Around the Town

So you made it, huh?

Hope you all had a Happy New Year without too serious results. Now that all the resolutions have been broken we can settle back to normal weeks and week ends again, except for the firemen's shindig this Saturday.

One Mommy was caught kissing Santa Claus. Only it wasn't Christmas. Lots of other gals must have thought every man was Santa Claus.

Some thought they did pretty good. They were still on their feet. Others weren't.

Wonder why so many husband and wife fights occur after New Year's Eve? Reports are that cops were busy all over. Maybe it's because they don't see each other most of the night.

One inebriated New Year's Eve celebrant approached a cop on the street and asked directions to Alcoholics Anonymous.

When the attendant answered his knock on the door the drunk inquired, "Ish Thish Alcoholics Anonymous?"

"Yes it is, yes it is," replied the attendant. "Do you wish to join us?"

"No shir," said the drunk, "I wish to resign."

One fellow we know who was hitting the caffeine for nine or ten cups per day made a resolution to cut down on the number. This resolution he can keep. He bought bigger cups. One way of not breaking your resolutions is not to make any.

Another lady woke up at 11:30 a. m. Sunday with a paper hat on her head and a horn in her hand, thinking it was still New Year's Eve. The guests were still there.

Then there was the fellow who couldn't remember where he put the car keys but he said it didn't make any difference. He forgot where the car was anyway.

We don't know how or where you spent your New Year's week end but most of ours was spent on the ice of Lake Winnebago about 4½ miles out of Brothertown. And we weren't alone as thousands and thousands of others did the same thing. In the area we fished there are about 6 or 7 shanties close together all owned by Kewaskumites. It was a regular open house with wives, kids, neighbors and friends coming to the shanties. Dads brought all the kids they could to allow them more tip-ups to catch more walleyes. So the kids could go skating. Just about everyone filled up with their limit of fish, which have really been hitting. Kewaskum is a town of ice fishing enthusiasts. There must be close to 100 fishermen who spend their week ends regularly on the big lake. There aren't many men in town when the fishing is good. It's much more comfortable now that the ice is thick enough for cars and shanties. It was rough in the beginning when one had to walk out with the only shelter being a bottle of Mogen-David. One local fisherman had the misfor-

New March of Dimes Drive Gets Underway

MRS. E. MITCHELL, DIANE BECKER MOTHERS' MARCH, TAP CHAIRMEN

The 1961 New March of Dimes campaign got underway on Monday, Jan. 2, and will culminate with the traditional Mothers' March on Jan. 31. It was announced by Everett Mossing, Washington county drive director.

"We ask all residents of Washington county to please say 'Yes' to the 1961 New March of Dimes so the National Foundation can obtain the funds it needs to continue the attack against crippling birth defects, arthritis and polio," Mossing explained.

"The National Foundation relies on your contributions to enlarge its program of research, professional education and patient aid," he declared.

In launching the month long drive, Mossing also named the various chairmen who will assist him in conducting the drive. Heading the campaign for industrial contributions from county industries will be Norman Riesen of West Bend.

The Mothers' March in West Bend will again be staged under the direction of Mrs. Robert Haebig. Similar Marches will be conducted in Jackson, with Mrs. Elaine Hess as chairman; Barton, with Mrs. Carl Mayer as chairman, and in Kewaskum with Mrs. Ernest Mitchell as director.

The Teen Age program (TAP) in the county will again be supervised by Hugh Carpenter, county juvenile officer. Assisting him will be Diane Becker of Kewaskum, who will direct the distribution of mailers throughout the rural areas of the county and plan other teenage activities.

Coin collectors will be distributed to various business establishments throughout the county by members of the Washington County Council of the American Legion, with Marlin Kocher again directing the activity. Commanders of the Legion posts in the county will supervise the distribution of collectors in their areas.

The distribution of school coin cards to county schools will be directed by Harry Sheski, county superintendent of schools.
