New Freshmen Prepare For High School

By Anne Trautner

Cole Westeen and Joey Schickert are nervous to start high school next week.

But the "August Warm-Up" held at Kewaskum High School last week helped ease some of their fears about starting at their new school.

"It helped a lot," Joey said. "We went over our schedule and went to all of our rooms so it helped get to know where they all were."

The incoming freshmen attended the August Warm-Up last Wednesday and Thursday mornings to help learn their way around the big school. The program ended with a pep assembly on Thursday.

"When we were a freshman they didn't give us too much advice, they were like here is your room," said senior Maddy Lehmann.

"So we tried to show them a little more. It's been really fun," senior Serena Vetter said.

Both Abby and Gabi Seidensticker have been attending school in West Bend, so last week's program helped them meet some of the other incoming freshmen at Kewaskum High School.

To help the students transition to the new school, junior and senior students served as mentors. The mentors will continue meeting with freshmen throughout the school year.

"It's really fun, I really liked it," said Emily Krier, a senior mentor.

The mentors remembered how nervous they were to start high school, and tried to offer the new freshmen helpful tips.

"We always have a phenomenal group of students to choose from and more applicants than we can take, which makes it very hard to only choose a certain number," said Rachel Hassler, an art teacher at the school and coordinator of the August Warm-Up.

This year's mentors all wanted to make a difference for the freshmen, Hassler said.

"The mentors did a wonderful job," she said. "They interacted well with the freshmen, were very enthusiastic about school and all of the opportunities that KHS has to offer our students and were great role models for the freshmen. I could go on and on about the mentors."

Hassler and one other teacher started the Warm-Up program at Kewaskum High School about eight years ago because they noticed it took freshmen weeks to get acclimated to high school.

Kewaskum School Budget Passes At Annual Meeting

By Anne Trautner

With about 100 people voting Monday night, Kewaskum School District electors unanimously approved a $10,703,229 budget for the 2015-2016 school year.

The total levy is a 3.03 percent decrease from last year's budget.

"We would have to go back to 2004-2005 to find a lower budget than what we are looking at for this next year," School District Business Manager Julie Thoreson said. "This year, we have hit the bottom of our barrel when it comes to making cuts. We have scrimped and we have saved. There is nothing left."

To make up the difference of nearly $354,000 in revenue, the district is making ends meet by making budget cuts and using reserved funds.

This year's budget numbers are based on estimates.

"We don't know our final pupil count, we don't know the final equalized property values, and the state is waiting for those to finalize their formulas, and we are waiting for the state to finalize those formulas," Thoreson said.

The basic formula for state aid is based on the per pupil amount, Thoreson said.

"Over the years, we have gotten increases in that per pupil amount every year, but this year our increase was zero, and our revenue was flat," she said.

Since 2009-2010, the district has lost about $2 million in revenue limit. The good news is that the district is projected to see an increase in general aid this year of about $178,000, or 2.23 percent, Thoreson said.

Over the next year, the district will be looking at its budget and determining facility needs, School Superintendent James Smasal said.

"We are trying to do what we can as we move into the next phase of the elementary school being paid off and we start pre-paying some of that debt," Smasal said. "We need to take a look and see what other needs we have in our facilities, as well as how our operations are running."

The school district has started the process of developing plans to improve building structures for the middle and high schools. The school board hired Bray Architects earlier this year and will conduct interviews on Sept. 10 for a construction manager.

"We will look for their guidance as they walk us through what we have and how we can best meet the goals of providing a good, safe, purposeful place to educate kids at the secondary level," Smasal said.

The district's elementary school buildings are currently in good shape, Smasal said.

Over the next year, the district also will focus on attracting and retaining high quality staff.

She spoke about 911 and when it is appropriate to call. The children were taught about bike safety, boat and water safety, and road and car safety, as well as stranger danger. The little folks were taught about who strangers are and that children should never talk to a stranger, go anywhere with a stranger or wander off by themselves. They were also taught what to do if they were in a public place like the zoo or a park, and got separated from their parents.

Kewaskum High School Gets New Principal

By Anne Trautner

Scott Stier, a former athletic director at West Bend West High School, was hired on Monday as Kewaskum High School's new principal.

As principal, Stier plans to spend time in the classrooms.

"That is really what I'm excited about," Stier said. "Really, I view my role as support and empowerment for our staff. I want to be in the classrooms as much as possible, not only to be with the kids and connect with the kids, but more importantly to assist and support our teaching staff so that we can maximize our potential. So there's a lot of coaching that goes on, and I look forward to that aspect of it."

Stier, who grew up in West Bend, is familiar with the Kewaskum area. After graduating from West Bend West High School, Stier attended the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire.

He then taught for 12 years at Badger Middle School in West Bend. He primarily taught seventh and eighth grade science, but also taught English language arts, reading and math. In 2008, Stier began working as athletic Director at West Bend West.

Stier said he enjoyed working as athletic director, but he missed being in the classroom.

"I really love the classroom and the students in the classroom, and I was removed from that, and that was tough," Stier said. "Now I'm more connected to the whole school community, the classroom and I can get back in the classroom."

At the beginning of August, Stier began working as an assistant principal at the high school in West Bend.

About two weeks later, William Loss resigned from the Kewaskum High School principal position in order to work as principal of Waterford High School and be able to spend more time with his family.

West Bend administration has since hired a new assistant principal to replace Stier and has been supportive of Stier's decision to work in Kewaskum, Stier said.

Kewaskum will benefit from Stier's experience, Kewaskum Superintendent James Smasal said.

"I think we have somebody that understands and appreciates the culture of Washington County. I also think we have somebody that more or less has dedicated his life to children in the Washington County area, so I think this is something that he will enjoy doing and want to do for many, many years to come," Smasal said. "He's a very relational leader, and he garners support through individualized meetings and relationships, and I think that's what this high school needs."

Stier has hit the ground running and is trying to get up to speed with all the initiatives and processes that are going on in Kewaskum.

"I think a lot of those are the same district to district, there's a lot of overlap, but each district has its own unique, specific initiatives they are looking at," Stier said.

Stier has started familiarizing himself with Kewaskum's focus on literacy and co-teaching. In addition, he is getting to know the people in Kewaskum.

"I want to get to know the staff, get to know the kids and get to know the other community members that I will be interacting with. It is important to form those relationships early and form them well, because if you don't have that as a foundation, you're spinning your wheels," Stier said.

Stier's wife, Judy Stier, has been an educator in West Bend for 23 years. She teaches science at Silverbrook Intermediate School. The couple's two children, a son in sixth grade and a daughter in 10th grade, attend school in West Bend.

"Most of that energy is going to be focusing on the compensation model that we put together last year," Smasal said. "It does try to hit both areas of not only attracting people, but once they are here, trying to retain them. In today's world, that has become much more difficult. We have seen a lot more movement in the last five years than we did previously, probably 50 years prior to that. So when things change, we have to be mobile. We have to try to stay on top of the wave instead of getting swallowed up by it."

Although the budget was passed without any debate, the annual meeting had a slow start.

Constituent Bradley Petersen spoke up at the start of the meeting and nominated resident Timothy Ranthum to chair the meeting.

"I think we need to have somebody from the public, a third person, who is very open minded so that all voices can be heard from this district," Petersen said.

However, Board President Troy Hanson was voted in as the chairperson by an overwhelming majority.

Petersen also voiced his opinion about the salary for board members and moved that each board member's salary be cut in half, from $3,150 per year to an annual income of $1,575.

"I would like to put that hard earned money back into education of the students. As a public servant, I don't think you are looking for a dollar amount, I think you are looking to serve the people of the district," Petersen said.

The majority of the crowd disagreed and resoundingly voted to keep the board members' salaries at the current annual rate of $3,150.

Ranthum objected to the agenda, stating that there was a point he would like the public to be able to discuss in State Statute 120.10

However, legal counsel had advised the school district that no other points were needed to be added to the resolutions, Smasal said.

During the meeting, a slide presentation with videos was presented as part of the administrator's report. They spoke about facilities and operations; workforce engagement and development; teaching and learning; communication and community engagement; and technology. The high school auditorium filled with applause after each segment.

Smasal was pleased with the meeting's large turnout.

"It's great to see so many people here that are concerned about the district and want to find out more about it," Smasal said.

Students Jump Up To Middle School

By Anne Trautner

The students worked together to find their way through an invisible labyrinth set up on the classroom floor.

The game was a team-building exercise that new sixth-grade students participated in last week at Kewaskum Middle School as part of the "Jump to the Middle" program.

"Jump to the Middle" went really well. We do a lot of team building during that time, so students are able to get to know each other's names and make connections before school starts," principal Julie Skelton said.

During the two half days that students attended "Jump to the Middle," they received their schedules and learned how to work the combinations on their lockers. They learned how to enter their passwords into the school computers and became familiar with the school's rules.

"The real goal is to get them with their peers during that time so it's not so overwhelming when they get here," Skelton said.

The program seemed to work.

Last Thursday, Kyle Leichert said he was not nervous to start middle school, but instead was looking forward to all the new activities the school had to offer.

Sixth-grader Isaac Schmidt agreed.

"I think the best part is going to be being able to meet new people and doing different things than what there was in elementary school," Isaac said.

Kewaskum Middle School has been holding the "Jump to the Middle" program for at least six years, Skelton said.

Historically, the program has had good attendance, Skelton said. Last week, 100 of the 129 incoming sixth-graders attended "Jump to the Middle."

Last spring, when the outgoing fifth-graders visited the middle school, the sixth-graders recommended that they attend the program.

"One of the biggest pieces of advice that they all get, that the current sixth-graders tell them, come to 'Jump to the Middle.' Your school year will be so much better if you come," Skelton said.

Staff members do what they can to make it a smooth transition into middle school for the students.

"We try to make it fun so it's not overwhelming," Skelton said.

"It would be three or four weeks into school, and they were still unsure of where their classes were every hour, they couldn't open their lockers, they were afraid to talk to their teachers and ask for help. They were so behind. Once you get so far behind, it's so easy to never get caught up."

Hassler has found that the program alleviates a lot of anxiety for students so they can get acclimated more quickly.

"High school is still a lot, there are a lot of big changes and all that, but we found that freshmen are more relaxed right away. That is just so much better for them to not be panicked," Hassler said.

One of the things that the program tries to drive home is that grades matter in high school.

"I think it's hard for new freshmen to realize that from day one of high school, everything counts. All their homework, all their grades really matter," Hassler said.

Last week, the students got to tour the building and become familiar with their lockers. They walked through their schedules and learned their way around the campus.

"On the last day, we do some fun stuff and do some team building," Hassler said.

About 125 of the approximate 140 incoming freshmen attended last week, Hasler said.

Other school districts in Wisconsin have started modeling similar programs after Kewaskum's August Warm-Up program, Hassler said.

"I think its really important that we have the program for the freshmen. It's so important that we take care of our kids," Hassler said.

Habitat For Humanity Continues The Rich Tradition Of Germanfest

Habitat for Humanity of Washington and Dodge Counties will continue the rich tradition of Germanfest in West Bend starting in 2016.

"We are excited to announce that Habitat for Humanity will assume the reins of Germanfest and hopefully run it for the next 30 years," said Jim Muehlbauer, the spokesman for the Germanfest Committee. "Habitat has a 17-year history of serving families in our community – now Germanfest can be their signature event."

Habitat for Humanity of Washington and Dodge Counties is an ecumenical Christian ministry dedicated to the elimination of sub-standard housing in Washington and Dodge counties. They work in partnership with God and people of all walks to bring awareness to the issue of inadequate housing. Habitat's programming is focused on two different areas: new construction and home repairs for deserving low-income families in our community.

"Habitat is a hand-up organization, not a hand out. All of our partnering families are required to pay Habitat back for the work that is done. The deal our families get is based on old testament scripture where God makes it clear to his followers that when dealing with the poor, you must follow these principles – provide no-interest loans, reduce cost by putting your faith into action, make no profit and give those in need ample time to repay," said Russ Wanta, the executive director of Habitat.

Habitat feels well positioned to take over this great tradition. "We have a very strong volunteer base and are convinced they will rise to the occasion and offer their services for Germanfest as well," said Morgan Pfaff, Habitat's director of family services. "Constructing stages and doing general set-up tasks are fully in our wheelhouse. The only thing that is really new to us is serving beer, but I am sure we can figure that out as well."

"Aug. 28-30 will be the 30th anniversary of Germanfest and the perfect time to turn it over to others," said Muehlbauer. Habitat will be involved in learning about set-up and take down as well as running four different events at this year's festival. Hammer Schlagen, the raffle, the souvenir stand and the sheephead tournament will all be under Habitat's guise. All Habitat volunteers will proudly be sporting a Habitat for Humanity ReStore t-shirt. Habitat ReStores are home-improvement thrift stores and serve as a significant source of funding for the life and ministry of Habitat.

"We believe Germanfest can provide the resources to build an entire house in our community," said Rex Melius, Habitat's Director of Development. "We could call it - 'the house the Polka built' or 'das Haus.' We are blessed to have this opportunity of such an established event. We thank those who have served before us and promise to maintain the richness of Germanfest," said Melius.

If interested in volunteering with Habitat for Humanity at Germanfest, please call Morgan Pfaff at 262-338-0690 to sign up. All are welcome.

Jillian Braatz, Joey Schickert and Cole Westeen participate in a relay race during August Warm-Up at Kewaskum High School last week. The event helped the new freshmen acclimate to their new school. About 125 students attended the orientation program, which was held on Wednesday and Thursday mornings last week. The students said that it helped them feel a little less nervous about starting school on Tuesday.

State Patrol Inspects Every School Bus Every Year

Next week, when school buses once again are a familiar sight on Wisconsin streets and highways, their precious passengers will be riding in some of the safest vehicles on the road.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, school buses are the safest form of transportation for getting students to and from school. On average nationally, nearly 500 students, ages five to 18, are killed each year in passenger vehicle crashes during school hours, and 74 percent of those fatalities involve teen drivers. In contrast, four school-aged children are killed each year while riding in school buses.

To help maintain this commendable safety record, the Wisconsin Department of Transportation's Division of State Patrol inspects every school bus in Wisconsin every year for a total of about 11,000 inspections annually. In addition to annual examinations of all school buses, the State Patrol conducts spot checks and presale inspections.

State Patrol inspectors are well-trained professionals, who can identify a variety of potential safety problems. They closely examine brakes, steering, lights, electrical systems and other required safety equipment during each inspection.

"Our inspectors use their knowledge and experience to protect children," says State Patrol Lieutenant Karl Mittelstadt of the Motor Carrier Enforcement Section. "Thousands of students, from kindergarten through high school, ride buses to school each day. Many others ride school buses on field trips or to extracurricular activities, like sporting events. It's our job to help make sure that every school bus is ready to do its job safely."

Crowd Goes Batty For Bats

By Anne Trautner

A big brown bat flew into the picnic shelter at Mauthe Lake Recreation Area, and the crowd shrieked with excitement.

"Oh! There's a bat flying in here!" said 6-year-old Francesca Hallenberg.

Francesca was one of 25 people who attended a presentation on Wisconsin bats on Aug. 13. The entire audience of men, women and children were excited to see a live bat.

Paul White, a conservation biologist for the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, who was in the midst of giving a Powerpoint presentation about bats, explained that normally he brings fruit bats to the presentation so people can see them up close. Unfortunately, the fruit bats were being used at a presentation elsewhere in the state that evening.

But the group at Mauthe Lake was not to be disappointed. As White talked, more bats flew into the shelter.

When one of the big brown bats landed high on a wall, White put on his gloves, climbed on a ledge and grabbed the bat.

"I've had my vaccinations and my rabies shots," White said as he allowed everyone to get a close-up look at the winged mammal. "This is a juvenile. The way I can tell is because his wing joints aren't fully developed. They are pretty amazing animals."

Bat Facts

There are some 1,200 species of bats worldwide. The big brown bat is one of the largest species found in Wisconsin, with a 10- to 12-inch wing span, White said.

Some of Wisconsin's bats fly south for the winter. Some bats will fly south to Missouri, Florida or Mexico. Others will hibernate in Wisconsin caves or mines, he said.

"Some folks go to Florida for the winter, some folks decide to stick it out in Wisconsin. That's pretty much how it's split up here with bats," White said.

Bats that stay in this area will hibernate for six to eight months, waking up every 20 days or so.

As they sleep, bats' heartbeats will slow to just five to 10 beats per minute. While active, a typical bat's heart rate is about 500 beats per minute, White said.

Bats commonly live 10 to 15 years in the wild, but can live much longer.

"We just recently found a bat hibernating in northern Wisconsin that had a small band on him. That band was put on in April 1983, so it was 32 years old. Pretty amazing," White said. "It is rare for us to find a band, let alone a band we put on 32 years ago."

As White discussed bats, audience members had numerous questions.

Francesca wanted to know how bats hang upside down.

"When they are born, the only things that are adult size are their feet. Imagine if when you were born, you had the same size feet you have right now," White said.

"When bats hang upside down, does the blood rush to their heads?" Francesca's 8-year-old brother Jack Hallenberg asked.

"They have a pretty interesting circulatory system where it allows their blood to flow, so it doesn't pool in their heads," White said.

Bats are useful because they eat a variety of insects. On average, bats save Wisconsin's agricultural industry $650 million to $1.5 billion a year by protecting farm crops from harmful insects, White said.

"They are the wolves of the night. They are the top predator of their group," White said. "They are very hungry. They eat 500 to 1,000 insects per hour."

Endangered Species

Suddenly, White's enthusiastic presentation style took a dramatic shift. "Of course, now there is the white-nose syndrome," White said sullenly, and both his voice and body language revealed a sense of sadness.

White-nose syndrome, a fungus that has struck bats, has killed five to seven million bats since it first hit the United States in 2006.

The fungus is thought to have originated in Europe, but it now has been found in 26 states. It arrived in Wisconsin in 2014.

The fungus covers the bats' wings so they are not able to fly. Bats with the fungus are waking up every five to seven days while hibernating, rather than sleeping for 15 to 20 days at a time.

"They are going through their fat reserves much more quickly and they are forced to leave their hibernation much earlier. Leaving a cave or mine in Wisconsin in February is not a solution to try to live," White said.

The fungus spreads from bat to bat. Sites can also become contaminated by humans.

"If you go through a cave and don't clean your camera gear and your clothes, you can contaminate a site. If visiting a site, make sure you don't wear anything from that site into another site," White said.

Currently, there is no cure for white-nose syndrome. Researchers are trying to track down the origin of the fungus and attempting to come up with a vaccination.

"A vaccine has never been developed for a fungus before," White said.

Scientists are seeing some evidence that some bats are surviving, so they are trying to see what might make them immune.

Because of the fungus, bats are now considered threatened and are protected under state law.

"We are doing what we can to make sure that children in the future are able to see these animals up close and personal," White said. "Unfortunately, we are kind of fighting an uphill battle with the white-nose syndrome. We want to keep them here, keep them healthy and keep them around as long as possible."

Finding Bats

White and other researchers try to keep tabs on Wisconsin's bat population.

"If you are looking for bats, over water is the best place to look," White said.

To study bats, researchers set up nets to catch the bats at night.

"We only catch the dumb ones, we say. The bats will often see this with their echo location and go right over the top or right underneath or around it. They are usually chasing an insect and at the last second they realize there is a net there. For the most part, we are not catching as many as there are flying around," White said.

Scientists also set up traps with two bands of fishing lines.

"This is an effective way to catch a lot of bats. I think we caught 130 bats in half an hour yesterday," White said.

Once researchers catch bats, they check their gender and age. They take hair samples and measure and weigh the bats. A small transmitter is put on each bat so it can be tracked.

White, who has been tracking bats for seven years, uses special equipment that magnifies the chirping sounds the bats make.

"The bats are sending out calls with their mouths and they are listening for the echoes so they can determine where they are flying and find out if there is an insect, what size insect it is, and whether it is something they want to proceed to," White said.

White led the group along the border of Mauthe Lake while holding the detector up toward the sky.

Chirping sounds could be heard as big brown bats and little brown bats flew through the night sky, foraging for a meal.

"We are able to differentiate one species from another just by their echo," White said.

The Campbellsport Office will be closed on Monday, Sept. 7 for Labor Day.

Early deadline for Sept. 10th paper is Friday, Sept. 4 at 4 p.m.

United Way Announces $240,000 In Health Program Funding: Focuses On AODA And Mental Health

The 2014 Community Health Survey commissioned by Aurora Health Care, Children's Hospital of Wisconsin, and Froedtert & the Medical College of Wisconsin found that drugs and alcohol, chronic diseases, and mental health were the top health concerns in Washington County.

In response to these community-identified needs, United Way of Washington County is increasing efforts to improve AODA and mental health services, encouraging collaborative work and coalitions.

In April, United Way of Washington County issued a request for program proposals that advance the organization's goal to ensure all children and adults in Washington County are physically and mentally healthy. There was an overwhelming response, with 16 programs requesting a total of $521,541.

With $240,731 in funds available, United Way's community volunteers were challenged with the task of prioritizing programs that most effectively respond to the community's greatest needs.

"All of the programs that applied provide incredibly valuable services to people in our community," said Kristin Brandner, Executive Director of United Way of Washington County. "But ultimately our volunteers had to focus on the greatest needs and make some difficult decisions."

After a rigorous screening and interview process, community volunteers selected 11 programs that will receive United Way funding, including six that are new to United Way.

"The panel volunteers were very thorough and they did an excellent job reviewing the applications," said Karl Schultz, Director of Operations at Froedtert and the Medical College of Wisconsin, and volunteer chairman of the United Way Health Panel. "The 11 programs that were selected have demonstrated results and they serve a wide array of people throughout the county. United Way is extremely excited to work with these partners as they continue to improve people's lives."

Each health program will receive United Way funding through 2018, contingent on successful year-end reviews. United Way of Washington County recently transitioned to a three-year funding cycle. Every year, applications are accepted under one of their three focus areas: Education, Income Stability, and Health. Next year, applications will be accepted for education programs.

"United Way is able to invest in these important programs because of our community's support," said Brandner. "The number of applications we received demonstrates the increasing needs in Washington County. With the help of thousands of generous donors, volunteers, and community partners, we are working together to improve community conditions for all."

Kewaskum High School to Offer Main Street Philanthropy Class

Kewaskum High School will be the first school in the state of Wisconsin to offer a Main Street Philanthropy class.

Jim Silbernagel of The Silbernagel Group heard about this program at a conference and was so impressed with student outcomes that he brought it to Kewaskum.

The jointly launched program by Kewaskum High School and The Silbernagel Group will use philanthropy and giving as tools to instill values and life skills in the students, and inspire the next generation of "philanthropists in training" by helping junior students enjoy the gift of giving and serving.

The 11-week process brings together small groups of students, their classroom teacher, Casey Scheel (instructor of the Sports Entertainment and Hospitality Management Class), a Main Street Philanthropy Ambassador Dona Miotke (community services director of The Silbernagel Group) and generous donors and front line charities, all of which benefit from this collaboration.

Using donated funds and money they raise themselves, students will identify local charities whose missions align with the students' "charitable passions." Working in small groups, they will examine these organizations' tax returns and evaluate their effectiveness in accomplishing their charitable purposes.

Students will interview officers and board members to decide which organizations are having the best impact. At the end of the program, the students will deliver checks to those charities that they have determined are doing the best job in the community.

Recent graduates of the program have noted its impact in their lives.

"My experience using the Make a Difference cards was great. I noticed something I didn't have clear in my mind, and that was the urge and desire to help others and contribute to making a difference in the world." -Jessica P., age 16

"I never knew giving away money could be so hard...or so much fun!" - Ervin H., age 14

"I am so excited about our program launch at Kewaskum High School. It will be the first time this course has been offered in Wisconsin. The purpose of Main Street Philanthropy is to transform students from the inside out and society from the bottom up by helping youth and adults experience the joy of purposeful giving. We help address much of what is broken in the world today by providing an antidote for the selfish me-first thinking. Main Street Philanthropy addresses so many of the concerns that parents/grandparents like me worry about, such as how to instill critical life skills and values that will help my children and grandchildren find happiness and success for the rest of their lives."

Casey Scheel says, "I think this is a great program to get the students of Kewaskum High School connected with businesses and organizations in our community. I consistently try to prepare students for their future after high school. This starts with learning life skills in the classroom and bridging the gap between high school and real world experiences. I look forward to bringing Main Street Philanthropy into the class curriculum to get students exposed to and involved with community organizations. My goals through this program would be to help my students grow in their oral and written communication skills, while improving their leadership skills at the same time," Miotke said.

"This project fits perfectly with our Washington County Workforce Alliance initiative," said Superintendent James Smasal, "which is to promote collaboration between employers, educators, social and human service agencies".

The students will gain knowledge of financial literacy; increase written and oral communication skills; gain more self-esteem; expand their community awareness, progress in their interpersonal trust and communication skills; identify personal values and purpose; learn to collaborate in groups and as leaders; learn the importance of volunteerism, giving and gratitude.

The Kewaskum High School will enjoy these benefits: increased pride and citizenship among its students; gain community recognition for the school; enrich and diversify the school curriculum; provide an opportunity for the school to give back to the community; and offer students a real world learning experience in math, social sciences, group study collaboration, financial literacy and critical basic life skills.

The city of Kewaskum and surrounding community will experience: the development of a new generation of donors and volunteers; donations to organizations chosen by the students to receive grants for their charitable missions; increased community awareness of the charitable organizations in the area.

The generous donors funding this project will share in the youthful energy, enthusiasm and spirit of the students; diversity their own gifting without additional screening; build a long-term base of a new generation of philanthropists; receive immediate satisfaction and a boost to the community.

$5,000 is needed for each class. The high school would like to offer two classes a year at the junior level, but will need help from the community to make this a reality for our students. Jim Silbernagel is financing $2,000 of each course so $3,000 needs to be raised for each class ($6,000 for the school year).

The grant money raised will stay in the Kewaskum area supporting the causes identified by the students.

The first class has been funded by generous community donors. Funding has been started for the second class. Premier donors include: The Silbernagel Group; The Antique Mall of Kewaskum and Gruber Tool and Die of West Bend. Select donors include: Coffee Corner of Kewaskum; Kewaskum Veterinary Clinic; PNC Bank of Kewaskum; and Gateway Café and Catering. Friends donors include Dairy Queen of Kewaskum; Cousin Subs of Kewaskum; Hair on Main; LK Heating and Air Conditioning; Mike's Auto; Hon-e-Kor; K & D Excavating Inc.; Kewaskum Frozen Foods and Bonnie Bell Motel.

The hope of the school board, teachers and Miotke is that this can be a regular course each school year at Kewaskum High School. Most of this money comes back to the community in the form of grants to local charities of the students choosing.

The results of this program will be shared with the community as there's a profound transformation for all involved: students, faculty, schools charities, and donors. Minds are opened, possibilities are explored, imaginations are ignited, help is given, hearts are touched and lives are changed forever.

i4Learning Community School Adopts Project Lead The Way (PLTW) STEM Education Program

-Program Is Designed To Engage Young Students In Math And Science, Better Preparing Them For The Jobs Of The Future

i4Learning Community School in Wayne announced that it will begin offering hands-on, project-based science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) curriculum to students in grades K-5 as part of its implementation of the Project Lead The Way's (PLTW) elementary school program, PLTW Launch TM.

PLTW is the nation's leading provider of STEM programs to students in grades K-12, and i4Learning Community School (i4LCS) joins more than 6,500 schools across the U.S. in offering PLTW programs to their students. The new curriculum will start with the beginning of the 2015-16 school year.

Studies show that students decide as early as elementary school whether they like, and think they are good at, math and science. Engaging them at a young age builds confidence, grows interest, and puts them on course for strong accomplishments in middle school, high school, and beyond.

Through PLTW Launch, i4Learning's students will become problem solvers. They'll engage in design problems that encourage collaboration and use touch technology, robotics, and everyday materials to explore topics such as energy, light and sound, motion and stability, and gravity.

PLTW Launch inspires in students a passion for and confidence in STEM subjects, encouraging them to continue their learning in middle school, high school, and beyond.

"PLTW has a long history of successfully engaging students in STEM subjects," said i4LCS Principal Joel Dziedzic.

"We are excited to offer PLTW Launch to our students, giving them a chance to get excited about math, science, and STEM concepts and pursue these subjects as they continue their educational careers."

"Project Lead The Way" is proud to partner with i4Learning Community School to excite and engage students in math and science from the earliest ages," said PLTW President and Chief Executive Officer Dr. Vince Bertram. "Together, we're helping students make connections, understand how the world works, and develop a strong foundation that will prepare them for success in their education, and ultimately, their careers."

In addition to providing world-class K-12 STEM programs, PLTW provides high-quality professional development training that equips teachers with the content, skills, and pedagogy required to teach each PLTW course. i4Learning Teachers Mrs. Nicole Ebert and Mrs. Nichole Berres attended PLTW's 3 day training at Milwaukee School of Engineering (MSOE) last week. They will be building leaders for the program equipped to train the other teachers at i4Learning Community School.

PLTW schools also benefit from the organization's engaged network of Fortune 500 companies, educators, and partners. School-based PLTW Partnership Teams complement the curriculum by recruiting local business and industry professionals to serve as mentors and share their real-world experiences with students.

Project Lead The Way (PLTW) is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization and the nation's leading provider of K-12 STEM programs. PLTW's world-class, activity-, project-, and problem-based curriculum and high-quality teacher professional development model, combined with an engaged network of educators and corporate partners, help students develop the skills needed to succeed in our global economy. More than 6,500 elementary, middle, and high schools in all 50 states and the District of Columbia are currently offering PLTW courses to their students.

For more information on i4Learning's new PLTW Launch program or to set up a school visit, contact Joel Dziedzic at (262) 626-8427, ext 5001.

Students attend a hunters safety class at the New Fane Sportsmans Club the week of Aug. 17-22. Congratulations to the graduates.

Piece Of Litter Makes Big Statement

By Anne Trautner

When I arrived at the news office in Campbellsport the other day, the bright red and blue piece of litter that was in the gutter caught my eye.

The image of the American flag, an American Eagle and the words "Made in China" looked like an editorial cartoon.

With the recent drop in the stock market that some financial experts are saying is related to China's economy, I thought the message on the small piece of litter was rather timely.

In reality, the piece of paper was a tag that had fallen off a product that someone had bought at a nearby store.

It is a simple image with a big message.

Auburn Plan Commission Approves Extension For Ketter Pit

By Andrea Hansen Abler

Members of the Town of Auburn Plan Commission approved a four-year special exception permit extension to Michels Corporation for their Ketter Pit along Highway 45.

This action reverses the action taken by the commission on July 13th when they denied the extension. Michels Corporation had asked the plan commission to reconsider the decision.

The extension was approved on a 4-1 vote with Terry Buss voting against the extension. Doug Schacht, Corey Oppermann, Mike Engleman and Ken Depperman all voted in favor of the motion.

According to the town's attorney, Matt Parmentier, the extension will be more strict than the last extension that was granted 10 years ago. The township is using the Town of Byron's permit as a guide for theirs and will have some special conditions just for this particular pit.

According to Bob Bingen of Michels, this extension will allow them to finish mining the final 12.9 acres on this property. This is in the northeastern section of the property.

"To us this is a very simple application," Bingen said. "Per your code, we are asking for a four-year extension."

Many were in attendance to speak out against the continuation of this mine.

Maureen Koch stated she is worried about the creek located on this property. "You have to preserve the land," she said.

She also stated that the commission did not have to grant the extension. "It (ordinance) states they may be given an extension, not must be given," she said. "No more gravel pits in the Town of Auburn."

Other neighbors of this property are concerned about the reclamation of the this property. A reclamation plan is established to show how the land will be renewed after the mining is completed in this area.

A neighbor stated that he thought this land was supposed to become farm land again. He noted there are some new ponds in this area now.

Ken Depperman, town chairman and plan commission member, explained that the township does not have any control over the reclamation of a site. Fond du Lac County is the governing body that approves and oversees all reclamation plans.

"I think people can have the argument whether ponds should go in there or not, but the town has nothing to do with that," added Bingen. "The county handles the reclamation plan. It is the county's jurisdiction."

Neighbors were also concerned about the operating hours of the pit and the fact that vehicles still go in and out of the driveway after it is supposed to be closed. Bingen stated that Michels can put a gate and a padlock in the driveway to prevent anyone from using it.

"We can do maintenance in there after 6 p.m.," Otto Ramthun reminded the crowd.

Commission members approved a motion to reconsider the special exception permit. They then approved granting the extension with the new provisions.

Depperman also stated that he will have the Ketter Pit as a regular agenda item on the town board's monthly agenda. That way anyone with complaints can bring them to the town board at any meeting.

Joel Dziedzic, principal at iLearning Community School, reads to students during "Reading in the Park" on Aug. 11 at Kiwanis Park. With the anticipation of the start of the 2015-16 school year, the Kewaskum School District leadership team offered this unique opportunity to get children excited about reading and the start of the new school year.

Stemming Wisconsin's Brain Drain

By Duey Strobel
State Senator
20th Senate District

In recent years, Wisconsin has seen a large exodus of college graduates seeking opportunities in other states.

According to a study by UW-Madison Professor Morris Davis, on average the state lost roughly 14,000 college graduates per year between 2008 and 2012. Almost half of those who left were young adults between the ages of 21 and 24 who recently obtained degrees. To be sure, this loss of talent comes with consequences. This "brain drain" stunts entrepreneurial efforts, shrinks the tax base, and ultimately hinders the state's overall ability to innovate and grow economically.

There is extensive evidence establishing that a city or state's future economic prosperity is directly tied to its population of young, educated workers. In other words, it is crucial to retain the state's best and brightest after graduation in order to maintain robust economic progress. This is especially true given that by 2020, 62 percent of jobs in the state will require a post-secondary degree, as reported by the Georgetown University Center on Education and the Workforce.

What makes our "brain drain" even more troubling is that currently, thousands of unfilled jobs exist in the state because candidates lack the necessary education and/or skill set. As some job sectors decline, there has been a rapid uptick of available jobs in the technology industry and other skilled trade areas.

Employers consistently point out that although job openings exist, the state is simply not doing its part to catch up with the demand. As a matter of fact, a study by ManpowerGroup solutions shows the supply of people with skills and education simply does not match the demand companies have for those skills and education. There is a greater demand for people who have obtained an associate or bachelor's degree than what the state currently has available.

With these issues in mind, I recently unveiled a bill that seeks to entice the best and brightest high school students to remain here for college and ultimately, work here and lay down roots after graduation. Many of these students will be the next entrepreneurs, job creators, benefactors, and leaders who will shape the future of our great state.

To accomplish this, my bill would restructure the current Academic Excellence Higher Education Scholarship, which is awarded to high school seniors statewide finishing at or near the top of their class. Untouched since the early 1990s, the program has become increasingly less effective in accomplishing its goal of keeping the best and brightest in the State of Wisconsin.

Under the proposed changes, the scholarship amount would be increased to equal the tuition and fees of the in-state college or university attended, or to the tuition and fees of UW-Madison if the student attends a private university. The key, however, would be that 50 percent of the award would be in the form of a traditional tuition scholarship, and the other half would be distributed to the student in the form of a tax credit that may be used to offset state income tax obligations for the first five years following graduation — but only if the graduate lives in Wisconsin and earns a majority of his or her income in-state.

Not only would this encourage our best high school students to stay in Wisconsin, but it would also provide a financial incentive for these graduates to share and develop their talents in-state, benefiting everyone. Without a doubt, stemming the "brain drain" will require a multi-pronged effort from the business community, alumni associations, and many others, but as legislators we cannot sit idly by as thousands of our college graduates leave the state.

Big Players Lead To Convincing Win

By Judy Harlow

Kewaskum High's "three musketeers," Brandon Thull, Charlie Witek and Michael Prochnow put on quite an offensive show in Friday's opening football game, leading the Indians to a 41-13 non-conference win over host West Bend East.

"We played pretty well overall," KHS coach Jason Piittmann said after addressing his Indians, who extended their string of wins over East to an even dozen.

With the Suns keying on Thull, the state's fifth leading rusher in 2014, Kewaskum's passing game took over early. Prochnow hooked up with Witek on a 39-yard scoring strike early on the team's first possession, capping a seven-play drive that covered 74 yards.

It was the first of three touchdowns involving the two veteran seniors, the second a 64-yarder coming with 5:03 remaining in the period and the third, an 18-yard slant, giving the Indians a 21-7 lead with 0:39 left before the end of the quarter.

During these two scoring drives, Thull only ran the ball two times, once for no gain and the other, a 17-yard scamper on the second possession, giving the Indians a first down and some breathing room at the 37-yard line.

After three plays including a motion penalty, the Indians were facing a third and 13 when Witek got free down the left sideline and Prochnow was on target with his throw.

And was coach Jason Piittmann surprised the Indians would be going to the air as much as they did in the first quarter?

"We kind of intended to wait and see what they were going to give us," Piittmann said, figuring the Suns might attempt to plug up the middle in an effort to stop the run. After the TD passes, East replaced its bigger linemen with several smaller ones, and "That opened things up" for the run.

Prochnow wound up completing 13 of his 17 pass attempts for 182 yards out of the "pistol offense," which the Indians using pretty exclusively in the first half.

"I like it (the pistol) because you can see the field better," Prochnow said, and he certainly found Witek when it counted. "I had faith he would get there for me," the two-year starter said.

Execution of the "pistol" is also very dependent upon the center's direct snap, and Prochnow said sophomore Riley Donovan "did a good job getting the ball to me ... no missed snaps."

Witek wound up with five catches for 164 yards, all coming in the first half.

Thull patiently waited for his turn to take the spotlight, which came on the Indians' first possession of the second half. The 190-pound halfback took a handoff from Prochnow and looked to be bottled up at the line of scrimmage, but he got away from a couple would-be tacklers, found daylight around his left end and turned on the jets, racing 82 yards to the end zone.

When asked if he was frustrated in the first half because he only carried the ball 11 times, Thull said, "No. I wasn't frustrated at all. I know we'd pick it up and get things going."

About the long scoring play, Thull said, "Just good blocking by the O-line. They never gave up on the play, and neither did I." Thull was quick to add it was Prochnow who gave him a good block downfield on the play.

For the game, Thull had two TDs — the other one was an eight-yard with 6:38 remaining in the third quarter — and rushed for 171 yards in 15 carries.

There were others who made big plays in the game. Senior receiver/linebacker Steven Nurkala had a 75-yard punt return in the third quarter, setting up Thull's second TD, which gave the Indians a 35-7 lead.

Josh Baker was stellar in the defensive backfield and came up with a big play just before half, jarring the ball loose from Karl Lemke, who seemingly had gathered in a pass from East QB Dillen Rondorf in Kewaskum territory, and one play later, Cole Rahlf took the ball right out Lemke's hands for an interception at the Kewaskum 30 yard line.

Also, junior kicker Jack Felten was perfect on his first five kicks, but the sixth one was blocked by the middle of the Suns' line.

Linebacker Ben Watzig had a big night defensively with eight tackles, including one sack of East quarterback.

Dillen Rondorf, who threw the ball 23 times, completing just eight for 130 yards and one TD, a 49-yard strike to Zach Fountain in the first quarter. Logan Cunningham's PAT made the score 7-7, but it took the Indians just five plays to regain the lead vis Witek's second TD catch.

Kewaskum wound up with 427 total yards of offense, while East had 261. East's Kranz rushed for 47 yards and Kyle Yochem chipped in with 45 on 10 carries.

Kewaskum suffered no serious injuries, but Witek was ejected near the end of the game for unsportsmanlike conduct and, according to Piittmann, will not be able to play in this week's home opener vs. Port Washington.

County Task Is Tough; Wiskirchen-Wenzlaff Up To The Task

By Judy Harlow

The Kewaskum High girls tennis team had a couple of tough challenges in its first week of action. Challenges were namely going up against powerhouse West Bend East and a couple other strong teams in the Washington County Invitational and opening the season at the Chilton Invitational with many regulars at home helping at the Freshman Warm Up at the school.

"It was a strong field," first-year head coach Peter Garcia said about the County test. Led by defending D-1 state champion, Lexi Keberle, East dominated the event, amassing 33 points, 12 more than runner-up Germantown.

Kewaskum placed sixth in the eight-team field with eight points, behind the second-place finish of Sammy Wiskirchen and Morgan Wenzlaff at number two doubles. They lost in the finals, 0-6, 0-6, to Merideth VandeZande and Ally Bensen of East after beating McKenzie Carl and Caitlin Gilly of Germantown in the first round 6-1, 6-8 and 10-0 in the Super Ten tiebreaker and topping West Bend West's Claire Tennies and Kelsey Nowack 7-5, 6-2 in the semis.

Garcia said this is Wiskirchen's first year in tennis after playing on the volleyball team in the past. "This is the first time they played together," he said, praising their efforts.

At number one doubles, Laura Weishan and Julie Cotter started with a 6-4, 3-6, 10-3 victory over Port Washington's duo of Brooke Verfeurth and Rienne Voeller. Then they lost to the eventual champs from East, 0-6, 1-6 before losing in the battle for third place to a team from Slinger. No scores were available because the meet was held at three different places, and Garcia did not see this match.

At number one singles, Jeray Riffel drew defending D-1 champion, Keberle, in the first round. Like she did in all her matches, Keberle, shut out Riffel 6-0, 6-0. "She's just amazing," Garcia said of the East star.

In her consolation match, Riffel lost to Lexi Longstaff of Port Washington, 4-6, 6-3 and 5-10.

At number two singles, Hunter Garcia started her match against a girl from Port Washington, when she suffered an asthma attack and could not continue. "That was very disappointing," coach Garcia said, especially since his daughter had taken second in the meet at Chilton.

At Chilton on August 19, the Indians finished sixth with 11 points, one point behind Kiel and two back of the host Lady Tigers.

Oshkosh Lourdes and Shawano finished 1-2 with 32 and 30 points, respectively.

Senior Hunter Garcia claimed a silver medal for taking second place at number one singles, losing the championship match in a Super Ten tiebreaker, 11 to 13 after the two split the first two sets.

The Indians' number one doubles team, Laura Weishan and Jennae Beaupre had an unlucky draw for their opener, losing to the eventual champions from Lourdes, but they battled back to take consolation honors. These match scores were not available.

At number three doubles, Brandi Geldnich and Ariaahna Grossenbacher, playing in their first varsity competition, "defied the odds," according to Garcia, and won third place medals.

Also, junior Breanna Trepes took fourth at No. 4 singles, losing in the final match to Maria Tushar of Oshkosh Lourdes, 5-7, 4-6.

"I couldn't have been happier with how hard the girls played," Garcia said, noting rain interrupted the match, then played in strong winds.

Kewaskum was scheduled to open conference play on August 24 and 26 against Sheboygan Falls and Plymouth, respectively.

Powering Up For The U.S. Nationals

By Judy Harlow

It was love at first sight. When Stephanie Vetter got her initial taste of CrossFit training, she was hooked. The former Kewaskum resident feels the same about power lifting, and currently she is in training for the United States Nationals, which will be held October 15-18 in Scranton, Pennsylvania.

Recalling how she became immersed in both activities, Vetter goes back to 2009 when she was living in Menomonee Falls and saw a gym that offered CrossFit. "I checked it out. It looked like fun, and I decided to try it." She was hooked.

From trying to competing was a natural transition for Vetter, who said, "I've done 11 local meets, all in Wisconsin. I took first place in five of them. I made the podium in all the rest."

Over the weekend of August 15, 16 and 17, Vetter was involved in a team competition in Stevens Point, and helped her team place second out of 20 teams.

While she has been successful in CrossFit meets, Vetter's ascent in power lifting has been nothing short of amazing. She started working on power lifting in February, and in the recent Badger Open meet held June 13 in Neenah, her first competition in the sport, she placed second in the 57-kilogram Women's Raw Open division and lifted "more than enough" total weight to qualify her for nationals.

"In that competition, I ended with a total of 705 pounds," Vetter, who is 34 years old, said. She lifted 254 pounds in the squat lift, 143 in the bench press and 308 in the dead lift, very good for someone who weighs 126.5 pounds.

Vetter said he has a trainer, Chellie deGelleke, who is helping her prepare for nationals, and she has her goals set high. "I'm hoping to exceed that (the 705 pounds) by at least 100 pounds."

While deGelleke is in charge of Vetter's workouts, her major encouragement comes from her dad, Dale Vetter, who lives in Kewaskum. "He comes to everything. He's probably my number one fan," Vetter said about her dad, who works part time at Piggly Wiggly.

While power lifting competitions mainly stay the same, Vetter said CrossFit is unique in that "Everything is different all the time. It's a competition of gymnastics and Olympic Weight Lifting ... That's what I like about it."

For an example, one CrossFit competition could include a two-thirds of a mile run carrying a medicine ball, doing Burpees, working on a rowing machine and competing in a dead lift. CrossFit competitions are designated as WODs, which stand for Workout of the Day.

Vetter said many people may have watched CrossFit competitions on ESPN, which is at the highest level of the sport, according to Vetter, who said, "Basically they are professional athletes. What I do is just for fun."

It might just be fun, but Vetter goes all out to do her best. "I am in the gym probably seven to 10 hours a week," she said, indicating she does the CrossFit training at CrossFit, Menomonee Falls and the power lifting at Pure Fitness in Mequon.

"There are incredible athletes on this (Pure Fitness) team, including some national champions. I am training with the best competitors and coaches out there," Vetter said.

When she isn't working out, Vetter makes a living working as a customer service representative at the Illing Company in Germantown.

When asked why she puts so much time and effort into these two activities, Vetter said, "Really, I just like lifting and getting stronger!"

Stephanie Vetter started power lifting in February and qualified at the Badger Open on June 13th in Neenah for the 2015 USA Powerlifting Raw National Championship, which will take place October 15-18 in Scranton, PA. Vetter lifted 705 pounds total in the 57 kilogram Women's Raw Open category at the Badger Open. Her powerlifting gym and powerlifting team is called Pure Fitness. Vetter also trains at CrossFit Menomonee Falls and competes in CrossFit games. Of the 11 competitions she has been in as an individual, Vetter has placed first five times and is sponsored by Brute Strength Fitness.

It was not a good year to be the numbers one or two seeds in the Men's Club Championship at Hon-E-Kor Country Club.

Top-seeded Jeff Anderson was knocked out of the tournament in the second round by Jim Rohlinger, 2-1, while Ethan Geidel's run ended after a 2-1 loss to Andrew Otto, a member of the Kewaskum High golf team. Both Anderson and Geidel had received byes in the first round.

Rohlinger and Otto will join Jay Krueger and defending champion Craig Anderson in the semifinals. Anderson, Jeff's father who lives in West Bend and is a high school math teacher, advanced to another finals with a 4-and-3 win over Sean Murray, a senior on the KHS golf team. Krueger disposed of Ryan Doherty, 2-1.

Rohlinger, who has never won a Hon-E-Kor title but has been close a couple times, goes up against Krueger, while Anderson will take on Otto in the other side of the bracket.

There were 14 men who started in the competition. The two finalists will square off in a 27-hole finals on Sunday, Sept. 6 with the rain date set for Sept. 7. The match will be played on the Blue and White Nines.

In the Men's First Flight, the four remaining players are Dan Gibbon, Eric Leitheiser, Alex Boyung and Mike Volesky. In the semis, it will be Gibbon vs. Leitheiser and Boyung vs. Volesky.

The Second Flight semifinals have Scott Rindt vs. Rick Averill and Mike Maurer vs. Tom Jakubczyk, and in the Third Flight, Dave Pfeiffer will play against Manny Alvarado, and Eric Anderson squares off against Pat Kent.

All those matches are 18-hole competitions that will also be held on September 6.

Dennis Prunty Tightens Track Championship Battle With Pepsi Challenge Round Three Win, Steve Apel Overall Pepsi Champion

By Dan Margetta

Dennis Prunty scored a clean sweep Sunday night at the Slinger Super Speedway and his victory in the 60-lap Pepsi Challenge Round Three super late model feature enabled him to take the lead in the overall track championship points battle by a single point over Steve Apel.

"They sure tried," Dennis Prunty said afterward, referring to his brother Dale Prunty and Steve Apel who finished second and third respectively, "But I had the pace since the beginning of that race because I knew the faster it was over, the faster I could be. To get a clean sweep you have to work hard for that and we did it again.

"It's still going to come down to that last week or if one of us has a problem," Prunty continued, alluding to the track championship duel between himself and Apel that has them a single point apart with two weeks remaining, "It's been good racing so we'll just have to see how it goes."

"We weren't racing for the win but we were racing for the Pepsi championship," Apel said after his third place finish awarded him the overall Pepsi Challenge Series title, "and we put on good show.

"I'm pretty sure it's going to come down to the last night," Apel continued, describing the track championship battle with Prunty, "That's the way it's going to happen and hopefully we can run side by side in the 100 lapper in two weeks, so if anyone wants to see a show, come back in two weeks."

Dennis Prunty also set fast time at 11.313 seconds.

E.J. Waldron won the 25-lap Slinger Bee feature after taking the lead when Tom Berens, Heather Stark, and Nick Schmidt all tangled while battling for the lead with six laps to go. Issac Daniel finished second and Matt Rose took the checkered flag in third. Jared Deming and Jakob Hassler rounded out the top five in fourth and fifth respectively. Brandon Tackes set a new track record in qualifying with a lap of 14.521 seconds.
