Local Veterans Receive Diplomas

By Andrew R. Kuehl

After 55 years two students who left Kewaskum High School in 1944 to serve their country in World War II received their diplomas Monday night at a special ceremony held during the district's monthly board of education meeting.

The two were granted their diplomas primarily due to a law passed just over a year ago allowing veterans 65 years of age an older to receive their high school diplomas.

Wilmer Bunkelman, 75 who now resides in West Bend and Harold Seefeldt, 74 of Campbellsport walked proudly Monday night before their families and friends to receive their long awaited diplomas from the Kewaskum School District.

Both gentlemen expressed their gratitude toward the district for allowing them this honor.

"Tonight was an excellent example to our community showing the respect we have for those who have served our country," said superintendent of schools Wayne Gracyzk.

F.B.I Warns of Mail Scam

By Andrew R. Kuehl

The white collar crimes squad of the F.B.I. has confirmed reports of a scam offering prize money to individuals if they agree to send in the tax money for the prize they have just won.

Attorney Lynn Morrissey called the Statesman office late last week and stated she had two elderly widows contact her about the scam.

Morrissey immediately called the F.B.I. in Milwaukee and found out the whole "prize" is a huge scam costing thousands of dollars.

A spokesperson for the F.B.I. and Morrissey both stated not to send in any money and to call the white collar crimes division if you have received a notice or if you sent "tax" money in. The F.B.I. can be reached at (414) 276-4684.

Missing Mapledale Manor Resident Causes Stir in Village

By Andrew R. Kuehl
Staff Writer/Photographer

A resident of Mapledale Manor, an assisted living facility for the elderly, was reported missing November 1. She was found later that evening.

Lisa Stockhausen, administrator for the facility alerted police after the elderly woman was missing. Stockhausen's husband and officer Kevin Kohn began a search for the woman.

Later it was decided to contact the fire chief and have firefighters search for the woman. Firefighters used a thermal imaging camera to try and find the woman but that also produced no results.

An hour later officer in charge Tom Bauer was notified and he took over the incident. During a meeting with the family and Stockhausen the woman was reported found. She stated that she was in the building at all times but was unable to let someone know where she was.

Gypsy Moth Hotline Established

Washington County residents have experienced increased Gypsy Moth activity the past two years. The county has established a reporting system to compile information about the number of property owners have the insect and where they are located. This information will help county officials make decisions about the need for Gypsy moth programs in Washington County.

County residents that experienced Gypsy moths this past summer, or have egg masses on their property can call the "Gypsy Moth Hotline." The hotline number is (262) 335-4809 and is available at all times. When calling this number, a recorded message will inform people that they can leave their name, address and request for information to be sent to them. This will be information on the Gypsy moth, the damage it causes and what people can do to manage the insect. The mailing will also include a form to return to report the amount and location on infestation.

Gypsy moth larvae cause damage to trees when the larvae (caterpillar) stage of their life cycle feeds during a period from May through late July. The larvae then pupate (form cocoons) and then emerge as moths. The moths, then lay eggs on trees, houses, lawn furniture, mailboxes, rocks and other areas. The adult moths have a short life cycle and do not cause any damage. The insect survives over the winter in the egg stage. Egg masses are visible, can be counted, and given an indication of possible feeding for the next year.

One method of reducing feeding damage is to destroy egg masses to reduce the number of larvae hatching out next year. Homeowners can wrap band covered with sticky material around the trunks of trees to entangle climbing caterpillars during the feeding season. The larvae may also be controlled by using Bt (bacillus thuringiensis), early in the caterpillar stage.

The Gypsy Moth Hotline is maintained by the Washington County Land Conservation Department at this time. The county does not have staff or resources to visit infestation sites to assess damage or count egg masses.

The goal of this hotline is to provide an assessment of the number of properties affected and the amount of damage occurring in Washington County. Results of this survey will help to make decisions about offering spraying programs or other assistance at some time in the future.

Washington County Historical Society Holds Veterans Day Celebration

The Washington County Historical Society held a Veterans Day ceremony outside their museum on Sunday. After the ceremony the museum opened its doors to showcase its World War II memorabilia. Over 50 people attended the event.

Kiwanis Seeking Old Cell Phones

The Kewaskum Kiwanis Club is asking cell phone users to answer the call and turn in used cell phones they no longer need to help raise funds for the various community projects the club sponsors. Collection efforts will begin on November 12.

"The primary goal of our phone drive fundraiser is to collect wireless phones that consumers aren't using anymore," said the club's president Larry Ammel. "With more than 30 million used wireless phones lying idle in American homes and businesses, an individual can turn a used item into new funding that helps support our mission in a simple but effective way."

Any portable cellular or PCS phone is accepted, excluding bag phones of vehicle-installed models. The Kiwanis Club will also take the phone's battery or charger, if available. All donors should deactivate the wireless service of any donated phones before turning them in.

"We're very excited about this new fundraising opportunity," said Ammel. "Not only will it benefit our organization, but donated phones that can't be refurbished are properly recycled to benefit the environment as well."

The public may donate their used wireless phones by mailing them to

Van Gogh, Gauguin at the Art Institute of Chicago

West Bend -- The Continuing Education Department at the University of Wisconsin Washington County is sponsoring a trip to see the Van Gogh and Gauguin Exhibit at The Art Institute of Chicago.

Trip date is Saturday, December 8, 2001, leaving at 7:00 a.m. from the Hwy 431 Park and Ride and returns at 8:30 p.m. The fee is $73.00.

Co-organized by The Art Institute of Chicago and the Van Gogh Museum, Amsterdam, Van Gogh and Gauguin. The Studio of the South examines the personal and professional history of Vincent Van Gogh (1853-90) and Paul Gauguin (1848-1903). Their mutual admiration, rivalrous friendship, extended professional dialogue, and brief period of collaboration in Arles in 1888 constitute one of the most dramatically revealing sagas in the history of Modern Art.

The story of two artists who lived, and battled, with each other in the struggle to realize their potential is at once familiar and untold.

Over 150 works are included in this exhibition, including 130 paintings, 16 drawings, and 9 ceramic pieces. The exhibition takes two hours.

The rest of the day is yours to explore downtown Chicago or spend the whole day at the Art Institute. A list of activities taking place in the general area is available.

Admissions to area attractions are not included in the cost of the tour. The tour will be stopping for an evening meal on the return trip. Meal expenses are on your own.

Teaching Our Children The Value of Learning

By Elizabeth Burmaster, State Superintendent

As part of our state's efforts to increase parental and community involvement in our schools, we must join together and instill our children and young adults with enthusiasm for learning.

I've worked in education for 25 wonderful years. As a third generation teacher and parent of three public school children myself, I can say without a doubt, parents are the first and most important teachers of our children.

It can no longer be debated - when parents are involved, children do better in school, stay in school longer, and participate in fewer risky behaviors. I am committed to join you in building a strong relationship among parents, teachers, school administrators, elected officials, the business community and neighborhood groups because I believe we have a shared responsibility for the success of our children.

American Education Week Nov. 11-17 offers a great opportunity for Wisconsin to answer the call to do our part for our children and their education. Celebrated every year since 1921, American Education Week offers a grand opportunity to raise public awareness about the needs and virtues of public schools. As part of our celebration in Wisconsin, I am asking teachers and their local associations to invite parents, senior citizens, and business and community leaders into classrooms to show them today's schools in action.

To a child, one of the most obvious facts about grown-ups is that they have forgotten what it was like to be a child. But those of us in education are truly fortunate; we are constantly reminded of the joy of being a child.

It is that joy which makes our schools great in Wisconsin. The joy that comes from knowing you can make a difference in someone's life - the joy of helping a young person understand that what lies behind them and what lies before them are tiny matters compared to what lies within them.

I often wish we could capture on film the exact moment in which a child realizes he or she has learned to read or the exact moment in which a young adult realizes she or he can play a musical instrument so the tune is recognizable. There is a facial expression and a sparkle of hope that expresses the excitement of learning. Sometimes, as we grow older, we lose touch with that feeling, and it becomes harder to convincingly share that joy with our children.

I would suggest that the information superhighway offers all of us an unprecedented opportunity to express wonder at how much there is to learn and how much fun it can be. Adults can help children become critical thinkers, problem solvers, and decision makers while researching endless subjects together via the internet. It shows children and young adults that we value learning and - as is often the case with precocious PCers - we can learn from each other.

If you want to see a child get interested in learning, give them the opportunity to teach you something about computers and the internet. Indeed, our children take great joy teaching, an adult about new technologies! And remember that Wisconsin's public librarians are partners in education and will gladly help parents and students without computers make use of this technology.

A parent's job does not end when he or she drops their child off at the school's front door. Everyone must do their part. No one can ignore their responsibility if we are to succeed. That is why I encourage you to actively participate in our children's education, to read to your children, to help them with their homework, or to volunteer or tutor at your local school.

It will take all of us working with educators to make this a state where hope is alive for every Wisconsin child to have better life, a state where we make the commitment to lift the hope-filled hearts of our children up to their dreams.

The Winter's Rest

by Ami

If you are joining the bulk of us, you are checking your "Prepare for Winter" list of things to accomplish before we are inundated with snow and ice! Days and nites with the temp below zero. A return to those boots and heavy coats.

Then my thoughts turn to the tiny winter "stay here" birds who appear daily at my wildlife feeders. And one wonders; just how do they manage to stay alive considering the cold and Jack Frost attacks?

Some how they do manage...even providing us with a spirit boost as they adorn our yards with their colorful feathers, their cheery songs. Think of it. They have no furnace to warm their bedrooms; soft, heated water to spruce up their little bodies! No warm wraps to shut out the freezing temps; worst of all, no one to promise them a warm spring and summer sure to arrive in good time.

Indeed, someone does watch over them; does provide shelter and the will to "see thru times of hardship and suffering." Perhaps they help us to a faith that gives us a heart wish that no matter what befalls our days and years, we can make it thru. Warm blessings to you and yours.

Exhibitors Karen Heberer and Kris Ballard of Kewaskum will be featuring holiday decorations at their booth Saturday, November 17, at the Kewaskum Junior Women's Club's Annual Kettle Country Christmas craft fair being held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Kewaskum Middle School.

Let Freedom Ring!

The wooden steps noisily creaked beneath me in welcome as I approached the screen door above. Little did I know that two worlds met on the hinge of that old door: the world of time racing by from without and the world of time standing still from within.

The Victorian farmhouse, built in the 1800's and set in the midst of rolling Wisconsin farmland and orchards, had been in the family for four generations. It was one of the great-grandchildren of the original pioneer settlers who homesteaded the place that had invited me over to see some antique books, leather-bound and printed in the 1700s, which were up in the attic.

She called from beyond the screen, "Come in!"

Her grandfather, who is deceased, lived to be over 100 years old. The White House birthday announcement of congratulations, dated 1996, was proudly displayed on the refrigerator commemorating his centennial milestone. As noteworthy as the announcement was, the refrigerator called for a second look as well. It was most unusual and quite unlike anything I had ever seen. The young woman, seeing my curious stare, explained that her grandparents purchased the refrigerator in the 40's and never replaced it because it ran perfectly all this time.

And then there was the stove... It, like the fridge in the corner, had been in use for over 50 years too. Incredible! Spanning over half the wall, it was both an electric stove and wood burner in one unit. Electric burners were above the electric oven on the left and old cast metal burners were above the wood burning box on the right.

The kitchen, without traditional cupboards, had old-fashioned hutches with glass doors filled with Currier and Ives dishes and an adjacent pantry. The floor was wooden and in immaculate shape, as was the woodwork. The towels hanging neatly by the sink, and obviously pressed, were flower sack dishcloths - embroidered, of course.

Two beautiful, hand-carved pieces of furniture stood near the large, open area of the foyer which the young woman told me were carved by her great-great Uncle Herman on her mother's side, and then added three amazing little words, "who was blind."

Opening the hall closet, which was only about four feet in total width, she commented on the size of closets back then and closets today in this Age of Acquisition.

It was while she stood there next to the open closet door, that impulse and a disregard for proper manners overtook me. I reached into the closet and pulled out one of the coats hanging there.

"What is this?" I asked (even though I knew perfectly well that it was an Army uniform with a decorated sleeve of accomplishment).

"Oh, that's my father's uniform from World War II and my uncle's is right there beside his," she said.

"And this one?" I asked of the third remaining one hanging there - a much longer coat, woolen and unlike the others.

"That's my grandfather's uniform from World War I."

I was speechless. The little hall closet, barely four feet wide, held only nine coats: a barncoat for Grandpa and one for Grandma, too; a couple of everyday jackets, one for each; two dress coats for Sundays; and the three uniforms.

"How long have those uniforms been hanging in this closet with all of these other coats?" I asked.

"Well, as long as I can remember," she said. "My grandfather was grateful for the freedom of America. Those uniforms served as a reminder to him every day. His certificate from the American Legion hangs over there by the kitchen table.

I had arrived that day expecting to find extraordinary things in the attic. Eventually we did go up there and my expectations were fulfilled. But it was the extraordinary attitude of her grandfather that left the most profound and lasting impression on me that afternoon.

This simple man led a simple life, quiet and unassuming. He raised a large family - raised them with values and ethics and faith - never forgetting that freedom allowed him to do so. When he took his family to church on Sundays and reached for his dress coat in the closet, the uniforms were there to remind him that freedom allowed him the privilege of educating his children. When he went in to the fields to labor at his trade or to the elevator to sell his crops and reached for his barncoat in the little hall closet, the uniforms, again, were there, always there, to remind him to pursue happiness in choosing his life's work.

Freedom. It was precious to him. The uniforms hanging in the closet were a testimony to this. He could look on them in pride remembering the price both he and his boys had contributed to the freedom their families cherished so.

POLICE REPORTS

On November 5, Kewaskum Police received a complaint from Woody's Steakhouse regarding missing payroll checks.

The manager at Woody's stated that she hadn't realized the checks were missing until someone from Herriges Oil returned the checks. They had been laying near their dumpster.

One of the envelopes had been opened but the check was left inside. The manager was unsure who had picked up their checks so it was unknown at the time how many checks had actually been taken.

Also on November 5, Kewaskum Police received a complaint regarding a stolen trailer hitch.

The complainant stated that between 10 p.m. on November 1st and 10 a.m. on November 2nd, someone had removed the receiver hitch on his truck. He had stated that the truck had been parked in the same spot all summer and he had no idea who would have taken the hitch.

On November 9, Kewaskum Police were dispatched to a Braatz Drive residence in reference to a found child.

The complainant stated that she found the child walking on Western Avenue without shoes or a jacket.

The officer took the child to several different houses and nobody recognized the child. The child was then taken into police custody.

The officer then received a call from another officer stating that the mother of the child had called to report her child missing.

The child was then reunited with his mother.

If anyone has information on any of the complaints, contact the Kewaskum Police Department at 626-2323 or the Washington County Chief's Tip Line at 1-800-232-0594. All calls are confidential.

Police reports are compiled weekly by Statesman staff member Nicole Rawley.

EDUCATION... IT'S EVERYONE'S BUSINESS

By Wayne P. Graczyk,
Kewaskum Superintendent of Schools
www.kewaskumschools.org

Last week my article closed with a wish "that someday in the not too distant future, Kewaskum might also have a drama facility that our students, and community, will equally proud of." I was referring to the less than adequate site of Rose Hall currently used for school plays.

On Wednesday, November 28, there will be another meeting of a Referendum Planning Committee. This committee has the task of discussing not only the possibility of addressing the issue of proper facilities for drama groups, but also a Capital Improvement Plan for the district. In addition, this group will be exploring possible ways to enhance both the Middle School and the High School, i.e., floors, roofs, ceiling tiles, plumbing, lighting, room modifications, etc. Your involvement is encouraged. The meeting will be held in the Kewaskum Middle School and begins at 7:00 p.m. You are encouraged to be a part of the process to add, as my father used to say, "your two-bits worth". Your voice will be heard!

Everyone knows that we are living in very unsettling times. Terrorism isn't just the initial act, but the aftermath of that act, or acts. The real goal of terrorism is to disrupt normal activities, to coerce by threat or violence, to force people to fear the unknown, to create doubt, dread, alarm, dismay and trepidation. You see it happening right here in America and around the world. However, while all this turmoil surrounds us, we as citizens are being asked to return to, and maintain, a normal routine in our daily lives. That is exactly what this committee is attempting to do. Their work began before that never to be forgotten day of September 11, and will continue until their task is complete.

At the November 28 meeting, an architect has been invited from Bray &

Associates as the committee begins to identify the needs at the middle and high schools, including the possible construction of an auditorium for community and school use. The committee has already determined that if and when a referendum is scheduled, that it be delayed from April of 2002 until either September or November of 2002. They want to be sure they explore all the options, and do the most thorough, in-depth study possible. The primary goal is to not only gain community input for the project, but eventual community support as well. This can be accomplished with your presence at upcoming planning meetings. Your involvement begins with a single step, to attend on November 28.

Anybody can say "yes" or "no" without hearing all the facts. It takes an informed and special person to say "yes" or "no", with all the facts. Don't count on hearsay or rumors. Get involved. See you at the Middle School on November 28, 7:00 p.m. Remember the tour begins at 2:45 p.m.

The meeting on November 28 will begin with a tour of the entire middle school complex at 2:45 p.m.

St. Lucas Primary Goes Pioneer

The students in grades one and two, (Mrs. Patti Derge's and Mrs. Erika Moldenhauer's classes) of St. Lucas Lutheran School hit the pioneer trail Monday, Nov. 5. They rode by car (buckboards and covered wagons were not available) to the Samaritan Home in West Bend. Later in the day, the traveling troop of pioneer presenters camped at Mapledale Manor in Kewaskum.

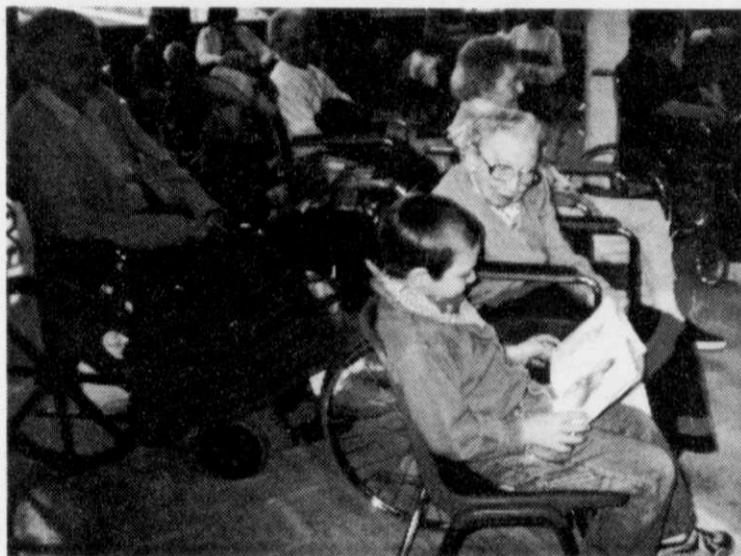

The first and second graders are studying Laura Ingalls Wilder's LITTLE HOUSE ON THE PRAIRIE books. So the stories gave the students excellent areas from which they could learn more about the pioneer days.

They developed the stories in three different ways. First they learned songs sung during the pioneer era. Second, pioneer artifacts were demonstrated by Diana Susen and David Gosa from the Washington County Historical Society. Finally, shorter versions of the Little House series were read by the students to the senior citizens of both the Samaritan Home and Mapledale Manor.

The girls and boys wore prairie costumes as they sang and put actions to the songs POP! GOES THE WEASEL, THE OLD CHARIOT, and BUFFALO GALS.

The Historical Society representatives demonstrated such items as a butter churn, ice cream maker, grade school slate, seed planters and hay mow knife as well as many others. Again students were allowed to hold these items and walk among the grandmas and grandpas. Many of the older generation commented that they had used such items when they were younger.

The third phase was reading the stories to the senior residents. It was interesting to see the young ones read while the older folks bent closer to hear the stories.

Finally, the program closed with THE PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE and the singing of THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER.

The Pizza Hut - Book It Program prompted the two St. Lucas' teachers to develop the idea of broadening their students' appreciation for a by-gone era. Laura Ingalls Wilder's books took on a more significant meaning through the use of music and artifacts of the pioneer period.

Time to Stop This Silly Idea

The state of Wisconsin is facing a deficit of between $500 million and $1 billion in the next year and a half but that did not prevent the State Assembly from passing a resolution asking Congress to move towards making Puerto Rico a state.

The momentum for such a foolish idea has been building for about a decade in this country. Like most bad legislation, it may pass because everyone is afraid to point out the other side. First, Puerto Rico, if it were to become a state, would do so after some sort of vote showing over fifty percent of its population wanted statehood.

In 1998, a referendum showed about forty-six percent in favor so a future vote showing fifty to fifty-five percent is possible. But that would mean, over forty percent would not want to become part of the United States. When Alaska and Hawaii were admitted to the union, polls showed over ninety percent of their population in favor. One could ask Great Britain what it is like to have Northern Ireland, a country with over forty percent of its population wanting out as part of its republic. There is already a radical Puerto Rican terrorist organization with its current status.

What would the United States do if these terrorist groups begin acts against government installation in Puerto Rico? Secondly, in Puerto Rico, Spanish is the primary language. One could look to Canada to see a long-term problem this can cause. Despite the fact that Canada is a prosperous and free country, separatist politics have dominated Quebec for years. Their Parliament must abate how to handle language differences. Like all democracies divided by language (India, several African countries) natural political debate is stunted as ethnic differences come to the fore. Third, adding a new state decreases the influence of all of the other states in Congress. Puerto Rico, with a population of about four million people would be given six new Congressmen. This would mean that other states would lose six seats. Wisconsin has just dropped from nine to eight representatives. Why would any state want to risk losing more? The strange thing is that this idea is being advanced when most of the rest of the world is allowing new countries to break off from old ones.

Czechoslovakia broke into the Czech Republic and Slovakia after over eighty years. Many new republics have emerged from the Soviet Union with the Ukraine being separate from Russia for the first time in almost 350 years. Steps have been taken to grant Northern Ireland more autonomy. If Puerto Rico wants to stop being a commonwealth and become an independent country, that would be fine. The Philippians, which also came under American domain in the Spanish American War, was granted independence after World War II.

The fear of being called racist has prevented sensible people from speaking out on the idea of statehood. If they don't speak out soon, we may end up with our own Quebec or Northern Ireland. The State Assembly voted to encourage this idea further by a 96 to 2 vote.

Please let me know what you think on this issue. Contact me here in Madison by calling 1-888- 534-0059.

This year's Homecoming Parade was held on Saturday, September 29, 2001. Homecoming is always filled with many festivities. The football game, the dance, class floats and this year, the Kewaskum

FFA even entered a display. The FFA float featured members and their pets, and three of the members were riding horseback. On the FFA wagon was a goat, a calf, two Siamese kittens and a dalmatian puppy. Despite some of the mess that FFA members' horses provided, the members proudly displayed their projects in support of homecoming.

The three FFA members on horseback were Becky Herriges on Spirit, Mandy Henderson on Legacy and Allison Janz on Candy. Driving the 1959 Super M, owned by Michael Beck, was Jon Lendved. The members riding on the wagon were Nicky Fischer, Bridget Beck, Lisa Beck, Erin Beck, Shannon Dwyer, and Michelle Weber. Following behind were Cam Howey and Jim Fischer. They all had a great time showing their projects to the community and waving to the crowd.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor and Beechwood Area Residents,

As a concerned parent and grandmother I would like to thank the Beechwood residents personally for the safe and well executed Halloween Trick or Treat time that all experienced.

Starting off at the nursing home made the residents and workers extremely happy and a great kick-off to the following two hours of fun. I'm sure all of the children participating thanked every household for their goody contribution verbally but I wanted to extend a huge thank-you to all those who generously contributed to the TRICK OR TREAT FOR UNICEF FUND.

With all of the other fund donations that everyone has contributed to in the past weeks it was nice to see unsuspecting neighbors dig a little deeper into their pockets for extra change for the fund.

A letter of thanks is also attached from the UNICEF president that I received.

THANK YOU BEECHWOOD RESIDENTS!

Alice Krahn

P.S. Beverage donations were also appreciated by all.

Dear Editor:

The week of November 11-17 marks the 80th annual observance of American Education Week. In addition, November 14 is Educational Support Professionals Day.

This is a time for saluting Kewaskum's great schools and the partnership between teachers, support staff, students, parents, and the community. The theme of this year's celebration, "Together: Making Public Schools Great for Every Child," reflects a commitment to all students' learning and success.

We commend the teachers of the Kewaskum School District for their dedication. Together with them, we are proud to have the opportunity to make a difference in the lives of students, because every child deserves a great school.

Sincerely,
Kewaskum Auxiliary
Personnel

.....

What's Wrong With Kewaskum?

As you drive through Kewaskum you see very few homes displaying our National banner.

With our nation in such unsure times, we should stand together by flying our American flag.... This would show everyone that we are united and stand behind our government.

Competition easing the burden for telecom customers nationwide

Right now, consumers in Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Kansas, Massachusetts, New York, Oklahoma and Texas are enjoying the benefits of full telecommunications competition. A single phone bill for all services, one-stop shopping and lower long-distance phone rates are just a few of the advantages these customers have reaped — along with more long-distance providers to choose from.

Merrill Wegner

But Wisconsin residents have been left out of the game — without these same benefits or savings.

Fortunately, SBC Ameritech is taking steps toward correcting this disparity. We're working with the Public Service Commission of Wisconsin (PSC) to show that our state's local telecommunications market is open to competition — a requirement that must be fulfilled to bring long-distance competition to the state.

Already, more than 400,000 residential and business customers are being served by competitors in SBC's Wisconsin service territory, including more than one-third of the business lines. In other states where long-distance competition has been implemented, additional competition for local phone service has increased. But the advantages don't stop there.

When our application is endorsed by the PSC and approved by the Federal Communications Commission, you will receive the same benefits that residents in other states already enjoy:

- getting a single, monthly bill at no extra charge — No more multiple bills from different telecom providers at different times each month;
- one-stop shopping — Whether you need local, long-distance or wireless service, you can go to one telecom provider, whatever your needs; and
- financial savings — Competition has driven down the cost of long-distance calling in states where it has been implemented — across the board.

SBC is ready to bring Wisconsin consumers the benefits and services that come with full telecommunications competition, including a single bill, one-stop shopping and savings — the same benefits that millions of other Americans already enjoy.

2001 Regular Gun Deer Season Runs Nov. 17-25

White-Tailed Deer Population Remains High in Many Areas of State

MADISON -- Wisconsin regular nine-day gun deer season opens statewide Saturday, November 17, and state wildlife managers say with the state white-tailed deer herd continuing to hover around 1.65 million animals, hunters should be able to look forward to another good hunt.

"The majority of deer management units across the state are over population goals," says Bill Mytton, Department of Natural Resources deer and bear ecologist. "As always, weather can play a big role in how successful the hunt will be, but if the weather cooperates, hunters should have another good year."

Last year, hunters registered 442,581 deer during the regular nine-day season. And hunters set both a state and national record of more than 618,000 deer harvested in all of last year's Wisconsin deer hunting seasons, including archery, antlerless Zone T, and tribal hunts.

Hunters again this year will receive one free antlerless-only Zone T permit with each deer hunting license they purchase. The antlerless permit can be used in any of the 76 deer management units that are designated as Zone T units this year.

Zone T units are those in which the deer population is at least 20% over the goal established for that unit. The Zone T permits contain a reference to an earn-a-buck category, but that is not in effect this year and will not go into effect until 2004 at the earliest.

Hunters can expect a great deal of advance notice before any earn-a-buck seasons are implemented. In line with Natural Resource Board policy, earn-a-buck seasons would not be implemented in a deer management unit until after two consecutive Zone T seasons for the unit fail to bring deer populations within 20% of established population goals.

The high deer populations also triggered two special Zone T antlerless only seasons. The first was held October 25 to 28, with preliminary numbers indicating hunters registered almost 45,000 deer. The second Zone T season will be held December 6 to 9. There is also a muzzleloader deer season from November 26 to December 2.

2001 DNR REGIONAL FORECASTS

Northern Region

The northernmost tier of Wisconsin's counties experienced a hard winter, but even in those places deer remain in good numbers.

Some lower reproduction is expected in those units. The nine-day gun season falls early on the calendar in 2001 and may catch the latter part of the rut. The year classes from the "easy" winter years of 1998 and 1999 are now two-and three-year-olds, so there is some potential to find bucks of these ages.

West Central Region

Winter had very little impact on the herd in this part of the state and it's anticipated that this region's farmland units will go into the hunt with about as many deer as last year. In the central forest, all units are above population goals and there was an excellent fawn crop this year.

Northeast Region

All deer management units except 49B and 50 are above prescribed management goals. Private land units in east central Wisconsin have some of the highest deer densities in Wisconsin. Last winter's conditions in the northeast were in the mild to moderate range and had little effect on deer populations.

Southeast Region

Deer populations are highly variable in this part of the state due to the variety of habitat conditions and hunting pressure. It does not appear that the heavy snows of December and January had any effect on the local deer population and there are abundant deer and deer sign on public and private lands in Racine and Kenosha Counties. Many opportunities for quality hunting can be found for deer on both public and private lands, but pre-season scouting and permission from landowners is critical. Hunters should always check with local township and village offices to see if there are any firearm or bow ordinances.

South Central Region

Winter conditions in the SCR although seemingly harsh in December, were still relatively mild overall and little effect from the winter is expected. Half of the units will head into the hunting season with as many or more deer in the field as last year, with only two deer management units at or near goal.

FAST FACTS FOR THE 2001 DEER SEASON

Hunting Licenses

* Hunters must carry a valid hunting license on their person while engaged in hunting.

* Gun deer hunting licenses must be purchased before the start of the gun deer season (by November 16), except Wisconsin resident armed forces members on furlough or residents who have completed a hunter safety course and turn 12 years old during the season.

* It is illegal to allow someone else to use or carry your license or tag, or for you to carry some other person's license or tag.

* No person less than 12 years old may obtain a license.

* People born on or after January 1, 1973 must present a hunter education certificate to purchase a license.

* Duplicate licenses are available at all license vendors by returning remaining parts of the lost license. Duplicate deer hunting licenses cost $11.

Season Dates

* The regular nine-day gun season runs from Saturday, November 17 through Sunday, November 25.

* There are two special antlerless-only seasons in Zone T units this year. The early season was October 25 through 28 and the late season will be December 6 through 9.

* Muzzleloader season is November 26 through December 2.

* Archery deer early season ran September 15 through November 11 in non-Zone T units. Archers in Zone T units had an additional four day season that ran from November 12 through 15. The late archery season runs December 1 through 31.

Hunting Hours

* Gun deer hunting hours are 1/2 hour before sunrise to 20 minutes after sunset. There are six separate zones from east to west across Wisconsin, as well as a northern and southern area for calculating sunrise and sunset. Hunters should refer to the table on pages 64-67 of the 2001 Wisconsin Hunting Regulations and then:

* Determine in which hunting hours zone they will hunt using the map on page 63.

* Determine if they will hunt in the Northern or Southern area.

* Add the minutes shown for the zone in which they will hunt to the opening and closing times listed in either the Northern or Southern Zone A hunting hours table.

Firearms Restrictions

* Certain parts of southeastern and west central Wisconsin are limited to handguns, shotguns and muzzleloaders. Check page 50 of the 2001 Wisconsin Hunting Regulations for zone boundaries.

* Only handguns, shotguns and muzzleloaders are permitted the first two days of the season in Pepin County and portions of Buffalo, Jackson, La Crosse, Monroe and Trempealeau counties. Rifles may be used thereafter.

* Deer may be hunted with handguns loaded with centerfire cartridges of .22 caliber or larger that also have a minimum barrel length of 5 1/2 inches measured from the muzzle to the firing pin with the action closed.

Key Hunting Rules

* Blaze orange clothing required: Hunters must wear outer clothing that is at least 50 percent blaze orange above the waist. A hat, if worn, must be also at least 50 percent blaze orange. Faded or stained blaze orange clothing is unsafe and may not meet law requirements. Camo-blaze is legal, but is not as visible as solid blaze clothing. 100 percent solid blaze orange is recommended.

* Hunting is not allowed during the 24-hour period immediately preceding the gun deer season.

* Adult supervision required: Hunters age 12 and 13 years old must be accompanied by a parent or guardian. Persons under the age of 12 may not possess a firearm. Accompanied means within sight and voice contact without the aid of any mechanical or electronic amplifying device other than a hearing aid.

* Coyote hunting is closed during the regular nine-day and muzzleloader deer seasons in most of northern Wisconsin. The boundary for this closed area has changed this year and can be found on page 57 of the current hunting regulations.

DEER TAGGING AND REGISTRATION

Deer Carcass Tags

* Hunters will receive a backtag and two carcass tags when they purchase licenses. This year the two carcass tags are printed on one square; last year each square was its own carcass tag. Hunters should be careful separating the tags before attaching them to harvested deer.

* Regular gun carcass tag can only be used for antlered deer in any unit or can be used for antlerless deer in Zone T units.

* Zone T antlerless tags can only be used in Zone T management units only for antlerless deer, but they can be filled in any season by any weapon. An antlerless deer is any deer that does not have an antler of three or more inches in length.

* There is no Earn-a-Buck in 2001. Carcass tag design was completed for this season and the validation slot for Earn-a-Buck could not be removed. If Zone T hunts do not bring the deer population down closer to management goals, Earn-a-Buck could be implemented in the future.

* Hunter's Choice permits allow the holder to kill one deer - either antlered or antlerless -- in the specific deer management unit designated on the permit. This is not an extra or bonus permit.

Deer Tagging Instructions

* Deer must be kept intact, except for field dressing, prior to registration. There is an exemption for people holding class A or B disabled hunting permits; they may skin and quarter deer.

* Immediately upon killing and before field dressing or moving the deer, validate the carcass tag.

* Tear the kill tags apart prior to removing the backing.

* Be sure to select the correct tag and validate by slitting the appropriate marks.

* Lay a string or similar fastener (not provided) across the middle of the 1/2 tag on the sticky side.

* Fold the tag over the string and press the ends firmly together.

* Immediately attach the tag to an ear or antler.

* After the deer has been tagged, it must be registered at an appropriate registration station.

Deer Registration

* Firearm Deer Registration Deadline: No later than 5 p.m. of the day after the close of the season.

* Regular Gun License: Hunters must register deer killed with their regular gun license in the Season Zone (page 47 of hunting regulations) in which it was killed.

* Antlerless Deer must be registered before being removed from the deer management unit where killed (or in an adjoining unit if transported directly to the nearest authorized registration station).

* Registration stubs are available at deer registration stations and license vendors. To save time, hunters should fill out the registration stub and have backtag and Hunter's Choice permit (if applicable) with them before bringing the deer to the registration station attendant.

* Registration stations can be found through DNR service centers or on the DNR web site by clicking on "outdoor activities," "hunting," "white-tailed deer," and then "2001 fall deer registration stations" buttons to reach the URL: <http://www.dnr.state.wi.us/org/land/wildlife/hunt/registration/index.asp?SF=CO&SD=desc>

Transporting Deer

It is illegal to transport:

* another person's unregistered deer unless accompanied by the person issued the carcass tag. Once registered, anyone may transport the animal. Residents and nonresidents may transport legally possessed deer out of state once registered.

* an unregistered deer in or on a vehicle unless the animal is openly exposed (open to view by a person in a passing vehicle) and placed so that riders cannot handle the carcass tag.

Deer Management Unit boundary changes and correction:

* Hunters should note that there are several new units and boundary changes that will go into effect in 2001. These include modifications to DMUs 1, 6, 7, 28, 69A, 69B and 77M. Please review your regulation pamphlet to see the newly defined units. The 2001 Wisconsin Hunting Regulations contain an error regarding deer management unit 77M. The gun deer season limit for unit 77M should read: one deer of either sex per gun hunter's choice permit plus additional antlerless deer per permit.

Deer Hunting Information on the DNR web page

* Hunters can surf the web: to find information on deer hunting, log onto the DNR Deer web pages by clicking on "outdoor activities," "hunting" and then "white-tailed deer" buttons to reach the URL: <http://www.dnr.state.wi.us/org/land/wildlife/HUNT/deer/>.

Remember T-A-B-K to Avoid Firearm Injuries During Upcoming Deer Hunt

MADISON -- Nearly 99 percent of all hunting accidents can be attributed to a violation of one of four rules of firearms safety, according to state hunting safety specialists.

While these incidents occur to varying degrees year after year, there are a few simple steps hunters can take to almost guarantee that they or someone they know won't finish the season as a hunting statistic, according to Tim Lawhern, hunter education administrator for the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources.

Last year, Wisconsin recorded 19 firearm injuries during the nine-day deer season. The lowest number of injuries during the regular season was nine in 1997. The most hunting-related firearm injuries in the state since the DNR began keeping track of such information was 55, reported in 1984.

"There are simple but important rules to remember and any one of them could help save a life or prevent an injury," Lawhern said.

The rules are summarized as TABK:

T -- Treat every firearm as if it is loaded.

A -- Always point the muzzle of your firearm in a safe direction.

B -- Be certain of your target and what lies beyond.

K -- Keep your finger out of the trigger guard until ready to shoot.

Based on hunting accident statistics, about half of the firearm injuries that happen during the nine-day gun deer season are self-inflicted.

"Clearly, the people who fall into this group aren't following the 'A' in T-A-B-K," Lawhern said. "Keeping your muzzle pointed in a safe direction means it is not pointed at yourself or anyone else. A safety mechanism can fail, but usually it's the person who fails to engage it. Keeping your gun pointed in a safe direction means no one gets hurt if the firearm discharges."

Most of the remaining firearm incidents involve people shooting someone in their own hunting party. This is especially the case during group bagging hunts and deer drives. This emphasizes the third rule of firearm safety: Positively identify your target and make sure of what lies beyond it. And if you don't have a good backstop for your shot, don't shoot.

"Far too often when wardens are investigating a firearm incident the shooter will state that he or she 'thought' they were shooting a deer," Lawhern said. "But there's a big difference between being certain of your target and 'thinking' you've seen a deer."

"And then there are those people who know they're shooting at a deer, but one of their buddies is in the background and catches a slug from a shot that never should have been taken," Lawhern added. "This usually happens when someone is shooting at a running deer and develops a sort of 'tunnel vision' that blocks out everything but the deer."

Successful Hunt Requires Preparation and Planning

MADISON -- Part of a successful gun deer season for any hunter is the planning and preparation that goes into the hunt before the crisp, November morning of opening day.

A safe, responsible hunter does more than just make sure he or she has their blaze orange ready and enough ammunition to make it through nine days of deer camp.

According to Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources hunter education administrator Tim Lawhern, there are a number of simple steps hunters can take to help ensure a safe hunt.

"Planning your hunt and being prepared goes a long way toward keeping you safe," Lawhern said. "There are things you can't control during the season -- the number of deer you see and the weather -- but the factors you can control through planning will help you enjoy a hunt that is as safe as possible."

Make sure your firearms are accurately sighted in and in good working condition.

* Receive landowner permission if you plan to hunt private land.

* If you're hunting in a group, make sure everyone sticks to the hunting plan, knows their role, and their safe zones of fire.

* If you're hunting alone, tell someone where you plan to hunt and when you plan to return. Pack along a cell phone or a plastic whistle for emergencies. Hunt within your limitations. Make sure you have a plan for retrieving your deer.

* Know the legal hunting hours, make sure you have your license and tags, and bring along a hunting regulation pamphlet.

* Know the location of a convenient deer registration station.

* If using a tree stand, inspect it before the season begins.

* Keep wearing blaze orange. If the weather's warm or when field dressing a deer, unzip your jacket but keep it on. Consider bringing along a blaze orange vest or light jacket for those situations.

Finally, he adds, hunters develop the habit of opening the action on every gun they touch so they won't have to worry about accidental discharges. "And keeping your finger on the trigger is just good common sense," he said. "There's a very slim chance a gun will fire if the trigger isn't pulled; it's one of the best ways to avoid an injury."

* Carry a pair of binoculars in order to properly identify your target.

* Bring along snacks and plenty of water.

Lawhern also advises hunters to be considerate when it comes to disposing of their trash and other waste, including the remains of their deer.

"It's a good idea to carry a garbage bag or two with you for trash that you're likely to generate in the field -- beverage cans, candy bar wrappers and the like," Lawhern said. "Remember the old camping adage: If you pack it in; pack it out."

Properly disposing of your deer carcass remains also takes some planning. Check with your local waste hauler to learn whether they'll dispose of animal remains. Too often, wardens find piles of animal remains at the parking lot areas of the state's public lands.

"Many people, in addition to hunters, use these lands. Littering a parking lot with deer remains only hurts the reputation of hunters," Lawhern said.

Don't Take Deer Tags for Granted; New Design Warrants a Closer Look

MADISON -- The deer tags that hunters will soon be putting to use could be worth thousands of dollars. That is if they do not use them properly or timely enough: Penalties for failure to properly tag deer could easily amount to more than $2,000.

For that reason, Wisconsin game wardens urge deer hunters to take a few minutes to study their tags and familiarize themselves with their use, especially how they are displayed on the perforated, paper squares.

"This year's carcass tags are half the size of last years. Two of them fit side-by-side on a single square," said Marilyn Davis, chief of the Department of Natural Resources licensing bureau. "Some hunters have already made the mistake of using a gun tag on deer they've killed with a bow. If a mistake were to go unnoticed, a hunter could be heading out on opening day of the regular gun deer season without a gun carcass tag."

As a cost-saving measure, the department switched to the "two tags per square" license this year and will stay with this system for the foreseeable future. As a result of some of the confusion, customer service centers across the state are ready to assist customers who make a legitimate mistake.

"In the fading daylight or amidst the thrill of the hunt, it's not hard to confuse one tag with another," Davis said. "A few minutes spent familiarizing yourself with your tags before you go out could save you some trouble during the season."

Making sure to use the right tag is only part of the equation when it comes to using tags properly.

"Misuse or the complete failure to use a tag can be a costly matter," said DNR chief warden Tom Harelson. "Even though it seems like a simple matter, we find people every year who, for one reason or another, aren't tagging their deer correctly."

Harelson offers the following advice:

* The back tag must be displayed on the center of the hunter's back on the outermost garment. Use a plastic holder to protect the tag from the elements. If you're wearing a hood, make sure it doesn't cover up the tag. Fine for improper use: $128.60.

* Validate and attach the correct carcass tag to your deer's ear or antlers immediately after retrieving it. Do this before field dressing or moving your deer. Fine for failure to immediately tag deer: $485.00. Fine for possession of deer without tag: $2,000.

* Do not carry another person's tags. Fine for illegal possession or use of other's tags: $247.40.

* Carry along string or wire to attach the tag to the deer. Bring enough for everyone in your hunting party.

"The penalties can add up quickly," Harelson said. "It only takes a minute or two to tag your deer once you've retrieved it. Ask yourself if it's worth $485.00 and the loss of the deer to wait until you've dragged it back to your vehicle. I think the answer is pretty simple."

Reducing Hunting Stress Is Good for Your Health

MADISON -- The thrill of the hunt and the exertion sometimes required during it can be hazardous to a hunter's health, especially if they already have an underlying heart condition or other physical problems.

And while it's too late to get in serious shape for this year's regular deer season, there are some precautions hunters can take to reduce the risk of physical injuries according to recreational safety experts with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources.

"Merely seeing a deer can cause a hunter's heart rate to more than double, not to mention dragging a 150 pound deer through the woods," said Tim Lawhern, hunter education administrator for the Wisconsin DNR.

Wisconsin law doesn't require the state to keep track of the number of people who die from heart attacks while hunting, but Lawhern says that newspapers report at least one death every year and he receives anecdotal information about other heart attacks, not all of them fatal.

"Part of being a responsible hunter is being prepared," Lawhern said. "Preparing and maintaining your body -- as well as your equipment -- is important and adds to the enjoyment of the hunt."

Lawhern advises people to take it easy during their hunt if they're not used to even moderate physical exercise. And he offers these other "healthy" tips:

* Dress in layers so that you can remove clothing when you start to warm up. Clothing gets damp from perspiration after exertion and wet layers pull away body heat. Use wicking underclothes so the layer next to your skin is dry and you don't become hypothermic.

* Bring along plenty of water so you don't become dehydrated.

* Take things at a comfortable pace -- rest for a spell if you feel the slightest bit tired.

* Get help to drag a deer out of the field to your vehicle.

* Stop what you're doing and get medical help if you experience any of the warning signs of a heart attack such as pressure in the chest, pain spreading to the shoulders, neck or arms, chest discomfort with lightheadedness, fainting, sweating or nausea, or shortness of breath.

Deer hunting can also be hard on your back if it's not done carefully. Hunters typically set themselves up for injury by sitting still for long periods with bad posture. The sitting stiffens joints in the back, compresses vertebrae and lets muscles get stiff.

To help avoid straining your back, Lawhern offers the following advice:

* While seated in a tree stand or on the ground, lean back slightly if possible to take some of the pressure off the spine.

* If you're fortunate enough to get a deer, limber up before attempting to haul the deer out of the field or forest by doing some easy stretching exercises.

* Don't try to drag a deer out by holding onto its antlers or leggs, instead tie a rope around the carcass then tie the rope around your hips and walk out without having to bend at the waist.

* Use a plastic game sled or wheeled cart to haul your deer.

Eighth Grade Girls Stop Pewaukee

The Kewaskum Middle School eighth grade girls basketball team defeated Pewaukee on Friday, November 8 in Kewaskum. The 21-16 victory marked the third consecutive win for the team.

Strong backcourt pressure from Jacque Kwaterski, Heather Welch, Jamie Vogt and Danielle Yanke rattled the Pewaukee squad and put the Indians ahead 4-0 early in the game. Pewaukee got past Kewaskum's press a couple of times, and the score was tied at six entering the second quarter.

Kewaskum had a tough time getting things going in the second frame, but the defense held Pewaukee to just four points, and the score at the half was 10-6 in favor of Pewaukee.

Kewaskum (3-2) went back to their press in the second half, and outscored Pewaukee 12-3 in the third quarter. Welch and Kwaterski each scored four points in the quarter.

Kewaskum put the game away in the final frame behind stellar defense led by Erica Mueller who finished with eight rebounds and four steals on the game. Other scorers for Kewaskum included Sammie Czerwinski, Vogt, and Yanke with two points each.

Heather Welch finished with seven points to go along with her five steals. Jacque Kwaterski led all scorers with eight points.

The word vandal has come to mean someone who destroys valuable things from the activities of a German tribe of barbarians called Vandals, who sacked Rome in the early years of the fifth century.
