

Kewaskum To Host Fireworks Friday Night

By Anne Trautner

People started reserving their spots at River Hill Park for the Kewaskum fireworks on July 1. Fireworks will be held on Friday, July 3, at Riverhill Park at dusk. The rain date is July 4.

The Itch, a band that plays music from the 1970s to current rock, dance, pop and party music, will perform at 7 p.m. until the fireworks begins. The band will play again after the fireworks until about midnight.

Food and beverages will be served, beginning at 5 p.m. Hamburger and beer are among the offerings. Proceeds benefit the Kewaskum Fire Department.

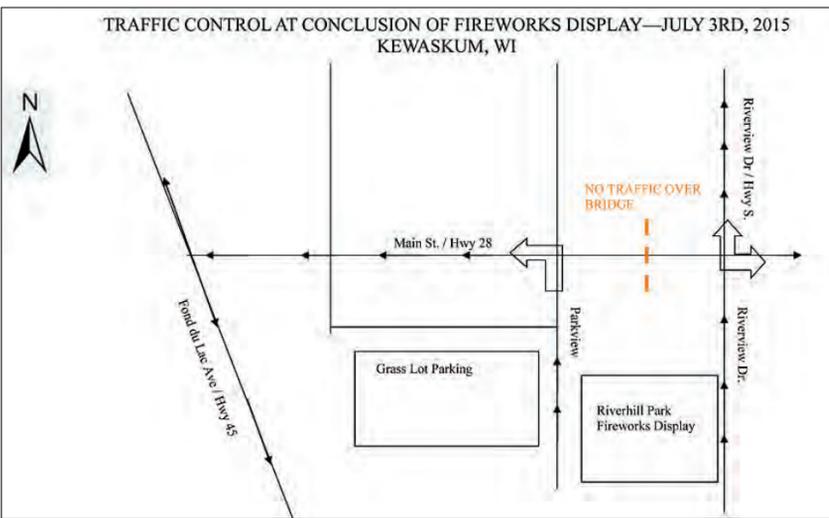

No carry-ins are allowed. In addition, sparklers are prohibited during the event, Kewaskum Police Chief Thomas Bishop said. "We don't want anyone to get burned," Bishop said. "Fireworks, in general, are illegal. The rule of thumb is if they leave the ground or explode, they are probably going to be illegal."

Following the fireworks display, cars parked in the grass lot or on the west side of the Milwaukee River will be directed west on Highway 28.

"The bridge is going to be our great divide, if you will," Police Chief Thomas Bishop said. Traffic will be directed for about an hour after the fireworks ends.

In order to safely and quickly assist traffic out of the Village at the conclusion of the fireworks, the Kewaskum Police Department will be directing traffic as shown on the map above. Anyone parked in the grass lot or on the west side of the Milwaukee River will be directed west on Highway 28 to Highway 45. At that point, cars can travel north or south. If parked on the east side of the Milwaukee River, vehicles will be directed to travel out of town east on Highway 28 or north on Highway S. We will also have officers on Highway 45 at Highway H West (by the Dairy Queen). Vehicles coming off of Highway H onto Highway 45 will only be allowed southbound on Highway 45. Northbound vehicles on Highway 45 will not be allowed west on Highway H at that location. Enforcement of these traffic routes is expected to last for approximately one hour after the conclusion of the fireworks.

Remember, lighting off fireworks is illegal and will result in a citation being issued. Sparklers are not allowed in Riverhill Park for the safety of those in the park.

All members of the Kewaskum Police Department will be wearing bright colored vests in order to be visible. Officers will be on foot patrol, bike patrol and automobile patrol. Stop an officer at anytime if you need help. Have fun and please drink responsibly.

Circus Boy Entertains Library Crowd

By Anne Trautner

In unison, the crowd raised their arms and said "Yeah!" as Circus Boy amazed them by riding the world's smallest bicycle. And together, the crowd laughed as Circus Boy entertained them with jokes as he performed his show in Kewaskum's Annex building. The audience, made up mostly of children, watched as Circus Boy walked on his hands, juggled and rode a unicycle.

The Kewaskum Library brought the show to town on Thursday, June 25. About 70 people attended the show to watch Circus Boy, who is also known as Bob Hunt.

"That's what the doctor calls me," Hunt said.

Over the years, Circus Boy has opened for a number of big-name performers, such as Weird Al Yankovic, Jackie Mason, The Beach Boys and Billy Ray Cyrus. He was documented with Ripley's Believe it or Not for riding the world's smallest bike.

"I was on the Tonight Show with Jay Leno twice, because it reran once," Circus Boy told the crowd. "And now here I am in Kewaskum."

Although the audience continued laughing as the Circus Boy entertained them with jokes as he performed each of his tricks, 3-year-old Emmett Staffin nearly stole the show when Circus Boy called him up on stage.

"Are you going into kindergarten some day?" Circus Boy asked Emmett. "Yeah," Emmett answered loudly into the microphone.

"Are you a Democrat or a Republican?" Circus Boy asked the 3-year-old. "No," Emmett answered.

Holy Trinity Continues Plan For Parish Center

By Anne Trautner

The Kewaskum Plan Commission gave its nod of approval Monday night to Holy Trinity's preliminary plan to build a parish center.

Holy Trinity is hoping to construct a parish center in front of the parish school on Main Street in Kewaskum. The parish aspires to open the building by the beginning of the 2016-2017 school year.

"We are looking at the possibility of constructing a parish center. It will be an addition to the Holy Trinity campus of the school, the church and rectory on that site," said Chad Cook, a member of the Holy Trinity Building Committee. "The primary goal is to connect this structure to the existing Holy Trinity Elementary School, and that would provide an access to not only the new parish center, but also to the existing school and some other auxiliary functions as well."

The parish center would serve as a gymnasium, as well as offer space for funerals, weddings, school programs and overflow for church services, Cook said.

The added gym space would help the entire village, Joel Fleischman, a Holy Trinity Building Committee member, said.

"There is a lack of gym space in Kewaskum overall. There is very tight scheduling," Fleischman said. "Right now, Holy Trinity uses the elementary school facilities for their practices and games. That would alleviate some of the pressure of the gym space, so it would help the entire community rather quickly in that regard."

The plan is to put the parish center north of Holy Trinity School, in the school's front yard.

The parish has come up with two designs for the building. It is currently running a capital campaign, and the amount of money raised will determine which plan the parish uses, Cook said.

Because Holy Trinity is part of the Archdiocese of Milwaukee, it must have the approval of Archbishop Jerome Listecky before it can proceed with either of the plans.

"The bishop, who is our CEO, he is very much into having the facade be aesthetically pleasing. So we have made a very conscious effort to make it aesthetically pleasing. It is important to the archbishop, which means it is important to all of us," Cook said.

The front of the new building will be five feet from the sidewalk, Cook said.

"As you have probably noticed we have a pretty significant facade of the school on the north side," Cook said. "We want to maintain that Main Street feel, and leave space for landscaping and snow removal."

There has been some discussion on having a breezeway to connect the parish center with the church building, Cook said. Depending on fund, there might possibly be either a covered or enclosed walkway, Cook said.

The plan does not cause the parish to lose any parking space, Cook said.

"Our goal tonight was to give you guys a preliminary view of what we are looking at as far as a site perspective," Cook said. "Part of this process involves a lot with the archdiocese, and they want the municipality blessing along the way as well."

Holy Trinity's plan fits within the zoning of the parcel, which is zoned institutional, Village Administrator Matt Heiser said.

The parish will continue to update the village on its plans, Cook said.

A Different Kind Of Blitz

When we hear the word "blitz," we often think of Clay Mathews diving over the offensive line of an opponent's team and sacking their quarterback. This Fourth of July weekend, a different kind of blitz will be taking place at public boat launches in Washington County: a Landing Blitz.

This year's DNR Landing Blitz defends against an extremely tough opponent: Aquatic Invasive Species (AIS). Washington County is partnering with the DNR Water Guards to promote awareness and stop the spread of aquatic hitchhikers during the busiest weekend on the lakes. Water Guards are Deputy Conservation Wardens who work in Limited Term Employment positions for the Department of Natural Resources.

They perform law enforcement duties to protect Wisconsin's lakes, rivers and waterways; with their main efforts aimed at ensuring compliance with Wisconsin's laws relating to preventing the spread of aquatic invasive species and aquatic diseases. The busiest boat launches will have volunteers and Water Guards washing off boats with portable DECON pressure washer units, bleach solution, and drying off boats with towels.

DNR Water Guard, Roger Arnould said "I will be talking with the boat owners and evaluating their boat usage in order to determine the need for decontamination. Not all boats will need to be decontaminated. I will, however, be performing inspections on every boat in my area."

The event is fun and positive; each boater who uses equipment to wash off their boat will be rewarded with a "Stop Aquatic Hitchhikers" towel, and an array of other prizes.

Invasive species are bad because they ruin habitat for native species, and make for poor fishing in our local lakes and streams. Invasive species are only present in about half of the lakes in Washington County, so it is important to prevent the spread to lakes that are not yet infested.

Invasive zebra mussels are in only eight lakes out of the county's 52, and hopefully will stay that way as long as the public is well informed of the laws prohibiting the spread of aquatic invasive species.

Volunteering to participate in the DNR Landing Blitz is an option to anyone who wants to contribute to conservation efforts over the 4th of July Weekend.

Volunteers will learn Invasive Species I.D. and how to inspect boats and boat trailers. The event is free and open to the public. Snacks and beverages will be provided.

If you have any questions please contact Bradley Steckart, Washington County AIS Coordinator at 262-335-4806 or bradley.steckart@co.washington.wi.us or visit the DNR website at www.dnr.wi.gov/lakes/inva

Reading Program Helps Kewaskum Library

By Anne Trautner

Gary Mlodzik moved away from Kewaskum in 1982, but he continues to make a difference in the community.

Mlodzik, who now lives in Mesa, Ariz., serves on the board of directors for the nonprofit organization "Kids Need to Read." While visiting Kewaskum last week, Mlodzik made a donation to the Kewaskum Library on behalf of the Kids Need to Read program.

Mlodzik and his wife, Tina Mlodzik read the book "Starfish on the Beach," by Tom and Lindy Schneider, to children who attended story times at the library last Wednesday, June 24.

The book conveyed the same theme that the Mlodziks and the "Kids Need to Read" program try to accomplish: small acts of kindness can make a big difference.

"Kids Need to Read encourages kids to read and gives you an opportunity to have new books in your library," Mlodzik said.

Kids Need to Read is a national literacy program that provides new or like-new books to underserved schools, libraries and shelters around the United States, Mlodzik said.

Each child who attended the story times on June 24 received a hard-cover book and a copy of "Highlights for Children" magazine to keep.

The newest program of Kids Need to Read is called "Grow Your Library." Through this program, which Mlodzik developed, children can send information to the program about a book they have read, and the program will donate a book to the library in that child's name.

Unfortunately, many libraries do not know about the Kids Need to Read program, said Mlodzik, who has been volunteering for the program for about three years.

"I was trying to think of how we could get more exposure, how to get people to know about us," Mlodzik said.

So Mlodzik decided to contact individual libraries across the nation and personally take the program to them.

"My wife and I travel a lot. I figured, how about if we make arrangements before we go somewhere. We can contact a library, see what their needs are and see if they would be interested in having our program," Mlodzik said.

So Mlodzik has been bringing the program on the road.

"We donated 200 books to each of the libraries we go to from our inventory, and that can be anywhere from $1,600 to $2,000 for books. We send them ahead of time, so they can have them by the time the summer reading program starts," Mlodzik said.

Kewaskum Library Director Steev Baker was one of the people Mlodzik contacted.

"I told him you can go to our website to find out the program, and he said, 'I'm already there,'" Mlodzik said.

Kids Need to Read donated 300 books, valued at about $1,500, to the Kewaskum Library, Baker said.

Mlodzik works in the collections department for Cox Communications in Arizona. Tina Mlodzik was a library assistant for the Arizona area school district for 11 years.

"This is something we enjoy, and we do travel a fair amount in the United States," Mlodzik said of the Kids Need to Read program.

Children are able to help the Kewaskum Library by submitting information about a book they have read to LibrarySeeds@kidsneedtoread.org. Kids Need to Read will donate a book in the child's name to the library.

For information on how to donate to the Kids Need to Read program, go to <http://kidsneedtoread.org>.

Turtles Of Wisconsin

Turtles of Wisconsin is the next program in the Friends of the Kettle Moraine's Summer Saturday Evening Events at the Kettle Moraine State Forest - Northern Unit. The program will be held on Saturday, July 11, from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at the Henry S. Reuss Ice Age Visitor Center. The Ice Age Visitor Center is located off Hwy 67 half mile west of Dundee. The program is free, but donations are always gratefully accepted.

Wisconsin is home to a wide variety of turtles including snapping turtles, spiny soft shells, stink pots, and painted turtles, the most common. These amazing reptiles can be found in diverse habitats from the near dessert conditions of dry prairies to fast flowing streams and stagnate ponds. Today, some species are near extinction, but all turtles are suffering from loss of their homes or habitat. Currently, research is being conducted to learn exactly what kind of habitat requirements some of our threatened and endangered turtles need.

Randy Hetzel, a naturalist, and some of his turtle friends will be the featured presenters. Randy has been studying turtles since boyhood and has been involved in a snapping turtle research project on the Sheboygan River. He will explain some of truly fascinating adaptations of turtles and the hazards they face to survive. If you are not careful, Randy may just turn you into a turtle lover.

For further information or directions to the Ice Age Visitor Center, contact the staff at the center. The staff can be reached at (920) 533-8322. The center is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., and on Saturday and Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

This program is most appropriate for people over 12 years old.

Dr. Douglas Buege will be the evening's presenter. He is a butterfly enthusiast and the current President of the Southern Wisconsin Butterfly Association.

Area Departments Practice Firefighting Techniques

By Anne Trautner

Area fire departments battled against each other as they competed in water fights in Kewaskum on June 20.

Less than a week later, the departments came together to practice combating a rural fire.

Firefighters from Kewaskum, Fillmore, Beechwood and Boltonville gathered near the Ice Age trail off Highway 28 on June 25 to practice how they would transport water to a remote site and work together to extinguish a fire.

"It's a way to practice," said Jim Warnkey, training officer for the Kewaskum Fire Department. "We are actually trying to incorporate a lot of things."

Trucks called tenders brought water from the Milwaukee River to portable tanks set up at the site.

"We used to call them tankers, but now we call them tenders. They are used basically for shuttling water from a water source to the fire scene," Warnkey said.

Once the water was dumped into portable tanks, the firefighters drafted water out of the tanks to fire engines. The Kewaskum truck was set up so its hose stretched up on a ladder several stories high so that the water could be sprayed over a great distance.

"These trucks will actually push water to each other. One of them will draft and feed the other truck," Warnkey said.

Sometimes fire engines receive water from another engine, Warnkey said. "If there is a long distance between a roadside and the fire, they have to use a relay, so it is one engine pushing water to another engine. That's what they are practicing," Warnkey said.

Experienced pump operators participated in the exercise. Individuals who are interested in becoming pump operators also took part.

"This is the time to let them understand a little about the operation," Warnkey said. "They will go to school, but it gives them a little more hands-on experience. But it is always the experienced guys who will be running it at an actual fire."

If there is a fire in the village, the firefighters would hook the hoses up to hydrants. But in a rural setting where there are no hydrants, portable tanks would be set up, Warnkey said.

As the firefighters practiced on Thursday, they drove the tenders back and forth on Highway 28 from the Milwaukee River to the practice site.

The trucks brought water from the river to the site.

"Our goal is to see if we can make the river run dry," Warnkey joked.

When a tender arrived at the site, it backed up to a tank that was dry. Water was then pushed from one truck into another.

The Kewaskum Fire Department practices from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. every Thursday.

Each week, the practice is held at a different site, as the fire fighters try to prepare for various scenarios.

"We try to keep it interesting for these guys," Warnkey said.

Great Lakes Restoration Initiative Funding Available In The Nearshore Health Watershed

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has announced conservation funds available through the Environmental Quality Incentives Program, Great Lakes Restoration Initiative to agricultural producers and landowners located in the Nearshore Health Watershed in southeast Wisconsin. The funds are available to help incorporate conservation activities to reduce phosphorus losses and improve water quality in these watersheds and Lake Michigan. The Nearshore Health Watershed encompasses portions of 11 southeastern counties across both Milwaukee and Manitowoc-Sheboygan Watersheds. Watershed maps showing eligible and priority area boundaries can be found on the WI NRCS website. "Reducing phosphorus is the key to cleaner water in Lake Michigan" said Jimmy Bramblett, State Conservationist for the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). "Reducing the amount of phosphorus entering the Great Lakes will improve water quality, aquatic and wildlife habitat, and recreation."

Funding is provided through the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative (GLRI) and is available from the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). Wisconsin is one of eight states participating in GLRI. This is the sixth year of the Initiative. Producers and landowners in the Nearshore Health Watershed can apply at their local USDA Service Center for funding to install conservation systems to reduce phosphorus runoff and soil erosion. Applications are being accepted now through July 17, 2015. GLRI focuses on conservation practices that are most effective at reducing farm runoff. Examples of these practices include waste storage facilities, crop residue management, no-till, nutrient management, cover crops, wetland restoration, prescribed grazing, and grassed waterways, among others.

For more information, visit www.wi.nrcs.usda.gov, or contact the NRCS office at the USDA Service Center serving your county.

ST. FLORIAN BOYS CHOIR

St. Florian Boys Choir To Perform In Campbellsport

St. Matthew's Catholic Church will have the honor of hosting the St. Florian Boys Choir next month. The choir will perform a free concert at the church on Monday, July 13, at 7 p.m.

This is a choir that tours internationally and are spending some of their summer months touring the United States. The concert in Campbellsport will be their only stop in Wisconsin.

They will perform the "Sounds of Austria." This will include a tribute to the 50th anniversary of "The Sound of Music." The concert will also include many beautiful religious and popular secular songs.

The group includes 40 strong and amazing voices from the Monastery of St. Florian in Austria. The Monastery has had an active and world-famous choir since 1071 AD. In this nearly 1,000-year history, they have had many outstanding musicians emerge from its ranks.

Franz Farnberger has been the artistic director for the boys choir since 1983. He also teaches at the Anton Bruckner University in Linz, Austria.

While the boys choir is in Campbellsport, they will stay with members of St. Matthew's Church and area residents. By staying in homes while touring, they can keep costs down. A free-will offering will be taken at the concert to help pay for travel expenses.

A "Meet the Choir" event with refreshments will be held before the show at 5 p.m. at St. Matthew's Church. This would be a great time to meet some of the boys from the choir.

With their concert tours, the boys act as ambassadors of Europe. They bring to all continents the great heritage of Austrian musical tradition and the newest ideas in repertoire.

The choir has been a guest at many notable European opera houses. They have also performed at many musical festivals in Europe.

The boys choir wears traditional sailor suits, which has been the same for years. They put on full-length concerts that are appropriate to the occasion and character of the performance location.

This will be a very special performance in Campbellsport, possibly a once-in-a-lifetime experience. Don't miss this free performance on Monday, July 13, at 7 p.m., at St. Matthew's Catholic Church in Campbellsport.

5K Raises Money For Spinal Cord Injury Victim

By Anne Trautner

Some people ran along the Eisenbahn Trail on Saturday, June 27. Others walked.

They all completed a 5K course along the trail, and raised money to benefit Brian Kash in the process.

Kash, who served in the Marine Corps. for four years, was training to become a Navy Seal when he had a diving accident.

Kash sustained a spinal cord injury and was left a quadriplegic. He still has some function in his arms, but is unable to complete daily activities on his own.

Kash now undergoes therapy to try to gain more function by strengthening muscles in his arms, back and abdomen.

Kash lives in California with his wife, Melody, who has ties to the Kewaskum area.

Melody Kash's friend Amber Steinbauer and her brother, David Claussen, organized last weekend's fundraiser to raise money for Kash's medical bills.

"It's a great cause," said Janice Rasmussen, who completed the 5K with her daughter, Bella.

People of all ages participated, with numerous parents pushing children in strollers.

Kewaskum's auxiliary police officers volunteered their time to block traffic during the event.

The American Legion Hall in Kewaskum hosted the 5K, as well as a silent auction, food and drinks.

Indians Push State's Number One Team To 13-Inning Game

By Judy Harlow

Even though his team ended up losing 2-1, veteran Kewaskum High School baseball coach Doug Gonring called last Saturday's 13-inning battle against host West Bend West "very memorable."

"It was the best baseball game I've been around for many years," Gonring said Sunday night. "There wasn't an error in the game."

The Spartans scored the winning run in the bottom of the 13th when Evan Albrecht stole home. West had runners at second and third with one out when they tried a suicide squeeze. The ball got by KHS catcher Dean Schlice just far enough for Albrecht to score and end the marathon non-conference game.

Albrecht reached base when he was hit by a pitch, then Nate Burns walked and Anthony Schlass moved both runners with a ground ball to first.

"Cole (Suprenant) did a good job, throwing the ball up and in, but it was just a tad too high and hit off Dean's glove," Gonring said. Had the throw been a little lower, the Spartan would have been out at home.

Suprenant took the loss, giving up one run on two hits, striking out four and walking six in 5 1/3 innings.

Andrew Neu started and "pitched fantastic," according to Gonring, who also praised the efforts of his first reliever, Sam Schlosser, and Suprenant. "Two freshmen and a junior pitching against the number one team in the state," Gonring said. "Nothing but good things coming in the future."

Neu gave up one hit, striking out five and walking four in four innings on the mound, while Schlosser fanned two, walked four and gave up one run on three hits in his three-inning stint.

Gonring was surprised at the total of 14 walks his pitchers gave up but said, "The walks didn't hurt us," praising the trio for keeping the Spartan hitters off balance.

West used two pitchers, Jacob Droese, who went the first eight (7 hits, 1 run, 0 walks, 9 Ks), and Jake Lenz who finished the final five frames, with no runs, no hits, five Ks and just two walks.

Schlice was also cited for his work behind the plate. "I didn't call one pitch in the game," Gonring said, indicating Schlice called a great game and also picked off a runner at second.

"At one point, we were outhitting them seven to three," Gonring said, but once again the Indians, who left just five on base compared with West's 18, could not come up with the key hit.

Schlice was the only Indian to have more than one hit. He went 2x5 with singles in the second and the fourth. Hunter Demmon, Prochnow, Neu, Suprenant and Schlosser had the other hits.

Kewaskum scored its lone run in the fourth when Michael Prochnow and Schlice had back-to-back singles, Prochnow was out attempting to steal but Neu singled and Schlice scored on a sacrifice bunt by Zach Heberer.

West came into the contest at 17-0. The Indians just missed being the first team to beat them, but Cedarburg got the job done, shutting down the Spartans 3-0 in the nightcap of the weekend doubleheader.

"I couldn't be happier," Gonring said. "We became a team yesterday."

There's a chance Kewaskum and West could meet again in the playoffs, which get underway on July 14. "I hope it's real soon," Gonring said.

KHS, currently 10-6, was scheduled to play a doubleheader at Two Rivers on Monday, in addition to finishing their game that was suspended on June 15. Kewaskum was leading that game, 5-1 after three innings when the rains came.

The Indians host New Holstein this afternoon (Thursday) at 5:30 p.m.

Kewaskum 1, Campbellsport 0

Campbellsport's Sonny Johnson and Prochnow hooked up in a dandy pitchers' duel on Friday, June 26, with the Indians prevailing with a 1-0 victory in an Eastern Wisconsin Conference game. The win gives KHS an 8-1 record in the EWC, second only to Plymouth (10-0). Campbellsport is 5-5.

The lone run of the evening was scored in the bottom of the third when Lehmann drew a one-out walk, advanced to second on Prochnow's single, and scored when the Cougars' second baseman committed an error.

Prochnow had the Cougar hitters buffaloed. He struck out nine, allowed just three hits and had no walks. Two of the CHS hits came in the first when Johnson and Austin Narges had back-to-back singles, but the big right-hander struck out the next three to end the frame.

Prochnow faced just three batters in the third, fourth and fifth frames.

"He pitched fantastic," Gonring said about Prochnow.

The Indians got just three hits, including another hit by Prochnow and a single by Neu.

"They don't make that throwing error, and we're still playing," Gonring said.

Dale Prunty Nets First 2015 Win In Interstate Sawing 75

By Dan Margetta

The box score will read Dale Prunty led all but the first lap of the 75-lap Interstate Sawing super late model main event Sunday night, June 28, at the Slinger Super Speedway to capture his first feature victory of the season.

But what the story and the stat sheet cannot tell is that Prunty held off the two most successful drivers at the track this season in Steve Apel and Dennis Prunty to accomplish the task.

Tom Berens held off a strong challenge from Nick Schmidt to win the 25-lap Slinger Bee feature. Schmidt had to settle for a close second place finish while Brandon Tackes was third. Heather Stark and Jakob Hassler finished in fourth and fifth respectively. Paul Reagles won the Slinger Bee semi-feature over Zach Braun and Dave Lembke. Emory Waldron and Tristan Dorzok rounded out the top five. Slinger Bee heat race wins were recorded by Dave Lembke, Brandon Berens, and Nick Schmidt while Brandon Tackes was the fastest qualifier after circling the speedway in 14.721 seconds.

Wood In The Water Gaining Wider Welcome

The benefits of wood in the water have long been known to natural resource managers; now, growing numbers of citizens appear to be taking an active interest in the subject.

While a tree may live 140 or more years on land, its useful life may continue for another 300 years under water as it provides food and shelter for organisms ranging from caddisfly larvae and mayfly nymphs to yellow perch, bass, walleye, muskies and more. Scott Toshner, a Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources fisheries biologist based in Brule, said as many as 15 species of fish have been observed living in and around a single submerged tree in a northern Wisconsin lake.

"At some point in their lives, every fish species in our inland waters uses wood, whether it's for spawning, finding a food source or seeking shelter," Toshner said. "I've observed walleyes on the deep end of downed trees, perch and musky can drape their eggs on the branches and juvenile fish can find insects or a place to hide. It's a carbon source that benefits everything from microorganisms to top predators."

Within hours of falling into the water, tadpoles, minnows and other small fish begin to hover in the branches of a tree, followed by an army of shredders and filter feeders — insects and other species that begin their lives by nibbling on the wood or the beneficial algae that soon coats it. Yet on many lakes, this natural cycle needs a helping hand since dying trees are typically removed before they put people and property at risk.

The good news is that citizens around the state are wading in, working in partnership with DNR to put more wood in the water through projects including "fish sticks," shoreline habitat improvements and traditional fish crib projects, said Ben Heussner, a DNR fisheries biologist based in Waukesha.

"We're seeing more people talking about fish sticks and shoreline improvement projects at their lake association meetings," Heussner said. "Efforts that a few individuals make really catch on as others begin to notice and we're seeing people out on their pontoon boats checking out some of the completed projects including the fish and wildlife they're attracting."

Tom Koepp, chairman of the Pewaukee chapter of Walleyes for Tomorrow and manager of the Lake Pewaukee Sanitary District, said he continues to get questions about his group's fish sticks project on Pewaukee Lake, among the first in southern Wisconsin to take advantage of an improved permitting process. Fish sticks projects involve placement of trees that are cabled together and anchored to the shoreline.

Koepp and his crew took the additional step of draping the trees with rocks to ensure they stay in place on the bottom. The Pewaukee Lake project, completed last year, involved placement of several tree sections dropped just offshore of Walk's Island near the west end of the lake.

"You can't go into these types of projects saying that you need 100 of them to make a difference because every one of them, whether it's fish sticks or shoreline restoration can have an impact," Koepp said. "If you're smart about these things, you can get woody structure back into a lake that has a developed shoreline without interfering with places where kids swim or people keep their boats."

Other lakes with recently completed fish sticks projects or efforts in the works include Lake Nebagamon in Douglas County, Lake Marion in Dane County and Lower Genesee Lake in Waukesha County. Toshner said more than 29 lakes have completed fish sticks projects in the last seven years.

Nearly a dozen additional habitat restoration efforts including fish sticks projects are in the works thanks to grants to local government, lake and conservation organizations provided through DNR's Healthy Lakes initiative, said Shelly Thomsen, a DNR water resources management specialist. Generally, woody habitat projects are beneficial if there are fewer than 200 trees in the near shore water per mile of shoreline, the DNR experts said.

Search the DNR website, dnr.wi.gov, for fish sticks projects to learn more including how to apply for a general permit that allows multiple fish sticks projects to be completed over a period of up to five years. Interested lake groups, communities and property owners are encouraged to contact Thomsen to learn more about assistance that may be available while a local DNR fisheries biologist may be able to provide insight on habitat opportunities.

Additional information about the benefits of wood in the water is contained in a publication developed by UW-Extension and UW-Stevens Point in cooperation with DNR called "A Second Life For Trees in Lakes: As Useful in the Water as They Were on Land."

Bird Records Take Flight; Call For More Volunteers Goes Out

While volunteers helping survey Wisconsin birds have already lit up the record books before prime nesting season even begins, survey organizers are calling for more avid and interested birders to join the cause to provide the most comprehensive account yet of the birds that call Wisconsin home.

"Already, volunteers are setting new records for the atlas survey and changing what we know of the breeding bird landscape in Wisconsin," says Nick Anich, Wisconsin Breeding Bird Atlas coordinator for the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources. "We've had some great findings so far. But there is still so much more to learn and we need more volunteers to help better our understanding of Wisconsin birds."

The survey, last done 20 years ago, helps assess whether populations of bird species that nest and raise their young in Wisconsin are increasing, decreasing, or staying the same. The results will shape bird conservation efforts over the coming generation. Read more in "A Historic Bird Survey," in the February 2015 Wisconsin Natural Resources magazine.

Bird Survey Yields Rare Finds And Must-See Photos

Volunteers have set new records for birds not documented in the previous atlas survey, including:

Pam Campbell of Menomonie spotted a pair of Eurasian collared-doves building a nest in a tree in Dunn County, a species not found nesting here during the first atlas survey conducted in the late 1990s.

Another species confirmed for the first time in this atlas survey is the whooping crane, one of the two most endangered crane species in the world. The Whooping Crane Eastern Partnership has been working for the past decade to release cranes in the wild in Wisconsin in hopes of building a self-sustaining population in the eastern U.S. The cranes were sighted on their nest at the Necedah National Wildlife Refuge; other pairs are nesting in Adams, Wood, and Marathon counties.

Thomas Wood of Menomonee Falls confirmed black-necked stilts as breeding in Wisconsin, a welcome observation since this species was recorded breeding in Wisconsin for the first time during the previous atlas. Wood observed this striking species nesting in Dodge County.

Dale Bonk of Mount Horeb confirmed that a long-eared owl was breeding in Dane County; this rare owl was not found at all in the county in the previous atlas survey and was only confirmed then in five counties statewide.

Volunteer Opportunities Beckon Birders; New Web Feature Showcases Nesting Songbirds

Kim Kreitinger, president of the Wisconsin Society for Ornithology, one of the organizations behind the survey, says now is a great time to join the effort because the migration is winding down. Aside from shorebirds, most of the birds you see here in June and July are birds that nest in Wisconsin, so volunteers don't have to sort out which are migratory birds headed to or from Canadian nesting grounds.

"It's safe to assume that the vast amounts of songbirds you encounter are on their breeding territories. Understanding the places they frequent, the habitats they use and the times of year in which they raise young are critical to conserving them," Kreitinger says.

A new Breeding Birds and Summer Mothers feature on the DNR website showcases pictures of many of the breeding birds people will see this summer and also some that organizers are particularly keen on learning how they're faring since the first Wisconsin Breeding Bird Atlas was done in the 1990s. The web feature also contains links to wso-birds.org/atlas, where people can learn about volunteer opportunities and find a link to the data entry portal.

Volunteers look for and document breeding behaviors of birds, everything ranging from a male singing a courtship song to a pair building a nest to a mother feeding her young. The survey seeks to confirm the presence and abundance of different species in every corner of the state.

Bill Mueller, director of the Western Great Lakes Bird & Bat Observatory, one of the other sponsoring organizations, says that people can volunteer for the survey according to their desire, expertise and time. Birders who know a lot of species are encouraged to sign up to survey a three mile by three mile block of land. Birders can intensively survey their block over one breeding season or spread it out over the five years.

Birders with interest but less bird identification experience or less time are encouraged to turn in individual sightings of nesting birds they see while they are outdoors hiking, biking, camping, or even while sitting in their backyard.

"The second Wisconsin Breeding Bird Atlas is critically important to help us understand how Wisconsin bird populations are changing," he says. "And, it is fun, and a great way to learn more about the natural world."

More than 1,600 people participated in that 1990s survey, and Mueller and other organizers hope more will get involved this time around. Volunteers can enter their data online using a customized atlas portal to eBird, a web-based reporting system many birders already use to keep track of their bird sightings and scientists use to harness the power of millions of birdwatchers worldwide. Such technology, along with advances in digital and smartphone cameras, also have made it easier and quicker to verify unusual observations.

In addition to WSO, DNR and the Great Lakes Western Bird and Bat Observatory, the Wisconsin Breeding Bird Atlas II is co-organized by the Wisconsin Bird Conservation Initiative.

Real-Time Results Available Now For Bird Surveys Statewide And In Your Area

The survey's use of a specialized online data entry system allows volunteers, organizers and the general public to see real-time the results of the bird survey to date. Here are a few statistics as of June 1, 2015.

• Nearly 40 percent of 1,246 priority survey blocks have already had some data recorded.

• 335 species have been reported, of which 146 have been confirmed as breeding.

• As of June 1, Aaron Holschbach of Arena was leading in species confirmed nesting in Wisconsin with 52 followed by John Kivikoski with 50 and Brad Zinda with 47.

• New confirmations and other interesting facts are frequently posted to the Wisconsin Breeding Bird Atlas Facebook page. www.facebook.com/WIBreedingBirdAtlas. Like this page to get them as part of your daily feed.

The applicants are asking that the 2035 Town of Kewaskum Comprehensive Plan Map be amended.
