicates a much longer interval than the traditional "Blue Moon." "I Wish Your Mother Had Raised Ducks Instead"—This retort can mean only one thing: that you wish the person to whom you're talking had never been born. "Chee Chee"—You pipe it in a mousy voice and it means "wonderful." It also means you've been spinning Rose Murphy's platters. Well, as the man said when he followed the fire engines, "I want to see what's cooking!"

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS—

You're so engrossed in how you're going to look for this important date that you haven't given much thought to how you're going to sound. You know he's a big basket ball player; you know he's a major in history and economics at school. They're all clues to his interests—but you haven't had time to follow one of them. Instead, you've concentrated on your clothes, your hair, your make-up. Well, you'll be pretty as a picture, all right—but haven't you heard that silent pictures are obsolete? These days, a boy prefers a picture with sound—a talky that really has something to say!

WINTER IN SOIL. Plant men do not know yet whether it is the Bordeaux mixture, the DDT or the combination that controlled the cabbage disease. They expect to find out by test plantings this year. "This inadvertent spray program," comments Miller, "may be the fortunate accident in pointing the way to a practical spray control for black rot disease."

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
Released by WNU Features.

By INEZ GERHARD

LUCILLE FLETCHER, young and pretty enough to be a screen star herself, never did meet Barbara Stanwyck while she was writing the movie version of "Sorry, Wrong Number," based on her radio play. Nor did she meet Burt Lancaster, which she regretted more deeply. But she worked on the script with

BARBARA STANWYCK

Anatole Litvak, the brilliant director, who played all the parts. She says Litvak as Stanwyck is something she'll never forget! The way in which the highly successful radio play was developed to make a picture is most interesting. The picture is a triumph of suspense and horror, finely directed, with an excellent cast.

A new name will go up in lights as the result of Humphrey Bogart's selection of a leading woman for his first independent motion picture production, "Knock on Any Door." It will be Susan Perry. As Candy Toxton, she has been a cover girl, fashion model and aspiring actress. With this new name and new start she hopes to reach stardom.

Gail Robbins was brought to Hollywood for musical pictures by the late Ben Bernie, and got nothing but dramatic roles. But at last she sings and dances, in "Race Street," supporting George Raft, William Bendix and Marilyn Maxwell.

Dick Powell got away from typecasting as a romantic tenor when he began playing tough guys, then switched again to "Cavalcade of America," as the Voice of History in "Gettysburg." "Cavalcade" is also brought us Laraine Day and Robert Montgomery in dramatizations of historic events. Plans are to present others in this series that makes history live.

Leo Genn, co-star of Rosalind Russell in "The Velvet Touch," was the first British lawyer to be granted permission by the English bar council to engage in other occupations which might impair the dignity of the profession. Genn was a London attorney when he turned to acting. He liked it so much that he remained with it, but he's still a member of the council.

William Bendix approached his present profession differently. He took up acting when he lost his job as a grocery store manager in 1936. But nobody even thought of making an issue of his switch to acting.

Marjorie Bennett, character actress who screams so shrilly in Warner Bros. "June Bride," didn't really scream at all. Bette Davis, the picture's star, did it for her. She's an expert screamer.

When Maxwell Anderson and Andrew Solt were writing "Joan of Arc," starring Ingrid Bergman, they wired researchers at the Congressional Library for information on the seating of dignitaries at a religious trial in the 15th century. The reply—"Seating like baseball diamond. Chief judge at home plate. Lesser men at 1, 2 and 3. Joan in pitcher's box"

Nominated for governor of Tennessee on the Republican ticket, Roy Acuff will remain there to campaign, but will return to Columbia for his second picture, "Home in San Antonio." He recently completed "Smoky Mountain Melody."

As a result of Gene Autry's cooperation with forest rangers while filming "Ridin' the Old Pine Trail" in the San Bernardino mountains, his face and signature will grace 20,000 fire prevention posters in public schools.

ODDS AND ENDS—Bob Hope's show and "My Friend Irma," sponsored by the same company, have swapped products Bob now sells soap, "Irma" sells toothpaste. . . . John Dall, of "Rope," says his real name would never do for picture purposes—it's H. Treadwell Vanderbilt. . . . The Screen Guild Players start their season October 7 with James Stewart in "Northside 777." . . . Dorothy Lamour's songs for Columbia's "Slightly French" is spangled with diamonds and gold sequins, 40,000 in all. . . . Edgar Kennedy's daughter Coleen is a model. She maintains that's the quickest and best way to get into pictures.

Edwin Max, recruited from radio, makes his film debut in RKO's "Follow Me Quietly." Playing "the judge," a psychopathic killer who has elected himself to choose who shall die, he appears continually, never speaks a line.

The new March of Time is "Life with Grandpa," showing famous people over 80 who are still active and presenting some of the bright aspects of old age. The problems of old age are discussed, solutions given.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Pure Family Love

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"ALL the families in your A books have one characteristic," writes Nadine Carter, a very modern young woman who does a weekly book-review column for a Pennsylvania newspaper. "Whatever your people are, rich or poor, Irish or American, they all love each other and are sympathetic and cooperative, having such fun doing dishes and being poor! Have you actually ever known a family like that? I haven't. We weren't fighters in our family, but we all had our separate interests and grudges and we all—that is my sister and I, got out of home young, lived downtown and married. My parents were divorced when we were babies and my mother had a son by a second marriage; he's all right now, but he was a regular pest as a small boy.

"I myself am divorced with a little girl to raise," the letter goes on. "I'm not unhappy, and not happy, but my three-room home isn't that haven of delight that all your homes are, in your books. Most real homes aren't full of affection and loyalty and service; all of yours are. Now here is your latest book on my table and what can I say of it except that it paints an ideal that I never knew any home to reach, and don't think any homes do!"

This half-whimsical and half-impatient criticism would have hurt me once. But now it only makes me a little sad. For if this clever young woman really has grown to maturity without ever knowing what a real home is, she has been robbed of something that no later years can replace.

High Ideals Predominate. In answer to her I can only say that there are thousands of homes—hundreds of thousands of them—in this fortunate country of ours, where children are raised to high ideals of service and duty, and where family love is developed as naturally as young minds and bodies are. There are countless good fathers and good mothers, who live only for home and children, who maintain high ideals of personal behavior themselves, and live to see their children's lives.

There are good mothers. . . .

There is no happiness in the whole world like the happiness in a good home. There is no service any man or woman can do for their children, for their community, for their country and for their God, compared to developing in their children the characters, the minds and souls that make good citizens.

Love doesn't come naturally to children. It has to be cultivated; nothing about a fine home atmosphere is an accident. There must be someone guiding, smoothing, helping. When father and mother are working on this plan, the ideal home results.

Children Need Guidance. America's story is full of the goodness of book-loving, family-loving, God-fearing fathers, and of mothers who have brought actual genius to the guidance of children; guidance disguised under happy everyday living, in the garden, the kitchen, the school, the nursery.

Family love and home happiness are not merely pleasant than quarrels and coldness and separation, they are absolutely essential to the safety of a nation. Men and women who can look back to a home-protected childhood are valuable men and women. Nothing that your sacrificing or your wealth or your ingenuity can contrive for your children is worth anything at all, unless behind it is the atmosphere that develops mutual dependence and mutual help.

Most of this atmosphere is created by mother. If you happen to be mother, it might console you, in these difficult, extravagant days to realize that you can give your children a priceless heritage at no money cost at all. The heritage of a harmonious and happy home.

Snoring Is Legal Even at Expense of Your Neighbor

LOS ANGELES.—It's perfectly legal to snore, even if it keeps the neighbors awake, according to the ruling of Byron Gentry, deputy city prosecutor.

The weighty problem was handed him by Mr. and Mrs. Wilson E. Carr, who complained that a neighbor in their apartment snored so loudly that it constituted a disturbance of peace. Gentry ruled that the snoring was not malicious.

Butchers Make Offer

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Two butchers offered to let any housewife take over their business for a week to see if she could make a profit out of high-priced meat.

The offer was made by Koehler and Karl Koehler, owners of Koehler's market. "So far," said Karl, "we've had no takers." Koehler said they got tired of hearing complaints from shoppers about the "huge profits" the butchers were making.

HE WHO IS BIRD
Grace Noll Crowell

HE WHO is glad for every day's bright beauty,
For a flower or a red leaf in the wood,
Who seeks fresh color in each hour's drab duty,
I think he thanks his Maker as he should.

He who is brave to meet each day's new sorrow,
Whose courage marches with him as he goes,
Carries a stronger heart into tomorrow,
And thus thanks God the very best he knows.

He who walks calmly, surely, through disaster,
Trusting an unseen hand to bring him peace,
Lifts up his life, a prayer unto his Master,
And offers him a praise that does not cease.

He who moves gently when the stress is pressing,
Lending a hand, such as a woman would,
Who turns his days and years into a blessing,
I am sure he thanks his Maker as he should.

Potato Spray Leads Way

This tale of sound cabbages might be called, "The Luck of the Irish Potatoes."

Paul R. Miller of the U. S. department of agriculture's mycology and disease survey tells of a New York farmer who planted a patch of cabbage alongside a planting of potatoes. His spray equipment did not fit exactly the number of rows in his potato field, with the result that each time he sprayed his potatoes the last sweep of the spray boom

to Cabbage-Rot Control

reached beyond the potato margin and sprayed four rows of cabbages. The potato spray was Bordeaux mixture fortified with DDT for insect control.

At harvest time only the four sprayed rows of cabbages were sound. The rest of the patch, planted from the same seed bed, were damaged seriously by black rot, a fungus disease that always has been difficult to control, since it is carried by seed and also can live over

Cleaner Cows Less Labor with CONCRETE PAVED BARNYARD
A concrete-paved barnyard is a big aid to dairymen producing high quality milk. Fall, winter, spring and summer it helps keep cows out of mud, dust, filth—cuts down work of cleaning cows before milking. When cows wade through mud they waste energy needed for producing milk. Owners pay a paved barnyard soon pays for itself by helping produce more and better quality milk. Paste coupon on penny postcard and mail today for free instructions for paving your barnyard or building other durable, thrifty, sanitary structures with concrete. Weddings who exchanged wedding vows before the Rev. F. C. La Buwi in Holy Trinity church, Kewaskum, at 9 a. m. on Wednesday, Sept. 8, are now at home with the groom's parents in Beaver Dam. The altars in the church were decorated with pink and white gladioli for the service.

The bride was attired in a white marquisette over taffeta lace trimmed gown with which she wore a fingertip veil edged in lace. She carried red roses and pom poms.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Willard Blanke, and the bridesmaids, Misses Marilyn and Judy Nigh, wore white velvety gowns. Mrs. Blanke carried white mums and red gladioli, while the Misses Nigh carried white asters and red gladioli. The little flower girl, Barbara Ann Nigh, was dressed identically like the bride and carried the same flowers.

Willard Blanke was best man, while Merwyn Birkholz and Vincent Nigh served as groomsmen. Leo Nigh and Calvin Soldner ushered.

Dinner was served and a reception held at the Bar-N Ranch, followed by a wedding dance at the Lighthouse ballroom in the evening.

The groom is employed by the Monarch Range Co. in Beaver Dam.

SCHNEIDER-UELMEN

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Arlene C. Uelmen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Uelmen, Route 1, Kewaskum, became the bride of Edward Schneider, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Schneider, Route 2, Kewaskum. The Rev. F. Eschweiler read the nuptial mass in St. Michael's church, St. Michaels, at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, Sept. 11.

Traditional bridal satin fashioned the skirt of the bride's gown, which was gathered to a lace bodice, enhanced by a peplum. A seed pearl crown held her fingertip veil. Her flowers were white roses, mums and asters. Identical gowns of yellow, light blue, pink, Nile green and orchid taffeta were worn by the attendants, Miss Audrey Uelmen as maid of honor, Mrs. Wm. Zscho, Misses LaVerne Knudl, Shirley Eckert, and Mrs. Alfonso Theisen. Their gowns were styled with full skirts and off the shoulder necklines. They wore headresses of net and ruying and carried gladioli, mums and asters in contrasting shades.

Lester Schneider was best man, while Wm. Zscho, Harold Uelmen, Donald Korinek, and Alfonso Theisen attended as groomsmen. Ray Uelmen and Frank Vogelsang were ushers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at St. Michael's hall. The newlyweds will be at home at Route 2, Kewaskum, where the groom is engaged in farming. His bride was formerly employed in the office of Gehl Bros. Mfg. Co., West Bend. She is a graduate of West Bend High school.

Nourishing Boxed Lunches Are Hard to Resist
(See recipes below)

Lunch Box Magic
WHILE THE YOUNGSTERS struggle with readin', writin' and 'rithmetic, mother frequently has her problems with the lunch boxes which she must fix for the family that totes its own.

The lunch box preparation is a steady grind now that school has started, and it's a wonder that more women don't go into the dol-druma about it more often. You have to supply nourishment plus food appeal to keep the family happy with their meals out of a box, so here are ideas aplenty.

If you have several lunches to prepare, have jars of filling ready. All lunch box equipment can be kept handy on a tray so that you don't have to scurry around for waxed paper or a knife while you try making sandwiches in the midst of breakfast preparation.

Leave butter or spread out the night before so that you can smooth it on immediately. Fruits can be washed, puddings made in advance, and relishes such as carrot and cucumber sticks and pickles can be wrapped in waxed paper ready to tuck in the box in the morning.

BE KIND to the budget and make the whole thing as simple as possible by making several jars of filling beforehand so they can be slicked on the sandwiches easily. Here are several ideas tailored to your needs.

Special Sandwich Filling
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 can pimiento
1 small onion
4 stalks celery
Salt and pepper to taste
2 packages cream cheese
Chop eggs and pimiento fine. Put onion and celery through food chopper, then mix all ingredients with cream cheese and season to taste. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes or longer before using. Thin to spreading consistency with mayonnaise.

Beef-Tomato Filling
1 pint hot tomato pulp, strained
2 tablespoons quick tapioca
1/2 pound grated cheese
1/4 pound dried beef, ground fine
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon mustard
Add tapioca to hot tomato and cook over low flame for 15 minutes. Add cheese gradually and cook slowly until melted. Remove from heat, add beef and seasonings. Cool and store.

Corned Beef Spread
4 ounces cooked corned beef
1/2 cup minced sweet pickle
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
2 teaspoons minced onion
2 ounces sharp American cheese
Salt and pepper
Cut cheese into tiny pieces and blend with mayonnaise. Add shredded corned beef and remaining ingredients. These sandwiches can be made up with sliced tomato and lettuce, if desired.

Cheese-Bacon Spread
3 ounces cream cheese
3 ounces Old English cheese
1/2 cup chopped, cooked bacon
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 teaspoon horseradish
2 tablespoons milk

LYNN SAYS:
Snacks Prove Popular As Weather Cools
Toasted sandwiches are always popular and take but little time to make with a regular toaster, grill or skillet.

Hot toast can be spread with any number of fillings kept on tap, and served with pickles, relishes, potato chips, carrot sticks, cole slaw, or munchied with fresh fruit.

If you want a more nourishing sandwich, dip it into a french toast mixture and fry in the skillet.

When you want to toast sandwiches in the skillet brush the sandwiches with fat, butter or salad oil, and turn with a pancake turner.

A good toasted sandwich includes slices of American cheese spread with mustard or sprinkled with Worcestershire sauce, then toasted in the broiler, grill or skillet. Cheese also may be covered with bacon and the sandwich toasted open-face in the broiler. For these sandwiches toasted with bacon, place a slice or two of tomato in them before serving for extra deliciousness.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU

- Baked Lamb Loaf
- Broiled Peach Halves with Mint Jelly
- Baked Potatoes
- Spinach with Cheese Sauce
- Oatmeal Bread or Muffins
- Baked Apples Beverage

Blend ingredients together thoroughly and store until ready for use.

- Liver Spread
1/2 pound calves' liver
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
2 cups boiling water
8 slices cooked bacon
1/2 cup soured cream or salad dressing
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
2 tablespoons minced onion
Dash of pepper

Simmer liver in salt and water until tender. Cool and put through fine blade on food chopper. Run bacon through chopper. Mix all ingredients, place in jars and chill until used.

HERE ARE OTHER well-liked fillings:

Frizzled dried beef browned with onion in the skillet, then mixed with cream cheese.

Peanut butter mixed with orange marmalade.

Sliced cooked beef roast with chili butter, made by mixing softened butter with chili sauce to taste.

Chopped ham mixed with mayonnaise and shredded pineapple, drained.

Grated American cheese mixed with grated raw carrots, grated raw onion and mayonnaise.

USE THESE TRICKS for the lunch box when appetites fail, when there's an exam or some special event.

Meat Pastries (Makes 4)
1 cup pastry mix
1 cup ground leftover meat
1/4 cup tomato soup
Roll out pastry one-eighth inch thick. Cut into four squares. Place a round of cooked meat on each square. Top with one tablespoon of tomato sauce. Fold pastry squares and pinch edges together. Bake in a hot (400 degree) oven about 20 minutes or until browned. These can be baked if you are making a hot bread in the morning. They are good even when cold and take the place of sandwiches.

Lunch Box Eggs
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 1/4 inch slice liver sausage
1 ounce cream cheese
1 tablespoon milk
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Remove shells from eggs and cut in half lengthwise. Remove yolks and mash. Mash liver sausage, blend with cream cheese and milk and egg yolks. Add mustard and blend thoroughly. Refill whites and press eggs together.

Here are other sweets for packed lunches: gingerbread topped with lemon powdered sugar frosting; individual upside down cake made in a custard cup and left in the cup, maple sugar candy, popcorn balls, cookies or puddings.

Released by WNU Features

Cream cheese mixed with pineapple or orange marmalade, spread on toast, is good when broiled until bubbly.

Canned or cooked tongue, sliced thin, can be spread with pickle relish and toasted.

Salmon and tuna fish salad mixtures make excellent toasted sandwiches. Season the fish salad with horseradish, mayonnaise and salt.

If you don't want young fry or Dad to raid the refrigerator, tack up menus on the pantry shelf, telling what they can use.

Any of the cream cheese or soft cheese fillings are excellent with variety breads such as orange-nut, bran, oatmeal or prune. They can be used sliced thinly or they can be toasted.

Menus for lunch boxes also can be tacked on cupboards so the children can help get lunch ready. Make up menus for the whole week.

Fruits are nice for snacks. Have fresh or canned fruit ready in covered dishes.
Baked apples, stuffed with coconut after baking, are delightful for snacks or lunch boxes.

First Aid for Angina Pectoris
There are times when a little knowledge of heart disease may be of great value in dealing with heart attacks. One of the most common is angina pectoris. The main symptom of this disease is pain in the chest, usually under the breastbone or in the pit of the stomach. This pain may radiate down the arm and is described as tightness or squeezing in character. Quite frequently it is attended by vomiting, and naturally is thought to be an attack of acute indigestion. The only first aid that can be given in the home is to have the patient sit quietly until the pain subsides. If the patient has been under the care of a physician he will usually carry nitroglycerin tablets given to him by the physician. One of these tablets should be placed under the patient's tongue. If the pain or vomiting continues, a doctor should be called at once. The recognition of this type of heart attack, not putting it down as just indigestion, and seeking medical aid at once, may save a person's life.

JEST JESTIN'

Slow-Footed Greyhound

TWO men invested in a greyhound, with the hope of sharing its winnings. The animal was entered in several races but finished last every time.

The disappointed partners decided that the dog wasn't worth the expense of his food and made up their minds to get rid of him. Taking him for a walk one day, they came to a river bank.

"Here's our chance," one fellow said. "Let's throw him in the river."

"No, we can't do that," his companion replied after a look into the dog's appealing eyes. Then he brightened: "I know," he said, "let's run away from him!"

CHANGE OF MIND

After dinner, the young marrieds had engaged in their first argument, and for the rest of the evening neither had spoken. Unable to bear the silence any longer, the husband finally decided to give in.

"Please speak to me, dear," he said. "I'll admit that I was wrong and you were right."

His wife snuffed. "I won't do you any good," she retorted. "I've changed my mind."

Getting Prepared
Dad and his small daughter were standing in front of a lion's cage at the zoo. He was explaining how strong and fierce lions are. His young hopeful took it all in, and then said:

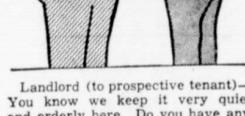

"Daddy, if it got out of its cage and ate you up, what should I take to get home."

Tracking a Cow

The train ground to a sudden stop. The nervous lady called the conductor. "What happened?"

Conductor—Nothing much; we just ran over a cow.
Old Lady—Was she on the tracks?
"No," replied the disgruntled man, "we had to chase her across the field."

SILENCE IS GOLDEN

Landlord (to prospective tenant)—You know we keep it very quiet and orderly here. Do you have any children?
"No."
"A piano, radio or phonograph?"
"No."
"Do you play any musical instrument? Do you have a dog, cat or parrot?"
"No, but my fountain pen scratches a little sometimes."

Dual Purpose
The young man went to the local swami to have his fortune told. As he sat down, he noticed that the swami's crystal ball had two holes in it.

"What's the idea of the holes?" he inquired.
"Well, on Wednesday nights," explained the swami, "I go bowling."

Customer—Why is it I never get what I ask for here?
Waiter—Perhaps, madam, we are too polite.

Poor Hospitality
Jones to desk clerk—Give me some stationery, please.
Desk clerk—Are you a guest?
Jones—Heck no! I'm paying $10 a day.

Foreign Exchange
"Here, auntie," said the returned soldier, "is a franc I brought you from Paris as a souvenir."
"Thank you," said the dear old lady, "but I wish you would have brought me one of those Latin quarters I read so much about."

"WALTZ TIME"

Instead of an operetta, the student body has decided to put on a musical comedy this year called "Waltz Time."

The plot of the story has to do with a musically talented young man, Kirby Stevys, whose sole ambition is to compose a great waltz song, one that will remain in the hearts of everyone.

He is constantly derided by all his friends and family who are great lovers of swing, but Sue Oliver, who is in love with Kirby, never ceases to encourage him. He composes his great waltz song, not realizing it is Sue who inspired it, and after many discouragements the song is published and sweeps the country overnight. Just as suddenly, Kirby realizes his love for Sue, and claims her, as she is about to run off with his greatest rival.

The plot and beautiful waltz songs are expertly interwoven, making the whole performance one that merits your seeing. It will be presented at Kewaskum High school on November 11, 12 and 13.

WE DOOD IT

The Kewaskum Indians trounced a dejected Oostburg "4" in a one-sided game, 54-13. The Indians were as showy in their aerial play as they were in their new green and black uniforms. The scoring was made mostly on passes. John Tessar made four touchdowns on four passes, one an interception. The second high scorer was John Kough, who made both his touchdowns on passes. The only touch-down made on the ground by the "green and black" was made by Kenny Koth, Bobby Dreher drop-kicked 6 out of 6 to add 12 points to the score. The new uniforms were initiated with a heavy coat of mud from a very soggy gridiron. Even against the B-team, Oostburg was not able to do much damage. Their two touchdowns were made on a return of a kick-off and on a series of plays in which they carried the ball 40 yards to our goal line.

In the absence of Coach Mitchell, the team was coached by C. Rose and L. Rose, who did a splendid job of substituting. The boys appreciated the large section of rooters from Kewaskum. We hoped for another large crowd on Friday, the 24th, when we played Kohler at Kewaskum. The game started promptly at 2:15.

SOPHS INITIATE FRESHMEN

This year again, as in years past, initiation time has rolled around in our school. All freshmen and new-comers to the school will be initiated. The date set for initiation is Friday, Oct. 3. The students being initiated will have various tasks to perform during the day and in the evening. During the day, the girls will have to wear long underwear, men's work shoes, a long suit coat, and have their hair up in ten braids, while the boys have to wear short pants above their knees, a large red bow tie, a ribbon in their hair, and a garter on their left knee with a green ribbon on it.

During the noon hour different groups will have to scrub sidewalks with tooth brushes, cut grass with scissors, play jack on the street, fish in pails, and perform other little tasks. They must willingly shine the sophomores' shoes any time of the day and also carry the sophomores' books for them. In the evening they will be officially initiated. There will be a dance open to the student body after the initiation.

LECTURER SPEAKS TO ASSEMBLY

The first in a series of five assembly programs to be given in the course of the present school year was presented in the main hall Tuesday morning, Sept. 14. Pupils from the fifth through eighth grades, along with their teachers, joined the upper classes and faculty to hear Arthur F. Kane, lecturer. "After You, Marco Polo" was Mr. Kane's theme as he described his journey across Asia and Europe by land. He was the first person to make this journey successfully and was honored by the Royal Academy of Science for this accomplishment. Mr. Kane illustrated his lecture with authentic garments brought from the East.

Better Than A

Lullaby

YOU SLEEP "ALL OVER" UNDER AN ELECTRIC BLANKET OR COMFORTER

That's right, folks! The soft, sunny warmth of an electric blanket lulls you to sleep faster and better than any old lullaby. One light blanket warms the whole bed from top to toe — no more treacherous cold spots to tie you into knots — no twisting and turning under mountains of covers. You sleep relaxed — wake up refreshed and thoroughly loved — full of pep and sparkle. You sleep all over!
