Village approves conditional use permit to develop PUD on former Regal property

By Andrew Kuehl
Statesman Managing Editor
andrew@kewaskumstatesman

The Kewaskum Village Board met to discuss a Conditional Use Permit for developer Gary Gavin to allow for a planned unit development (PUD) Gavin has met with the village board numerous times regarding Regal Arbor, a 120 acre development located west of his Old Glory Heights Subdivision along Highway H west in the village.

Gavin explained at the meeting that the project will be completed in three to four phases, starting in summer of 2008 with 11 lots. The second phase, is expected to be about 37 building pads.

A number of residents voiced concerns with the project, one being town of Kewaskum Chairman Ellis Kahn. He was concerned with the amount of traffic on Kettle View Drive which may end up feeding into the development.

Another resident who lives in the area did not like the idea of the removal of the pine trees along the road-right-of-way along the proposed extension of Kettle View Road. It was originally planned to keep the trees but it was later discovered that the trees were actually dead and a fire hazard.

The village board moved to approve the conditional use permit to allow the PUD subject to staff creating a list conditions for the CUP.

Community IN BRIEF

CLARIFICATION: FES/KES students have bus issues

KEWASKUM- Last week we reported rumors were circulating regarding students left on busses around the school district. During the fact finding, miscommunication led to us reporting that a Farmington Elementary School student who had fallen asleep was discovered as the driver was parking the bus and returned to school.

This was not an FES student but a Kewaskum Elementary School student. The question was posed regarding the Farmington student but Johnson Bus responded with more recent information regarding the KES student.

In checking with FES principal Janet Molebash, she revealed that at the start of the school year, on the first day of the Wednesday early release, a 5K student had fallen asleep and was discovered on a bus and was taken home.

COMMUNITY

POLICE REPORTS

Domestic Disturbance

On September 6 at 10:30 p.m. two Kewaskum Police Officers were advised of a domestic dispute at a home in the 1000 block of Edgewood Road. Apparently the male subject had threatened to hit a female with his lunch box.

The officers were later advised that the male now had a gun in his hand. One of the responding officers requested deputies from the Washington County Sheriff's Department who arrived later.

Upon arrival, the officer ordered the male subject out of the home. He did not respond.

Police then searched the home but were unable to locate the man. The complainant told police that she feared for her life.

The male then called the complainant's cellphone. The police officer then spoke with the male.

The male stated he was out in a cornfield about three miles from the house. The other police officer located the male just inside Fond du Lac County on Highway 45.

Two hours later the male was taken to the Kewaskum Police Department for questioning. The male stated all that happened was that the complainant threatened him. He knew that he could not hit her with his hands so he threatened to hit her with his lunch box.

The male was booked for domestic abuse/disorderly conduct.

Absolute Sobriety

On September 11, at 11:39 p.m. a Kewaskum Police Officer observed a pick-up truck weaving in its lane of traffic in the area of Fond du Lac Avenue near Prospect Drive. The officer stopped the vehicle at Prospect Drive.

The vehicle continued south on Fond du Lac Avenue. When the vehicle got to Badger Road, it went into the right hand turn lane, stopped at the stop sign and made a right turn to go west on Badger Road. The vehicle put its turn signal on to enter J-Stop gas station where the vehicle stopped.

The officer met with a 20-year-old male. The officer noted the odor of intoxicants coming from the vehicle.

The male stated he had not been drinking and that in his opinion he would pass a breathalyzer test. Once the test was completed, the reading revealed 0.017.

The male informed the officer that he was also carrying beer in his vehicle.

He was not arrested for OWI however he was cited for absolute sobriety, one for a minor transporting intoxicants and one for underage consumption.

Police reports are compiled and written by staff member Andrew Kuehl with the cooperation of the Kewaskum Police Department. If you have information on any of these incidents please contact the department at (262)626.2323.

Local Scouting for Food program a success

Farmington's Saxonia House Heritage Site enters phase III

By Lisa Lickel
Special to The Statesman

FILLMORE- Tucked away in the eastern portion of the town of Farmington is a future national heritage site. At least, that's what Friends of the Saxonia House and Isthmus Architects believe, as the project team works on the historic structure report, Phase III of a multi-year vision to restore Saxonia House to community use.

On Tuesday, October 30, members of the project team, site engineers, historic reconstruction experts, a landscape architect, and one graduate student on a mission to develop her master's thesis, met at the Saxonia House in Fillmore to measure, prod, examine, photograph and dream.

Robert Bucci of Quality Engineering in Madison was there to assess the mechanical and electrical systems that will be needed. "We want to understand as best we can what was here originally. One thing I'm surprised about was the lack of a central heating system or even fireplaces." Bucci pointed out areas high in the walls that may have indicated use of a Franklin stove and pipes leading outside through the walls.

"Our options include the use of radiators for heat," Bucci said. "It won't be historically correct, but would have minimum impact."

Figuring out a sewer system is a headache in itself. "There's a limited room on site," Bucci explained. "The amount of acreage and codes for septic create a dilemma. We need ample parking, playgrounds, picnic areas and the septic field takes a lot of room."

Bucci said they may be able to run duct work in the attic for pipes and electric lines. "There's a nice cistern in the basement that's in very good shape," Bucci said. "They used it to collect rainwater."

Ben Shirtcliff of Ken Saiki Design Inc. photographed the building and grounds. "We're looking at the site, assessing the environment," Shirtcliff said. "We'll make recommendations about the orientation and views, where to screen the view (from neighbors), where we fit things in and maintain as much of a natural landscape as we can."

Charles Quagliana of Isthmus Architecture Inc. was measuring the foundation of the former brewery building with graduate student Jenny Reep. "We're here today for a couple of reasons," Quagliana said. "One is to reacquaint ourselves with the condition of the house, barn, garage and cave," and secondly, to figure out cost efficient strategies for reconstruction and rehabilitation. "We want to do it right and be sensitive to the building. We still believe in the least intervention (for rehabilitation).

"We have a pragmatic approach," Quagliana said, "which is not to mislead the public into thinking the rebuilt portions of the site are authentic. We have to build to contemporary building codes, and we want to do it right, with a sensitivity to the building. For instance, we don't want the barn to look new."

The Saxonia House needs a lot of repair. One option to repair the foundation was to raise the building. "We're not sure that's the only option now," Quagliana said. "We may take the stucco and brick out, make the repairs, then replace the bricks. That might prove more cost effective."

Reep and Quagliana were measuring the site of the former brewery building. Only a few foundation markers and various levels of cement pad floor were still visible near the barn. "We want to figure out the approximate footprint of the brewery, to describe what it was and how we want to use it in the future," Quagliana said.

Reep is a graduate student at the Art Institute of Chicago. Her thesis will include a general history of Saxonia House and the area, the construction of the brewery and reconstruction as a preservation philosophy. "I'm working here with Charlie to develop some base drawings as to what it (the brewery) would have looked like and an idea for a future interpretive program," Reep said. She is exploring "what sort of evidence should be present to justify a reconstruction."

"We want to know what occurred on these floors and what we will use this space for. It probably won't be for brewing beer, but classrooms or demonstrations of beer making," Quagliana said. "Jenny has done some research on the history of beer making."

Photographs exist of the former brewery structure, which was known as the Farmington Brewery as late as 1881.

Saxonia House was built during 1854-55 by Ernst and Liberta Klessig, emigrants from Saxony in present-day Germany. Friends of the Saxonia House, Inc., a non-profit organization, purchased the grounds in 1997. The building was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 2006. The historic structure report is an integral part of the implementation strategy needed to attract the necessary funding to complete the vision of turning the Saxonia House site into a national heritage center. For more information or to become a member of the Friends, please visit www.saxoniahouse.com, or write care of Paul and Mary Williams, 2426 North Lexington Drive, Janesville, WI 53545.

VETERAN'S DAY

Remember Kewaskum's Civil War dead on Veterans Day

Editor's Note- West Bend Resident Bev Hetzel has created a book of all the war dead of Washington County from the Civil War. She shares with us those from Kewaskum below. A number of the entries give battle records and places of burial, some do not. Due to the fact this is a lengthy list, we will continue it next week. Hetzel also has chronicled the dead from many other wars and says she will begin working on the dead from Operation Iraqi Freedom. The Statesman will publish the names of other war dead from her books in the future. To contact Hetzel, e-mail bevhetzel@netscape.net.

Cooks who care: Apples have never been so good

Shown above is the "Apples of Gold" group from the West Bend area. The group is featured in the October/November issue of Taste of Home magazine.

GREENDALE - Age doesn't matter when it comes to appreciating good food. "Apples of Gold," a West Bend-based group is experiencing the rewards of investing time in others while bridging the generation gap through Taste of Home recipes. The group is showcased in Taste of Home magazine's new "Cooks Who Care" feature that recognizes readers' efforts to give back to their communities, debuting in the October/November issue.

"Taste of Home is at its essence a community of sharing - recipes, stories, experiences. 'Apples of Gold' is a wonderful example of this kind of sharing. Taste of Home Cooks Who Care is an ongoing effort that encompasses the heart of our community of readers and tells their stories of kindness," says Catherine Cassidy, editor-in-chief of Taste of Home magazine.

Diane Fechter and RuthAnn Phaneuf have always had a passion for helping young people. Fortunately, they also have a large collection of tried-and-true Taste of Home recipes. This combination spurred them to host an "Apples of Gold" program for young women in their community. "Apples of Gold" is a six week mentoring program in which older women teach younger women that cooking and entertaining can be fun, not stressful. The group partakes in cooking demonstrations, bible lessons and shared meals.

"Apples of Gold" is a nurturing community where women share life experiences and learn from one another. "The older women teach the younger women life skills, including how to prepare home-cooked meals," says Diane. RuthAnn adds, "We show the girls that having friends over for a meal doesn't have to be difficult or scary." The smiles on the faces of the group echos that statement.

Taste of Home is committed to sharing the stories of individuals and groups making a difference through cooking in their community. If you or a group belong to cooks for a charitable, spiritual or another purpose, email the story to cookswhocare@tasteofhome.com. To learn more about "Apples of Gold," log on to www.tasteofhome.com/links.

RuthAnn Phaneuf holds the Santa Fe Cheesecake the group served to the Taste of Home editor.

November book discussions at UWWC

UW-Washington County is hosting two literary discussions this month in the campus library lounge. There is no charge and everyone is welcome to attend.

The November discussions include:

Tuesday, November 13 - 7pm - Hamlet's Quest for the Impartial Spectator. Presented by UW-WC English Professor Michael Mattek

Dr. Mattek will use philosopher/economist Adam Smith's principles to provide a different perspective for understanding Shakespeare's work. He will explain how readers can use these themes to expand their understanding of Hamlet.

Wednesday, November 28: 5:00pm - Chronicle of a Death Foretold by Gabriel Garcia Marquez

Chronicle of a Death Foretold is one of Marquez's shorter novels, but past and current critics agree that the book's small size hides a huge work of art. This novel revisits a murder that happened in a small village 27 years ago, when two brothers killed a man for taking their sister's virginity. Marquez gives us the events leading up to the murder from several different angles and with each different angle; a new wrinkle in the fabric of the story unfolds. What really happened and did they kill the right man? Library Director, Marc Boucher will lead the discussion.

For more information about the library or the book discussions, phone 262-335-5214. UW-Washington County is located at 400 University Drive (off Hwy. 33 West) in West Bend.

The campus library is on the second floor and is open during the fall and spring semesters Monday through Thursday 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Fridays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Sundays from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. All Washington County area residents can borrow library materials by stopping at the circulation desk and obtaining a community borrower ID.

Sylvan Learning's Helpful Hints for Student Success:

How to Handle a Poor Report Card - Tips for helping your children when they struggle to get good grades

While many students will come home with good grades, others would rather stuff their report cards deep into their backpacks than show them to their parents. As parents, you want your child to do well in school, so what do you do when your child's report card isn't as good as it could be?

Understanding your child's ability and determining if your expectations are too high will allow both you and your child to set appropriate goals. It will also help establish an environment in which your child is not apprehensive about sharing his report card with you.

Sylvan Learning Center offers the following tips:

1. Set expectations. Not every child will earn all A's, but that doesn't mean your child should strive for less. Explain to your child that you won't be upset if he doesn't bring home all A's -- but that you will be upset if he doesn't try his hardest and doesn't ask for help.
2. Communicate with your child. Don't wait until report cards are issued to talk with your child about school and grades. Talk with her every night and every week about homework and ask what subjects she finds challenging.
3. Discuss your child's performance with his teacher and/or guidance counselor. Your child's teacher can recommend ways to help your child or point out difficulties he is having. His guidance counselor can provide progress reports between report cards or help set up additional parent-teacher conferences when necessary.

4. Set goals for improvement with your child. If your child is currently a C student -- then setting a goal of getting all A's may not be reasonable. However, creating an improvement goal for each subject will help her work toward an attainable level for each class.

5. Establish a study plan with your child. Your child should keep a schedule of all classes, assignments and key dates (e.g., project deadlines, big exams, etc).

6. Praise your child's successes. Praise your child for what he is doing well, whether it's a specific academic subject or an extracurricular activity. If your child is not doing well in English, but loves to read the latest Harry Potter book, show him the connection between the two.

How to Build an Igloo and Other Snow Shelters

By Norbert E. Yankielun, illustrated by Amelia Bauer

Winter is coming, and with it, all that white stuff on the ground.

So let's say school has called a Snow Day and you decided to take time off to play with the kids. Or maybe you've spent the day exploring outdoors, a freak storm whirls in and you need to stay put before you get discombobulated.

What do you do?

Prepare ahead of time by reading "How to Build an Igloo and Other Snow Shelters" by Norbert E. Yankielun, PhD, illustrated by Amelia Bauer.

You probably already know that there are several different kinds of snow and that snow makes an excellent insulator, both for humans and for the plants and animals that live beneath it all winter. So put that snow to work for you. Bundle up in layers, grab some shovels and tools, and decide what kind of shelter you can make with the white stuff you have around you.

Building an igloo - also called an aputiak - might seem easy. It's just a mound of snow blocks, right? Not, so Yankielun says. To build a real igloo, you have to have a basic idea of physics and you have to be able to build blocks in two different forms. Just building square bricks of snow and piling them in a dome is a recipe for disaster and collapse. Strongly-built igloos, on the other hand, are so sturdy that polar bears have been known to climb on top of them to look around.

But let's say you don't have the time it takes to build an igloo. You're out in the wild, a storm is coming, and finding shelter is a matter of survival or not. If you can find snow, you can find shelter, according to Yankielun. There are several different ways to make a place to wait out the storm. Depending on the kind of snow that surrounds you, you can make a slab shelter or a drift cave, you can take advantage of spruces or trees, or you can quickly put together a snow tent. Even kids can make a quinzee.

Which brings us to the most important words in this book. In the beginning of "How to Build an Igloo", author Norbert E. Yankielun reminds readers that hazards exist when building any kind of snow shelter and that young children should have constant supervision to avoid disaster. All of the shelters in this book are very build-able but, if improperly constructed, could collapse.

Keeping that in mind, this book is unique and fun; simple to understand (thanks to line drawings by Amelia Bauer) and is easy to tuck in a backpack. My only complaint is that the cover is mostly white (easy to lose in snow) and the pages aren't waterproofed.

If you've got an outdoor enthusiast, group leader, older Boy or Girl Scout, or snow-bound parent on your gift list this year, this fun book will be welcome and could save a life. Pick up a copy of "How to Build an Igloo" and let it snow!

55 Years Ago

October 17, 1952

October 26, 1952 is a red-letter day in the history of St. Lucas Evangelical Lutheran Church in Kewaskum. On that day the congregation is going to celebrate its 75th Anniversary, its diamond jubilee. Seventy-five years ago, in the year 1877, St. Lucas congregation was organized with but a handful of people. Since then it has grown, so that to date it numbers 563 communicants and 769 souls. The oldest available church records date back to 1857. The first church was erected in the year 1870, and the present structure was built in 1913 and dedicated in 1914.

Homecoming festivities were held on Thursday and Friday of this week at Kewaskum High School. Festivities started off with a parade and pep rally on Thursday evening. On Friday afternoon Kewaskum met Brandon on the football field. The climax to the weekend was a dance in the high school gymnasium on Friday night. King Leroy Keller and his queen, Arlene Backhaus, reigned over the festivities. The other members of the royal court and their escorts were as follows: Joanne Fay and George Hanrahan, Florence Ruth and Floyd Dreher, Carolyn Ruth and Jay Van Blarcom, Adeline Herriges and Daniel Rodenkirch, Mary Bingen and Russell Rodenkirch and Carole Harbeck and Thomas Dombrowski.

The first snow of the season fell on this area Thursday evening and when residents awoke Friday, the ground was covered with more than three inches of the beautiful (?) white stuff.

Martin, Agnes Borchert, Harold Marx, Harold Casper, Ione Schmidt, Edmund Rinzel and Sylvester Muckerheide.

The ladies of the St. Lucas Evangelical Lutheran Church, Kewaskum, will stage a chicken supper in the basement of the church on November 3. The proceeds of this supper will go to the congregation's organ fund.

The 24 hour fix - Distance no obstacle on musky marathon

With the writer adjusting the decoys, Bill Wood and Tom Lutes pull down the roof of the open water boat blind to adjust equipment on the Mississippi River

It was just a few words, but it spoke volumes. Tom Lutes and Bill Wood had worked and waited since well before sunrise on water south of the Mississippi River's famous Pool 9 for an opportunity or two to swing the scatterguns on migrating canvasbacks. The "King of Ducks" congregating for food and rest on the great "pools" defined by river locks and dams will number more than 300,000 birds at staging peak before continuing their journey to warmer climates.

The Cans were here in number November 1st, and Wood and Lutes were ready. Five dozen canvasback decoys had been meticulously set to invite the birds in, with a dozen mallard blocks blowing a special invitation to any puddle ducks that ventured near. Lutes, a hard core waterfowler and veteran canvasback hunter, had directed the set-up and the positioning of the camouflaged boat serving as our open water blind near the last "Final Approach" decoys that would funnel the birds in.

Lutes is President and CEO of Kolpin Outdoors which had recently sold its Final Approach division to Bushnell. Kolpin has earned a reputation as waterfowling enthusiasts providing quality products for waterfowlers. Lutes continues as President and CEO of Kolpin Power Sports of Fox Lake.

Wood brought the enthusiasm of a working man grateful for the rare opportunity to spend a morning on the big water hunting Cans. Owner of Fennimore Lumber Company, Wood and his three sons are usually "swamp busting" when hunting ducks.

Ruby, Lutes' black Lab, waited patiently to show off her own expertise. Finally, the weatherman had "told" us that snow in the north just might send more birds south and relatively high winds on these lower river pools could keep the Cans moving, hopefully providing ample opportunities to fill our two Can per man limit.

The weatherman lied. Temperatures climbed toward 60 and winds and water remained calm all morning. After long distance introductions to massive flocks of ducks moving high overhead in the pink light of a new day, several hours of waiting had produced no canvasbacks. When they did arrive in a fast moving flock of 20 to 30 birds, they came in all of their royal glory, working the decoys for three rotations of close scrutiny. And then they were gone.

"But wasn't that a sight?" Lutes said in response to our disappointment at the sudden departure. "A Canvasbacks flock working decoys like that is something to see."

The words did speak volumes. The canvasback migration offers Wisconsin a rare opportunity to hunt a rare bird right in our own backyard, a claim the vast majority of America cannot make. Connecting with steel isn't the only draw to these river pools. For a duck hunter, just watching is almost...almost... enough.

According to several interviews for this column since 2005 with DNR wildlife biologists, Canvasbacks can weigh three pounds or more yet reach extraordinary flight speeds to 75 miles per hour. The bird migrates from Canada and winters on Chesapeake Bay on the east coast, primarily on Lake Cathoula in Louisiana on the Gulf Coast.

Loss of desirable vegetation and the Cans primary food sources including wild celery, sago and other pond weeds on the Mississippi has led to a shift on the river pools used by the canvasback. The bird's diet also includes fingernail clams and large, mud-burrowing insect larvae. Twenty years ago, Cans congregated evenly from Pool 4 in the north near Alma south to Pool 9 near Lynxville. Today, canvasbacks are concentrated primarily on Pools 7, 8, and 9.

To have a canvasback hunting season, there has to be at least 500,000 birds in North America based on aerial surveys. Federal spring surveying showed 865,000 breeding cans in 2007, the best numbers in 50 years. Because of those numbers, an unprecedented canvasback season was adopted along three of four major flyways including a two bird daily limit all season long.

"This is the major staging area for canvasbacks in the country," Lutes said. There are less than one million Cans in the country and maybe half will be right here at peak. They stage here because they're after the wild celery. This is one of the best years for celery in a long time, and Pool 9 has an exceptional crop."

Although Pool 9 draws an abundance of Cans, it also draws the most publicity and because of that, the most

Montana hunt produces quite a prize for Heberer

Rick Heberer with his "once-in-a-lifetime elk."

By Judy Harlow

Statesman Sports Correspondent

Rather than take a conventional vacation, the Heberer family decided this fall they would rough it and spend a week in the great outdoors in a state that has plenty of wide opened space — Montana.

While all the participants, mom and dad, Judy and Bill Heberer and elder son Bill Jr. all had fun, the other two participants, sister Pam Tanke of Middleton, and Rick, who lives with his family just outside of Kewaskum, really enjoyed the trip.

Pam brought down a "four by four" mule elk, while Rick shot a huge "seven by seven" bull that weighed 750 pounds.

"It was great," Rick Heberer said Sunday. "To me, it's a once-in-a-lifetime elk."

The hunt took place at the Bob Marshall Wilderness, which, according to Heberer, is a "fair chase" area, including 2,400 square miles of hunting land without any fencing around it. "It's huge," he said.

The Heberers spent the week of Oct. 20-28 at Skyline Outfitter, which is approximately 70 miles from Hungry Horse, Montana and 1,522 miles from Kewaskum.

"You've got to go through Minnesota, North Dakota and most of Montana," Heberer said, noting Hungry Horse and the hunting lands are located in the northeast corner of the state.

A hunter since he was 12-years old, Heberer said he and his family rode horses from the lodge to their camp site, and they slept in tents.

It was on Oct. 26th that he was able to bag his big elk, after one of the cowboys help-hunters. Lutes prefers to hunt on lower water that certainly has far less congregating birds but also assures less competition from other hunters.

"Pool 9 is written about constantly," he said. "That's where they're concentrated but they're down through here too. If you can only get six cans (three man limit), I don't think you need 300,000 ducks. Thirty thousand will work."

Although more opportunities would almost certainly have come with more in climate weather, we did have good chances. After two flocks of Cans flirted with the blocks before departing, a third canvasback flock and a lone mallard offered shots before continuing on untouched. Ruby wasn't pleased with the shooting, but she did forgive us.

At noon, we began the not so small chore of picking up dozens of decoys and packing in all equipment. It was a bluebird day on the Mississippi River.

And when hunting canvasbacks, that can be a big problem.

Heberer

ing guide them came into the tent after hearing the bull "bugling." A bugle is the mating call of a male elk.

"We were actually eating breakfast," Heberer said, indicating he grabbed his gun and went with the cowboy, probably a half mile from the camp where he saw the big elk in the mountains.

"It was a 300-yard shot," Heberer said, and with a shot of that length, the hunters have "shooting sticks," pieces of fiberglass that form a base "X" in the ground. The hunter sits on the ground and lays his rifle on the top of one of these "sticks."

"It firms your shot," Heberer said, reporting he needed just one shot to bring down his trophy elk.

Because the weather was so warm in Montana the week the Heberers were there, a major concern was keeping the meat cold.

"We quartered it right on the mountain," Heberer said, indicating they packed it up on the horses and mules and brought it back to camp.

When asked if elk meat is good to eat," Heberer said. "Oh, it's excellent."

The family stored the meat in coolers and brought it back to Kewaskum where they cut it up and packaged it.

Heberer has already made a visit to an area taxidermist to have the head mounted. "It's going to be on display at the Journal Sentinel Sports Show in March," Heberer said, reporting, "This is the second biggest elk shot out there this year."

This was Heberer's first hunting trip to Montana but not the first elk he's ever shot. "This is the third trip I've been on. It's the fourth bull I've shot," Heberer said. "This is the biggest one ... yes!"

Heberer explained a "seven by seven" means there are seven tines on one side and seven on the other, which is the way racks are measured in the west, unlike Wisconsin where a hunter will say he shot a 10-pointer or a 14-pointer.

Also added up is the length and diameter of each of the tines and totaled up, which in Heberer's case, came to 338 7/8ths inches.

Other than the elk shot by Heberer and his sister, "Those were the only two we saw within range." The weather may have contributed to that fact, according to Heberer, who said, "It was 60 to 65 degrees. Because there coats are so heavy, many stay in the dark timber stand" to stay cool.

A couple ventured out of that area, and Heberer is thankful the bull did because he hit the jackpot with this 750-pounder.

Gonring also is named to the first team De Groot soars above the rest in EWC volleyball voting

Christina DeGroot

High was the top volleyball player in the conference again this season.

After being named the Player of the Year, her junior year, DeGroot was even more impressive this season, putting up more than 100 aces and being a top setter in the EWC. Her play helped the Indians to a second-place finish in the conference after Kewaskum had won three straight EWC titles.

The All-EWC team was released on Monday, and named along with De Groot, the only unanimous selection on the first unit, were three players from the championship Waupun team, junior setter Michielah Navis, sophomore middle blocker Bridget Nickel and sophomore outside hitter Brandi Dolger.

Rounding out the first team were Brittany Narges, a junior outside hitter, all around from Campbellsport, Kelsey Mauer of Sheboygan Falls, a senior middle hitter, and sophomore Lauren Gonring of Kewaskum who served as the libero for the Indians and was a very solid digger all season long.

Plymouth, one of the EWC's upper level teams but quite on a par with Waupun and Kewaskum, had three players named to the second team, including outside hitter/middle hitter Hannah Bowe, middle hitter Lindsay Steinhardt, and libero Rachel Glassford. Steinhardt is a junior, and the other two are seniors.

Kewaskum did not have any players named to the second team, but sophomores Erika Heberer (outside hitter) and Elissa Miller (middle hitter) received honorable mention along with six other players.

The Statesman was unable to reach coach Renee Altendorf for comments on her players. They will be included in next week's edition.

Fifth grade griders stumble in finale

By Judy Harlow
Statesman Sports Correspondent

The final game was a bit disappointing but the fifth graders Gridiron season was a success, according to coach Mark Walcheske, who reported his young Indians finished at 4-4.

Except for an uncharacteristic five turnovers, "The boys played a pretty good game," Walcheske said about the 25-18 loss Kewaskum suffered to West Bend East on Oct. 23rd.

Kewaskum lost the ball twice via pass interceptions and three times on fumbles, according to the coach, who said, "The turnovers were drive-killers. We were in the Red Zone (inside the 20-yard line) on three of them."

Zach Smith scored one touchdown and quarterback Bille Lehmann had two, according to Walcheske, who said defensive tackle Garret Buth "shored up the middle" and linebacker Gage Domask "had some good solo tackles."

"This was a good group of guys with a lot of potential," Walcheske said about the 28 boys on his squad. "This is the end of the year and I am looking forward to another one."

More third quarter heroics, Boettcher's big run lifts Indians

Kicker Brian Backhaus makes a field goal during round two playoff action at home on Saturday, November 3. Backhaus was three for three during the game and helped the Indians shutout Edgewood 21-0.

By Judy Harlow

Statesman Sports Correspondent

Visiting Madison Edgewood learned Saturday what 11 other football teams that played Kewaskum High this season already know.

No. 1, the Indians have the ability to strike offensively at any time; No. 2, they are opportunistic; No. 3, they have a defense that's pretty difficult to score on; and No. 4, they usually make big things happen in the third quarter of play.

It was like de ja vu again Saturday in the Division 3, Level 4 game played in Kewaskum. The third quarter turned the tide in the Indians' favor.

Capping a beautiful drive with a 27-yard pass from Nick Olla to John Holt, then getting an outstanding interception by Eric Turowski, which resulted in another quick score, and the game was pretty well over.

After one more quarter, the final scoreboard read Kewaskum 21, Edgewood 0, and now the Indians, a perfect 12-0, are back in the semifinals of the state series as they have been for the two previous seasons.

The only team standing between them and a trip to Madison's Camp Randall Stadium ... and perhaps a state title, is Wisconsin Lutheran (11-1), which advanced with an also convincing victory on Saturday, a 40-26 decision over Brown Deer.

"It's been very good for us," KHS coach Jason Piittmann said about the third quarter surges the Indians have become noted for.

Kewaskum received the second-half kickoff and a reserve senior turned in a key play to help the Indians get great field position.

Piittmann said Edgewood had a little lob kick, "a semi-on sides kick" in their repertoire. The Crusaders tried it on the Indians, but special team senior Dan Dymond alertly figured out what was happening and made a big call.

"Dan Dymond called for the fair catch, so we started off at the 40-yard line," Piittmann said, reporting the team's offensive linemen proceeded to get off the ball nicely and sustained their blocks to continue to move down the field.

That drive was finished off when Olla found Holt, who has been making big plays all season long. Brian Backhaus drilled home the PAT to give Kewaskum a 14-0 lead.

Would it be enough? It turns out it would have been, but just to make sure, Turowski helped out by picking off a Mario Minnaert pass.

"Eric made a fantastic interception," Piittmann said. "He hustled back, spun around and caught the ball. It looked like he had a chance at running it back, but he stumbled."

That only delayed the final touchdown by a short time, according to Piittmann, who said, "We came back and scored a couple plays later," with Jordan Petrin running 15 yards to the end zone.

The two scores came within 58 seconds of each other, Holt's catch at 8:25 and Petrin's run at 7:27.

Kewaskum had scored late in the first quarter when Ben Boettcher broke loose for a 67-yard scamper, much to the delight of the huge home crowd.

The Crusaders had everyone up near the line of scrimmage, according to Piittmann, who said, "Once he broke that second level, it was a foot race," one which the coach wondered if he would win, and, "He did!"

Backhaus was successful on the point after kick, and the Indians felt a little more at ease after getting some points on the board.

"We ran the ball better after that," Piittmann said.

Edgewood had a couple chances to score in the first half. On their first drive, the Crusaders got within field goal range but Connor Balczewski missed. "It was wide right," Piittmann said, noting the kick came from about the 20-yard line.

Kewaskum fumbled on its next series on its own 30-35 — Olla had changed the play at the line of scrimmage and Boettcher missed the call so the exchanged was muffed — but there was no field goal try this time. "We held them on that drive," Piittmann said.

Edgewood also threatened in the third quarter after an Olla pass was intercepted. The Crusaders got to the 4-yard line and were facing a fourth down when, "(Mike) Bunkelman got off the line real quick and forced them to throw quickly. He (Minnaert) threw it into the ground two yards in front of the receiver," the coach said.

Kewaskum rolled up 307 total yards, including 250 yards rushing. Once again, Boettcher was the workhorse, lugging the ball 17 times for 156 yards and a 9.18 yard per carry average. Olla added 45 yards on eight carries, while Petrin rushed for 33 yards in nine tries and Nathan Westerman added 16 in two tries.

Edgewood came up with 207 yards, 146 rushing and 61 passing. Leading the Crusaders' ground game was Conner Meloy with 75 yards in 13 carries.

Defensively, Turowski was the player of the game, coming up with four solos, seven assists and the interception. Next was linebacker Joe Paulus, who was credited with two solos and 11 gang tackles for 13 total; Tom Thull had three solos and six assists; Cody Seibel had five assists and two solos, while Matt Donath added four solos and three assists.

Piittmann said Sunday evening the game against WISCO will be played at Sussex Hamilton High. The start time is 1 p.m.

The Vikings eliminated the Indians from the 2005 playoffs, but Piittmann said they aren't quite as good now as they were then.

"They've got some real horses," he said, citing Chris Echols, who rushed for 299 yards against Brown Deer. Campbell is WISCO's top linebacker and he was on the '05 state title team, and they have a lineman who has committed to UW-Madison, according to Piittmann.

"It's a typical WISCO team .. very quick and very disciplined," the coach said, but he also had plenty of confidence in his Indians.

No man is wise enough by himself.
