Kewaskum-area speed skater will compete in long track competition at 2022 Beijing Winter Olympics

On the afternoon of Tuesday, Jan. 11, the Pettit National Ice Center – off S. 84th Street on Milwaukee's west side – was bustling with skaters and hockey players coming and going for their various practices and exhibitions. On the exterior ice – a speed skating long track – were a group of skaters both young and old.

"It's really a lifetime sport," said Town of Wayne resident Dirk Stolz whose 17-year-old son,

Jordan, was on the ice at the time. "You can see, you've got all kinds of ages out here, today."

Jordan, who, just day's prior, had broken the Pettit Center's track record in the 500m and 1,000-meter races at the U.S. Speed Skating Trials, became the third youngest athlete in history to qualify for the U.S. men's long distance speed skating team and its upcoming slate of competitions at the 2022 Beijing Winter Olympics.

A lifetime sport, without a doubt, but one that the Kewaskum-area teen still has a lifetime to improve on after already dedicating his life, thus

Campbellsport Public Library Celebrating 100 Years of Service

CLARICE CASE
JOURNALIST

The Campbellsport Public Library is inviting the community to come celebrate 100 years of service on Friday, Jan. 21.

The Campbellsport Community Center Public Library was officially established on January 19, 1922.

Members of the Mother's Club were the first to run the library. At that time, books were received through donation or borrowed from the county.

After years of operation, which included several location changes and further improvement of the library, a referendum was passed in 1996 for the current library building. Construction began in April of 1997, and the library opened for business that November.

To celebrate the birthday, the library is inviting everyone to stop by on January 21 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. for a special treat. Patrons will also have the opportunity to look through the library's historical books and documents.

A week-long celebration is being planned by the library board for later this year that will include guest speaker appearances and activities for the community to engage in.

More information and history on the library can be found on their website: campbellsportlibrary.org.

Kewaskum School Board to Decide Fate of i4Learning Community School

BY ANNE TRAUTNER
JOURNALIST

The Kewaskum School Board is expected to vote at a special board meeting on Thursday, Jan. 27, on whether the i4Learning Community School (i4L) should be permanently closed when the school year ends this June.

The meeting will be held at 6 p.m. in the Kewaskum High School library. No public comments will be allowed at the meeting.

"This is a tough decision, but this community is being torn apart by how long this has been dragged out. I am pleading to this board to make a decision at that special board meeting," Board Member Bradley Petersen said at last Thursday's regular school board meeting.

It was a sentiment echoed by others as well.

"I have been a part of this process for five years. Since I moved out here, the school has been talking about closing. It's exhausting," Dana Kreis, an i4L parent, told the board at last week's meeting. "Whatever you do, just make a decision and rip off the Band-Aid so the families can move on. I am a finance major; I know where the numbers are. I know what it is. I love my small school. I love the classrooms. I love the teachers. But listen, if it's not going to make financial sense and if my taxes are going to raise up $1,000 a year, just decide really what is best. Just make a decision, please."

Board President Jim Leister said at last week's meeting that he was prepared to make the decision on closing the school.

"If you look at it financially, it's a no-brainer. That school needs to be closed," Leister said.

However, parents and community members have questioned the accuracy of data that had been presented to the board last summer.

"If you remember that meeting, everything that was laid out was called into question on where it was from. Let's just bring that information from eight months ago back in a way that we all, the community and the board, can digest it and understand it again, and decide whether or not we are in a position to make a decision," said School Board Member Ric Leitheiser.

The board requested that administration present information at the Jan. 27 meeting on the district's enrollment projections, results from the community survey that was completed in November, annual operation costs at i4L, projected maintenance costs at i4L, the school's annual operation costs, how closing the school would affect class sizes in the elementary schools and how busing would be impacted.

At last week's meeting, a community member voiced concern that the wording on the community survey implied that to keep i4L open, people had to pass a referendum to increase taxes.

"I am going to challenge that because it was an entire process that we had community involvement from all the schools. We had parents, staff, board members. Everybody agreed to ask those questions and word them that way," Board Member Stephanie Bird said.

Dr. Mark Bazata, the district administrator, said the referendum question originally was not going to go on the survey. The question was added at the request of the ad hoc committee that was created to look at how to best meet the needs of elementary students in the district. The committee was made up of board members as well as parents and staff members from all three elementary schools.

"They thought people might be willing to say they would pay more money to be able to have a local school," Bazata explained.

The Kewaskum School District currently has three elementary schools: Kewaskum Elementary

Meaning of a life

Dear Reader,
 What does one life mean? At the end of the day, does meaning come from worldly accomplishments? Amassing power? Attaining a position? Achieving glory? Piling up money? Collecting medals and honors? What does one life mean?

PATRICK J. WOOD
 PUBLISHER

Author of "Dear Reader" and "Tapestry of Love and Loss"

I would say no to all of the above. Meaning comes from bonds with family, from healthy friendships, from love.

We walk through our time on earth and possibly achieve some of the more worldly accomplishments... or possibly not. That doesn't matter. What matters is the greatest accomplishment of all: Peace with all around us, and ultimately peace of mind.

These thoughts are only to start the dialogue.

| XYZ CARD RESULTS |

The XYZ winners on Wednesday, Jan. 12, were: Marilyn Backhaus, Fred Lettow, Gary Straub, Nancy Rodenkirch and Athleen Butzke.

Sheepshead is played on Wednesdays, from 8:15 to 11:15 a.m., at Peace United Church of Christ in Kewaskum. All senior citizens are welcome.

| TUESDAY NIGHT SHEEPSHEAD |

Winners from the Sheepshead tournament on Sunday, Jan. 9, were: Chick Flynn, 56; and Kathy Riemer, 40.

Winners from Tuesday Night Sheepshead on Jan. 12 were: Joe Riemer and Ray Roskoph, 75; Jerry Wiedemeyer, 74; Darlene Baeber, 68; and Dave Dayton and Ray Zimmerman, 67.

Tuesday Night Sheepshead is played every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the United Steel Workers 850 building at 1230 Fond du Lac Ave. in Kewaskum.

New players are always welcome. Come one, come all!

On a sad note, Roger "Butch" Schmidt passed away, God Bless. It was Butch who started this game umpteen years ago at his Never Inn Tavern. Isn't it ironic that the day before he died, he easily won first place.

I remember my first time playing this game and saying to myself: This can't be much of a game; we are using not much more than half a deck of cards. I soon changed my mind. I have since enjoyed many years of playing.

| RURAL WRITES |

G.A. SCHEINOHA
 CONTRIBUTOR

Campbellsport has never had a dearth of what's necessary and perhaps, not as needed. For example, did you know that there were once four grocery stores in the village?

Down in lower town, Dave Loehr ran his meat locker, then up Main Street apiece was Straub's Red and White Grocery, farther along Barnes and across the intersection, just behind the First State Bank was the IGA owned by the Guenther family.

My parents shopped at Loehr's. Dave let them work off their bill by repainting the premises. He was a big hearted fella who also went to our church. In fact, he stood in for my Uncle Harvey who couldn't attend my brother Terry's baptism, even though he was one of the godparents.

My father kidded Dave, "You sold me the ham. Now you came to help me eat it too."

But nobody took more joshing than Henry Straub when the Ninnemanns were in charge of the Campbellsport News.

If you wanted to fetch yourself a car, the big three were all represented here. Kippenhan's Garage (where Kohn's gas station stands) sold Mopar vehicles. On the corner of Main, the former home of the Campbellsport News, housed Meyer Ford. Their sales lot sat where the National Exchange Bank is. Kitty-corner across Main was Schill's GM.

Farmer and factory worker alike developed a thirst something powerful. The village had no shortage of watering holes either. Before the GM dealership left town, the car lot was expanded by tearing down Rheimers tavern. Ray Weis had a place next to Twohig's Furniture. On the far corner, Larry Sheriff, later Gipper Schrauth, tended the taps.

It's a much quieter community these days. Not to mention changed. Probably a few might suggest for all the better.

Moraine Park Students Awarded New Robotics Technology

Moraine Park Technical College Electromechanical Technology students were awarded new robotics technology after placing first at Lab Midwest's Team Robotics Competition.

Students Anthony Biel of West Bend, Timothy Vukosich of Fond du Lac, and Gregory Van Slyke of Hartford participated in the Team Robotics Competition this past fall. The students were presented with the award by Lab Midwest and Fanuc on Dec. 9, at Moraine Park's Fond du Lac campus.

"The recognition is awesome, and I'm glad we were able to win some new equipment for our program," Biel said. "I placed second at the competition when I was in high school, so I was really excited when I got the chance to compete again and represent Moraine Park."

School (KES), Farmington Elementary School (FES) and i4L. Formerly called Wayne Elementary School, i4L operated as a charter school from 2015 to 2020.

On the 2020-21 Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction’s Accountability Report Cards, all three elementary schools in the district were rated “Significantly Exceeds Expectations.” FES had an overall score of 91.7; i4L had an overall score of 88.6; and FES had an overall score of 86.6.

i4L currently has 99 students in grades one through five. In 2020, 24 students were shifted from Kewaskum Elementary School (KES) to i4L. If the school closes, that means those students would once again need to shift to a different school. Also, some students would be shifted from KES to Farmington Elementary School (FES), where there is extra space, according to Bazata.

“So, when we talk about this impacting kids, it is not just impacting i4L; it is impacting all our elementary kids,” Bazata said. “As a district, we are going to have to take a look at where kids are geographically and we are going to have to try to figure out what makes the most sense.”

District administration has started planning what steps would need to be taken if the board does decide to close i4L.

“It would start with getting input from the community, parents and staff about what the critical pieces are to make sure that this transition is as positive as possible for the kids. If this does happen, it is going to be 100 percent about how to make this as positive as possible for the kids,” Bazata said.

Anyone who would like to make comments to the Kewaskum School Board before the Jan. 25 special board meeting should email the board members.

Snowmobilers: Think Smart before you Start this Season

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is reminding snowmobilers that safety is an important part of the ride. Whether you were gifted a snowmobile over the holidays or are a veteran of the ride, the department asks all riders to be in the know and review Wisconsin's snowmobile safety rules and regulations before heading out this winter.

Wisconsin is a long-time snowmobile destination offering some of the best riding opportunities in the country, especially in the northern part of the state. With more than 200,000 registered snowmobiles hitting the state's 25,000 miles of groomed trails across the state each winter, safety is critical.

Between January and March 2021, there were 13 snowmobile fatalities in Wisconsin, with alcohol, excess speed, driver inexperience and operator error as the leading causes.

"It's important to think smart before you start," said Lt. Martin Stone, DNR off-highway vehicle administrator. "Winter's fluctuating temperatures, snowfalls and snowmelts can cause unsafe conditions on snowmobile trails. The DNR does not monitor conditions and we suggest snowmobilers contact local fishing clubs, snowmobile clubs or outfitters to ask about the ice conditions in your area. Remember – no ice is safe ice."

There is no such thing as 100% safe ice. Snowmobilers cannot judge ice strength by factors like appearance, age, thickness or temperature, especially when the ice is snow-covered.

There is a 55 miles-per-hour speed limit when traveling at night. Do not overdrive what headlights can illuminate, such as trail markers or hazards.

Any person who is at least 12 years old born on or after Jan. 1, 1985, is required to have a valid Snowmobile Safety Certificate in order to operate a snowmobile in most areas. Operators must carry the certificate while riding and display it to a law enforcement officer when requested. Visit the DNR Safety Education webpage for details and to locate a class or take an online course.

Think smart before you start this season by following these tips:

ON THE TRAILS

- Don't drink and ride;
- Stay on marked trails—riding off-trail or cutting corners is trespassing;
- Always wear your helmet and safety gear;
- Slow down and use extra caution at night;
- Travel with a friend, carry a cell phone and let people know where you are going and when you'll return home;

- Dress appropriately, carry a first aid kit and navigation tools;
- Take a snowmobile safety course;
- Check trail conditions using the Travel Wisconsin Snowmobile Snow Report.

ICE SAFETY

- Remember that ice is never completely safe under any conditions.
- Contact local sport shops to ask about ice conditions locally on the lake or river you want to traverse;
- Wear proper clothing and equipment, including a life jacket or float coat should you fall through the ice and to help retain body heat;
- Do not travel in unfamiliar areas;
- Slow down when traveling at night;
- Know if the lake has inlets, outlets or narrows that have currents that can thin the ice;
- Watch for pressure ridges or ice buckling. These can be dangerous due to thin ice and open water.

For additional information on snowmobile safety classes, regulations, safety tips or to register your snowmobile, visit dnr.wisconsin.gov/topic/Snowmobile.

DNR VIOLATION HOTLINE

Anyone with information regarding natural resource violations, including unsafe snowmobile operation, may confidentially report by calling or texting 1-800-TIP-WDNR or 1-800-847-9367. The hotline is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Trained staff relay the information to conservation wardens. File an online report at dnr.wisconsin.gov/contact/Hotline.html.

Our Savior's Lutheran Church Displays Nativity Scene with a Rich History

The scene is typically set up following Thanksgiving and exhibited throughout the entire Christmas season, which extends from December 25 (Christmas Day) until January 5.

According to Our Saviors' "unofficial historian," Mike Kurtz, the set was donated by Hope and Paul Nelson, retired teachers from West Bend High School, several decades ago. The 30-piece set was originally owned by Hope's

She enjoyed the beach, yelling for the ice cream truck, and will be an angel shining above to her grandchildren.

DHS Schedules Listening Sessions to Get Input on how Settlement Funds Should Be Used to Address Wisconsin’s Opioid Epidemic

Virtual sessions started January 12 and are scheduled in regions across the state

The opioid epidemic has touched every corner of Wisconsin, and how the state responds to the crisis must be informed by the unique circumstances of each individual experiencing opioid use disorder, their friends and family, and their communities. Today, the Wisconsin Department of Health Services (DHS) announced it will be holding virtual listening sessions around the state to determine how anticipated settlement funds from opioid manufacturers and distributors can be used to enhance Wisconsin’s system of prevention, harm reduction, treatment, and recovery support services for opioid use to address needs at all levels.

“After opioid-related deaths exceeded 1,000 for the first time in 2020, we know there is more work we can do to continue building a healthier Wisconsin for every family and every community in every corner of our state. These listening sessions will allow us to hear directly from folks across our state about how we can use these funds to invest in efforts to address the opioid epidemic and increase access to substance use treatment and services,” said Governor Evers.

There are 12 listening sessions that include opportunities for partners and stakeholders and the general public to weigh-in with their thoughts on how to invest these dollars for maximum benefit for those most affected by opioid use. After registering, you will receive a confirmation email with information on how to join the Zoom meeting.

Register in advance by following the link for the Southeastern Region on Wednesday, Jan. 26, 1:00-2:30 p.m., at <https://dhs.wisconsin.gov/meeting/register/vJIsceCvqzsvGCxXzpnXsXU62O4Q19mG1PA>.

Evening sessions scheduled for anyone will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 18, 6-7:30 p.m., at <https://dhs.wisconsin.gov/meeting/register/vJItc-CvrDgoHSTz-VBLxKLwGgWJYNB4MFe8>; and on Tuesday, Jan. 25, 6- 7:30 p.m., at <https://dhs.wisconsin.gov/meeting/register/vJIsceOugrTkoH8t-yVb48FJmGAjtX3sOqLE>.

Ideas can also be submitted through a survey at <https://www.surveygizmo.com/s3/6653170/Opioid-Settlement-Public-Input>. The deadline is Monday, Jan. 31.

“We will take the ideas and information from each listening session and use it to determine the best regional and statewide approaches to invest in with future settlement funds,” said DHS Director of Opioid Initiatives, Paul Krupski. “These funds will create opportunities for DHS to provide additional support for new and existing projects going on across Wisconsin to save lives and prevent further harm from opioid misuse.”

The governor and DHS recognize that partners and the public play a huge role in helping to put an end to the state’s opioid crisis.

In August, 2021, DHS announced its collaboration with three healthcare providers to pilot a hub and spoke model to provide integrated services for BadgerCare Plus and Medicaid members for rapid access to comprehensive addiction and mental health treatment, primary care, and other needed supports to assist their recovery.

The most recent data compiled by DHS shows that in 2020 there were 3,027 emergency room visits for opioid overdoses and 1,227 deaths.

“Opioid overdoses are avoidable,” Krupski concluded. “Prevention is effective, harm reduction saves lives, treatment works, and recovery is possible. Through these listening sessions we have the opportunity to hear directly from people solutions and ideas that are appropriate for their communities.”

Two Campbellsport High School students found a way to turn something they love into a school activity. Seniors Jordan Muche and Bryce Retzer were the force behind the new CHS Ice Fishing Club. Talking with friends from St. Mary's Springs, the two found out that school had a club and thought it would be a great thing to bring to CHS. A meeting was held toward the beginning of the school year to see how many students would be interested. In total, the team has around 37 members. Some of the boys and girls have experience ice fishing and some have never fished before.

About 25 Village of Campbellsport residents and business owners came out to voice their opinions on the need for a village administrator in Campbellsport when a public hearing was held January 16. The meeting was held to discuss whether to add another referendum question to the April ballot. The question would be authorizing the village to raise the tax levy in order to hire a village administrator. On a 6-0 vote, board members decided not to do so. The board didn't think there was enough time to properly research the item. It will continue to be discussed.

The Campbellsport Jaycees donated $2,400 to the Campbellsport Fire Department at the January 12 Jaycee meeting. The donation will be used to help replace A.E.D. at three area businesses - True Value, Piggly Wiggly, and King Pin Lanes.

Campbellsport High School students passed the SolidWorks Certified Associates exam this past week. The CSWA is a three-hour industry benchmark exam that tests students' ability to create 3D solid models of parts, work with advanced geometric construction, and complete and evaluate complex assemblies. Brittini MacGregor of Campbellsport says she is not your conventional-looking student. She had attended Campbellsport schools for most of her life, but wasn't happy by the time she was in high school. She said she made it through three days of her sophomore year before leaving school and looked for alternatives. She found the perfect match attending the on-line IQ Academies at Wisconsin, an alternative school set up through the Waukesha School District. Brittini and other students, some who cannot attend regular school because of scheduling conflicts, can work when they are able.

Several water pipes broke in the plumbing of the new school addition during the weekend cold snap. Fortunately no damage was done, according to a report by Administrator Leo Lang to the school board at its regular meeting Monday night. Custodians took Sunday to make the repairs. In almost every incident, the broken pipes were in ceiling installations for the lack of insulation. The plumbing contractor was contacted for consultation Monday.

Dues will be $10 for the first year, and the dues will be announced at each annual meeting.

KEWASKUM'S DAYS GONE BY5 Years Ago
January 26, 2017

Katie Wilson grew up snowboarding at Sunburst Winter Sports Park in Kewaskum. She said with Sunburst she could quadruple her park runs compared to kids on the west or east coasts. The 19-year-old finished 27th in the World Cup Boardercross event and eighth in the team boardercross event during the World Cup competition held January 19-22 in Solitude, Utah.

There will be no ice skating in Kewaskum this winter after all. It hasn't been for lack of trying. In November, the village board had approved building a temporary ice skating rink in River Hill Park. However, when staff went to build the rink at the designated spot, they found that the ground was not level. The village tabled the plans until the village park and recreation committee could start deliberations to determine a new location. Meanwhile the Kiwanis Club and the Kewaskum Area Chamber of Commerce attempted to build a temporary rink on private property. Again, the ground was not level.

Although temperatures have been hovering around the freezing mark, the Village of Kewaskum's Park and Recreation Committee is thinking about warm weather. At last week's meeting, the committee members discussed investing about $24,000 on shade structures and inflatable amenities for the swim pond.

In 1967, a group of Kewaskum women got together and decided to form a club with a mission of helping the community. The Kewaskum Junior Women's Club was born. The club has donated nearly $78,000 to the community and members have volunteered thousands of hours over the past 50 years.

Kewaskum High School and Middle School students will now be able to identify early signs of stroke and heart attack. The school district will use the American Heart Association's CPR in school training program as part of the health curriculum in grades seven through 12. A law goes into effect with the 2017-18 school year requiring CPR instruction to be taught to students in those grades. Wisconsin is one of 31 states which has passed laws to require hands-only CPR training.

Brian Niznansky of TMJ4 visited i4Learning school to present a program about winter weather.

The Kewaskum Fire Fighters Association was recently honored by the Kewaskum Village Board with a proclamation read by Village President Kevin Scheunemann at a recent board meeting. According to the proclamation, the Kewaskum Volunteer Fire Department was formed in 1884, which led to the creation of the Fire Fighters Association in 2006.

Grace Merkt and Dalton Espitia are the Kewaskum Kiwanis January Students of the Month.

The Lady Indians earned two victories last week: the first was a 50-30 win over Ripon on January 19 in an East Central Conference game. Three Kewaskum players scored in double figures - seniors Hailey Herriges (11) and Mikayla Dogs (12), and freshman Maxine Paulowske (11). The Lady Indians defeated Cedar Grove in an away non-conference game 33-24 two days later.

Coach Don Gruber called the first 10 minutes of the game between his Kewaskum Indians and Berlin good until the host school went to a 1-3-1 zone defense, which had his team struggling. The Kewaskum boys lost the East Central Conference game 67-52.

At the wrestling meet in Plymouth on January 18, three Kewaskum wrestlers completed perfect East Central Conference seasons as the team beat the Panthers 40-34. The perfect 6-0 seasons belong to Nathaniel Droese (106), Braden Maertz (126), and Alex Deheck (138).

A 20-year-old musician from Waukesha is accused of having sexual intercourse with a 15-year-old Kewaskum girl. The two are believed to have met on the popular internet networking site Myspace. Randall Shesto has been charged with second degree sexual assault of a child in Sheboygan County Court. The charge is a class C felony. WBKV radio reported Monday that the teen snuck out of her home to meet Shesto on January 12. Authorities were alerted to the assault after Shesto and the teen reportedly had sex, and Shesto later crashed his vehicle. From the accident, Shesto has received a citation for inattentive driving, according to court records. The lead singer of a band called Nailwounds was back in court January 24 for his preliminary hearing. More information was not readily available for the article.

Residents will have another opportunity to voice their concerns regarding revisions to a state-mandated facilities plan regarding this village's wastewater treatment facility. After paying for a second opinion and a few meetings, the village board approved sending a revised, more economical facilities plan to the public at the January 22 meeting. The second opinion cost the taxpayers $24,934, which is less than the $60,000 trustees thought they might have to pay for it.

Work is nearly complete on a $3.44 million project that has seen the Village of Kewaskum constructing a pumphouse adjacent to the village's fire station. Department of Public Works Director Jerry Gilles stated that favorable weather and cooperation of neighbors has moved the project along. Transitioning from the old pumphouse to the new could start as early as April. The transition will proceed in two stages. After the new pumphouse is fully operational and the old station is deactivated, the project to retrofit the former pumphouse into bathrooms for River Hill Park will commence.

Pastor Edwin Fredrich will deliver his final services at St. Lucas Lutheran Church January 27 and 28. He has accepted a Divine Call to Belle Plaine, MN.

At its celebration event, campaign chair Scott Lopas announced that United Way of Washington County raised $1,062,272 or 96 percent of its goal during the 2006 campaign.

A.J. Reicher, a seventh grade student at Kewaskum Middle School, won the school-level competition of the National Geographic Bee on January 15. By moving on to the next round, he has a chance at a $25,000 college scholarship.

For the third straight year, the Kewaskum wrestling team claimed the championship at the Waupun Invitational, beating second place West Bend East by 8.5 points. Of the five Kewaskum wrestlers who advanced to the finals, four of them earned the championship of the weight class. They were Eric Ogi (145), Cody Seibel (160), Jake Turowski (189), and P.J. Krueger (215). Placing second at 103 was Andrew Haugen.

A son, Evan Scott-Gordon, was born January 7 to Misty and Scott Stortz of Kewaskum. A son, Alden Luke, was born January 12 to Melanie and Bryan Moody of Kewaskum.

Edward E. Connors, principal of Kewaskum Community High School, submitted his resignation to the board of education Wednesday morning, effective immediately. He announced his resignation at a one-and-one-half hour conference in which he told of problems that exist in the school that led to his decision. He interviewed for the position in the spring of 1969 and was told of several existing problems but still accepted the position when it was offered to him. Connors recently suspended two male students for printing a school paper in which they ridiculed other students, Connors' family and Connors. They had also printed and sold 264 "Ed The Head" cards. Approximately 150 students staged a "sit-in" on Monday and 95 to 100 did the same on Tuesday to protest the suspensions.

Members of the board of education voted unanimously Monday night to adopt split shifting for grades seven-12, starting with the 1972-73 school year. They also unanimously approved a one-story addition to the high school and borrowing $150,000 to finance it. Split shifting is seen by the board as the only way to go after three defeated attempts to pass a referendum for building expansion. Grades 10-12 will attend from 7:30 a.m. until about 12:30 p.m. and grades seven-nine from about 10:30 a.m. until about 3:45 p.m. The proposed addition is needed during the overlap period when all students are in attendance.

Veronica Beisbier, 79, Kewaskum, passed away January 18. Arthur G. Bunkelman Jr., 51, Eden, passed away January 13. William Benson, 55, Long Lake, passed away January 17. William H. Schultz, 79, Campbellsport, passed away January 16. Arthur F. Driessel, 59, formerly of Milwaukee, passed away January 10.

Wrestlers Defeat NFDL/Springs, Showdown with Lomira this Thursday

DAN HEISDORF

ASST. WRESTLING COACH, CHS

It was Youth/Alumni Night on Thursday, Jan. 13, on a night wherein former Campbellsport wrestling head coach Gerald "Sarge" Marking was honored, as the Cougar wrestlers defeated the North Fond du Lac/St. Mary Springs cooperative in front of a large crowd by a score of 60-21.

There were only four matches wrestled in the dual due to illness and injuries on both sides, as the Cougars won three of the four.

Ben Timm got his first varsity action of the year and started things off, but lost a close 9-7 decision to Jackson Youwer who came into the night with 18 wins.

Kyle Murphy was next at 195 pounds and got a couple takedowns before pinning Peter Skiff in the first period. Murphy was the first wrestler to start a new tradition at Campbellsport: He got to run over and hit the "Cougar Gong." Any varsity wrestler who gets a home pin gets a mallet and gets to slam the gong.

Next up was Sam Koth, who also earned two quick first period takedowns before pinning Owen Rohlf and getting his turn to hit the gong.

The last match was JJ Ksioszk who put his opponent's shoulders to the mat in 1:15, and he closed out the dual with one more banging of the gong.

The Cougars are now 5-0 in conference, which sets up a big showdown for Thursday, Jan. 20, in Lomira, which is also undefeated (5-0).

The Cougars offer the following message to fans: "We need to fill the stands with blue and gold! Let's make this away dual feel more like a home dual."

On Saturday, Jan. 22, the varsity wrestlers will travel to the 21-team Sheboygan North Invite.

Varsity Competes at Valders Scramble

Saturday, Jan. 15, eight Cougar wrestlers traveled to Valders to compete in the 12-team event and finished in fourth place.

At 126, Ostin Blanchard won his fourth straight tournament and improved to 32-0 on the season. He had his way with all five opponents, winning by technical fall all five matches.

At 220 pounds, Joseph Volz won his first tournament of the year. He used four pins to get to the championship match against Caleb Letson of Neenah. Letson beat Volz at the On the Water tournament earlier this season, but he would not be denied this time. Volz used a couple takedowns, a reversal and a nearfall to beat Letson, 8-2.

Drake Mullenbach would finish in second place, losing a close 3-1 decision to Mason Carpenter (27-4) in the championship.

Sam Koth finished in third, as he went 3-2 on the day.

JJ Ksioszk and Kyle Murphy would finish in fourth, Chris Meyer took fifth and Brock Bentz finished in seventh.

Our family's decision? Stepping up their safety.

→ Because COVID-19 can be serious for kids, too.

Getting COVID-19 can have real consequences for a child's health, from a hospital stay to living with "long COVID" symptoms. Taking simple steps as a family—like wearing a mask in class or getting kids the free COVID-19 vaccine for ages 5 and up—can help kids stay safe and in school.

My name is Gracie Hughes, and I am a senior at Kewaskum High School. Throughout the past few years, I have strived to accomplish many great things in both my academics and extracurriculars.

The extracurriculars I have actively participated in include Student Council, Academic Bowl, Junior Class Officers and Senior Class Officers. These clubs have also allowed me to gain leadership positions, as I was a former member of the Student Council Executive Board and am currently the Vice President of the Class of 2022. I have played a large part in making the high school experience memorable for my peers and myself.

In addition to these activities, I also am a customer service representative at Healing Elements Day Spa and have been for the last year and a half. Through promoting products and services at the spa, I have been able to get a head start in my marketing career. Next year I will be attending UW-Whitewater as a Chancellor's Scholar and Marketing major.

I am excited to continue growing as a young woman with the people who love me by my side. I want to give special thanks to my family, friends and teachers who helped me get through these last few years and pushed me to achieve amazing things.

Check It Out!

LORI KREIS
KEWASKUM LIBARIAN

In 2021 I read approximately 200 books. I don't have a great way of tracking my checkouts to get an accurate count. You would think as a librarian I would have stupendous organizational skills and maintain a comprehensive reading log. I do like to organize – just ask me to locate something in my basement storage room. However, meticulously tracking my reading is something I have not been able to keep up with but it's a new year and I am adding it as one of my goals.

It is not like there are a lack of tools to help with this. I used the Monarch Catalog to get an idea of how many books I read last year. This will maintain your reading history if you opt into it. You can opt in yourself through your account or ask one of our friendly staff to do it for you. Unfortunately, the list is not easy to manipulate to get the data you may want. You can see the list and sort it but limiting it to format and checkout dates is not an option. But it is very helpful if you want to know if you have read something previously.

I admire our library users who come in with handwritten reading journals. These can be notebooks or separate sheets of paper with lists important to the reader. Many have them sorted by author and series and check off each book once read. One problem with these is the chance they might get lost. I have found reading logs in the library at times. Usually, I know who they belong to, and the patron is always thankful we found it. I think losing this list would be comparable to losing one's wallet. So much information that would be difficult to replace.

There are many online resources for tracking reading. This can be very convenient as they are readily at hand, and it is difficult to lose your information unless you forget your password. Some of them offer the ability to scan ISBNs to add to your lists such as Beanstack, the tool we have been using for Summer Reading challenges the past two years and will continue this summer.

One online tracking site I am recommending is Good Reads. I am sure many of you are familiar with this resource, but for those that aren't, it is a website and app you use for more than just a reading log. You can make recommendations, read reviews, share your titles with friends on social media, join challenges and discover what to read next. I am attempting this year to start tracking my checkouts on Good Reads. I signed up for the 100-book challenge and so far, have five entered, not a bad start.

Stop in and let's talk about how you monitor what you read. I would love learning what works for you.

Bayou Getaway

MARK WALTERS
COLUMNIST

Nature has a way of setting the pace for what many of us do in life, and that can be good, bad or in between.

This week, I am writing to you about a hunting, camping and canoeing adventure that I went on with my 20-year-old daughter, Selina, and my brother, Tom, who lives near Denham Springs, La. The three of us spent a week camped in the Delta National Forest, which is in west-central Mississippi near Rolling Forks.

This area could be compared to Wisconsin's Buffalo County, as it is managed for large whitetail deer and has them; bucks have to have a 15-inch inside spread or a beam of at least 18-inches in length.

THURSDAY, DEC. 30

HIGH: 81, LOW: 59

Three of the seven days of this hunt we experienced record highs and that made for very comfortable camping. Any form of hiking, though, which we did often, was a drencher when it came to sweat.

We had hoped to hit the rut and, though we did find some scrapes, the rut was put on hold.

Each morning, Selina and I would canoe in the dark through the cypress trees, and then we would hike to our stands; sometimes together, sometimes to separate locations. It was incredibly cool to either drop Selina off in the dark or wait for her in my canoe in the dark after a day's hunt.

I don't care who you are, after helping three boys learn how to become independent in the woods, it seems you worry more about the daughter. I learned on this trip there simply is very little reason to worry, anymore.

This morning, I had been sitting for maybe three hours, which I had canoed for 20 minutes, and then hiked for another 20 to get to.

I heard a group of hunters coming my way on a dirt path, and I knew it was dog hunters. When they passed me, I knew they would be setting up a hunt and a wise hunter stays on his or her stand when they run them. When dog hunters move deer and hogs, there can be action and, in this situation, Selina saw a buck and two doe. The buck's neck was covered with vines, probably from where it was hiding, but was not large enough to harvest.

Tom had two deer come flying by him, and I had a doe run by me but, up to that point in the morning, none of had seen a deer.

I decided I was going to meet this group of nine hunters and am I glad that I did.

At first, I walked up to maybe a 16-year-old boy, and I could tell he was skittish about talking to me, but he could soon see I was harmless.

Eventually the entire group, which are from The Delta Camp, came over by me, and we had a great talk. There were kids in this group as young as five, and the man that I spoke the most with – and have many times since – was Dustin Hariel; he is from Poplarville, Miss.

These guys have a camp nearby and were they ever interesting and friendly. Their dogs names were Martha and Mary, and they were each three-quarters beagle and one-quarter Walker.

Their method: An area is surrounded, one hunter walks into it with the dogs and releases them, and the hunters use shotguns with Double 00 Buckshot.

Many deer were moved on this drive, but none were harvested.

One of the first things that Dustin told me is that we could not have hit worse conditions for our hunt, which I already knew. Dustin had harvested a beautiful 10-point buck earlier in the week, and we had a solid conversation where I was asked to come to their camp, and they asked if I knew anything about turkey hunting in Wisconsin (as in: how they could do it). To readers: If anyone could help them out, I would work with you on it.

Dustin is in the earth-moving business and a pastor at his church. What I truly loved about these guys is the gazillion pictures Dustin sent me where his boys are harvesting turkey, rabbits and lots of fish. In other words: old school parenting and outdoor-oriented people.

Another very interesting part of this trip was the Asian carp. They were everywhere when we were canoeing and until you get used to them, when canoeing in the dark, they can scare the heck out of you, as they let you get real close before they jump high in the air.

We really wanted to whack some deer and hogs but not a one of us ever took the gun off "safety."

What put a smile on my face was, at the end of the week, Selina told me that she wants to do this her final two Christmas breaks at UW-Stevens Point.

I will get good at this with time and when nature allows!

Remembering Sarge with Those Who Knew Him Best

A memorial for CHS wrestling coach Gerald Marking was held on Jan. 13

CLARICE CASE
JOURNALIST

Gerald "Sarge" Marking would have been proud to see Campbellsport wrestling beat the North Fond du Lac/St. Mary's Springs co-op team, 60-21, in last Thursday night's home dual at Campbellsport High School (CHS).

In addition to beginning a new wrestling tradition and welcoming back alumni and youth, the community came together to remember the man who started it all: Marking.

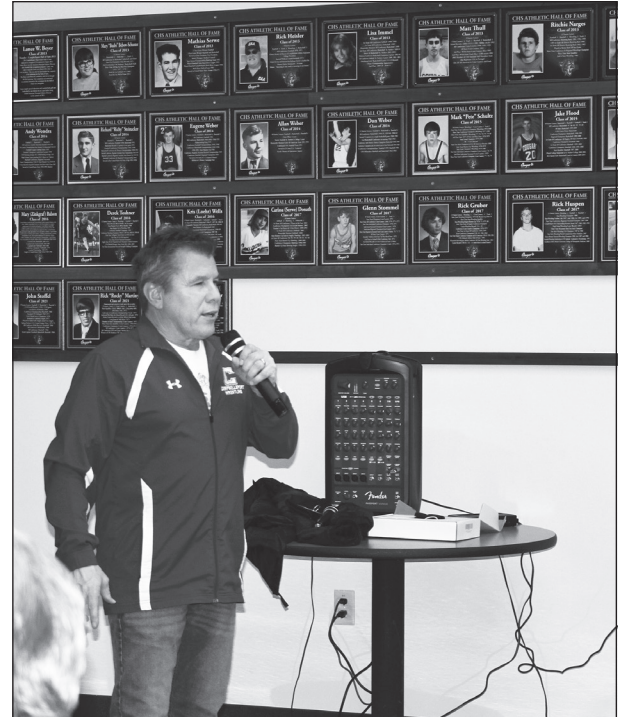

Marking passed away on June 24, 2021, and last week's memorial was nearly one year in the making as CHS wrestling leaders tracked down former athletes and students of Marking's for the January 13 assembly.

Marking began teaching technology education and driver's education at CHS in 1963. He first started coaching junior-varsity football before he was asked to coach wrestling.

"Sarge was not our first wrestling coach," confessed Bill Breitzman. "The first wrestling pair was Al Erickson and Bruce Stein, my senior classmates."

Marking was teaching the senior physical education class when the students told him they wanted to wrestle, but he had no experience. He appointed Erickson and Stein to team captains and told them once they had a team they would begin weightlifting, followed by wrestling.

When the class said they were ready for some competition, Marking called up Joe Harlow, the Kewaskum wrestling coach, to set up a time.

Campbellsport won five of the 12 matches that day against a Kewaskum team that was reigning conference champions. The experience day sparked confidence in the kids, as they were ready to form a real team.

The next year, Marking received approval to do just that.

After a wrestling camp in Colorado Springs where he learned how to perform a takedown from participating in the demonstration (in addition to a lot of reading), Marking was ready to go for the Cougar's inaugural season.

If you are wondering how Marking got the nickname "Sarge," he was a member of the United States Army Reserves for 26 years.

"Sarge picked up the name 'Sarge' from us," said Breitzman. "He always had to get to his meeting right after seventh hour class... He would walk out of school with his army boots and his fatigues and hat. So, guys would see that and, well, you got the name 'Sarge,' and it stayed with him, but he seemed to kind of like that."

Breitzman, who was one of several speakers at the memorial, had many stories from his time as a student and teacher at Campbellsport to share about Marking.

Former wrestling coaches Dave Cohen of Fond du Lac, Mark Peterson of Campbellsport and Dave Meyer of Lomira all had stories to tell of Marking.

Meyer, who, unfortunately, could not be in attendance for the memorial, shared with this journalist his relationship with Marking.

"My relationship with Gerry Marking had a rude beginning,” he admitted. “My first year at Lomira, we traveled to Campbellsport and got beat something like 66 to 2. Clearly, if we were going to compete with these guys, we needed to get better, and, over time, we did.”

Meyer continued, helping paint a picture of Sarge the coach:

“Gerry wasn’t rude... He was the ultimate sportsman. He talked plainly. If he complimented one of our kids, I took that as very high praise. He wanted better competition in the conference for his team, and he would tell us to ‘get better wrestlers’ if we wanted to beat them. In competion, Gerry was intense... working his wrestler, working the ref, always yelling something. I think I learned more from watching Gerry coach than anyone else.”

“One of my favorite memories of Gerry happened at the state tournament in 1990. Ryan Mielkie [of Lomira] had just won the state title, and Gerry came down out of the stands and was one of the first to congratulate us. I was really touched, because he was happy for our achievement, and I felt he was happy for me and the work we had put in.”

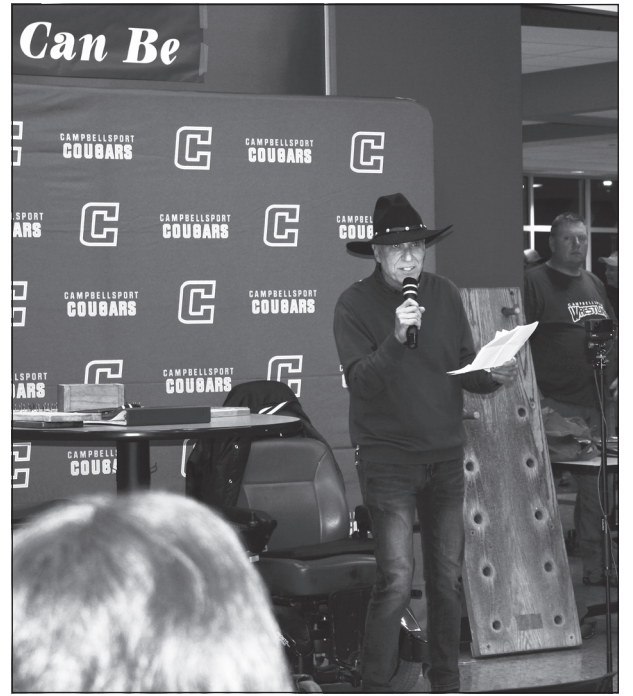

Rees Candee, former wrestler and Arizona resident who flew in for the memorial, believed the three ingredients in Marking’s secret recipe for success were conditioning, fundamentals, and energy.

“Those are the three things that I remember that gave us [a] competitive edge,” Candee said. “His belief in athletes and in the students was a constant. If we were willing to do the work, he believed in you. He taught us how to believe in ourselves. That’s no little deal, there. And he did it one by one, over and over again. Every season, every year for generations; he lifted generations in this community.”

The man that would continue what Marking had started many years ago was Peterson.

“Sarge handed the keys over to me, and then I ran her for the next 24 years. and I had a blast trying to keep the tradition alive,” Peterson said. “That’s the thing, he said to me when he retired: ‘Mark, keep this thing going.’

“And I took a lot of pride in that, and I tried to keep things rolling, tried to keep the streak going – the conference streak – and just be a wrestling power in the state of Wisconsin and try to keep that tradition alive here.”

Rees Candee speaks during Marking’s memorial. Candee flew from Arizona to honor his former coach.

Peterson suggested the school district take the step in permanently recognizing Marking’s legacy to the school and community by naming the new gymnasium after him.

“I think you’ll see by tonight, just all the people that came out, that tradition is alive,” Peterson said. “Many remarkable people here wrestled for Sarge, or they knew them, or they had him for a teacher. I don’t think you’ll ever hear a bad word spoken about Sarge. He just had an unbelievable heart that would help anybody, and he wanted you to be good, and he wanted you to be a champion, and he was going to make something out of you.”

That fact has those in the media, and in U.S. Speed Skating circles, champing at the bit to see Stolz skate; terms like “phenom,” “unicorn” and “savior” have all been used in local and national articles to describe Stolz’s meteoric rise through the ranks of the country’s best long track speed skaters.

However, the “Kewaskum-cool” teenager (he is exceptionally well-spoken, polite and confident), who will turn 18 in May, shows no signs that the pressure is too much.

“I was just happy to make the team, honestly,” said Stolz, who – in the true form of a dedicated athlete – was also quick to critique his own record-breaking performance that secured his Olympic qualification. “It wasn’t the best race. I think it could have been a little bit better.”

When asked where he could have made improvements, Stolz jumps into it quickly, almost reliving the moments in his memory when he knew he would lose fractions of a second.

“I just had a couple problems going into the turns; the straightaway count wasn’t quite right, so I had to slow down the tempo before I entered [the turns],” said Stolz, who explained in simpler terms that he, essentially, got out of rhythm while entering the track’s rounded left turns during the course of his record-breaking Olympic-qualifying runs.

While he and his peers have little time to prepare for Beijing – U.S. Olympic teams will leave as early as next week for the games that begin on Feb. 4 – Stolz has spent a good portion of his young life out on the ice, as he began skating in his family’s backyard when he was just five years old.

“We were just watching the 2010 [Vancouver] Olympics, and we were watching the short track races – watching Apolo [Ohno] go around,” said Stolz, who said the excitement of the sport inspired his family to run outside and convert their frozen pond into a racing track. “We decided to shovel off a track on the pond and just started skating with my family.”

Enamored by the sport, Stolz involvement increased exponentially in just the next few years, and by the time he was 10, Stolz was already eyeballing 2022 as his first chance to qualify for the Olympics.

Following the encouragement of his father to hone in on a particular hobby as opposed to over-extending himself, Stolz had the benefit of, early in his life, finding a passion in skating that kept him hungry for more. He and his siblings are also homeschooled by their mother, Jane, which has afforded an element of autonomy over his personal and training time.

SUBMITTED

In 2018, Stolz was 13 and below the cutoff age to qualify for the Olympics, but he attended the U.S. Speed Skating Trials as a spectator, nevertheless, and watched gold-medalist Shani Davis qualify for what ended up being his final Olympic games.

Post-career, Davis – who was a Chicago-native and held a residence in Milwaukee throughout portions of his skating career – ended up a coach for U.S. Speed Skating, and Stolz, with a unique combination of size, speed and potential, quickly became one of Davis’s most promising pupils.

Davis was just one of several influential coaches during Stolz’s budding career, however, as he’s had a proverbial “who’s who” of prominent skating coaches and personalities known locally and nationally including Jeff Brand, Mary Mane, Al Johnson, Mike Witty and Bob Fenn.

When Davis relocated a few years ago, Stolz was looking for a new trainer, and he connected with Bob Corby – former Team U.S.A Speed Skating Olympic (’80-’84) coach who helped shape the careers of Wisconsinites Bonnie Blair and Dan Jansen.

Needless to say, Corby – a Milwaukee-area resident – knows talented skaters when he sees them.

“I met the [Stolz] family and Jordan when he was 12... in Madison,” recalled Corby, who said Stolz’s coach at the time, Bob Fenn, introduced them at a short track competition.

That first encounter was largely circumstantial, as Corby would not get directly involved in Stolz’s skating career until roughly 2019.

Corby got a call from Stolz after Davis relocated – the two-time Olympic-gold-medalist accepted a position in China – which left Stolz without a tutor just a few short years before his first Olympic trials.

“[Jordan] called me and asked me if I would coach him,” said Corby, who felt like it was impossible to decline. “This is a 15-year-old kid calling me on the telephone asking me to coach him. How can I say, ‘No.’?”

He did not, and Corby said Stolz made the Junior World Team that year, but was exhibiting high-level ability for someone not even old enough to drive.

“He was showing a lot of talent,” said Corby, who ramped up Stolz’s training regiment the following summer with the hopes of consistently logging Olympic-level times in the 500m and 1,000m races. “That’s when he really took off; dedicating a summer to training for speed skating.”

Corby, who, as of 2020, is enjoying his sixth decade of involvement in the sport, said a talent like Jordan Stolz is evident immediately and does not come along that often.

“I saw Casey FitzRandolph [2002 Olympic gold, 500m] when he was a five-year-old, and I knew right away that he was going to be good,” said Corby. “You’re watching a kid’s basic technique: Do they skate efficiently; what’s the push angle?”

Once you study the sport for a long time, you see it right away. Jordan has had that, he’s always had that.”

Stolz’s listed height is just more than six-feet, but he, obviously, appears taller than that on the ice in skates. He has markedly long arms and legs – an attribute that helps immensely in his “line of work” – and he looks as svelte in his Team U.S.A skinsuit as a skater 15 years his senior.

“He’s built like a really, really good speed skater,” said Corby, who added that dedication combined with genetics is often the winning formula for success on the ice. “You can have all that stuff, and then not train very hard and end up being nothing, but [Jordan] has it all. He trains extremely hard.”

Of course, the mental makeup of an athlete is as vital as the physical, and Corby said there was a reason media outlets were quick to point out Stolz’s calm demeanor: It’s unusual for someone to have all the tools this early in their career.

“He’s got a really low-key personality,” explained Corby. “He’s focused on going faster all the time. He doesn’t let stuff bother him. If he has a bad race, he tries to learn from it. If he has a great race, he says, ‘Okay, how do I go faster?’ He’s really focused, and that’s kind of rare. You don’t get that all the time, especially with a 17-year-old.”

When asked where the limit to Stolz’s career was, Corby did not hesitate to answer:

“The sky,” he said, with an honest laugh, pointing to Wisconsin’s storied history in producing Olympic medalists in the sport. “We seem to always find a diamond [in Wisconsin], and they do extremely well. It sure works, here.”

For Stolz and his family, the shiny rock that is Jordan’s skating career was not simply discovered plowing the proverbial fields one day, it was instead polished slowly and meticulously over time, with everyone making sacrifices in the pursuit of Jordan’s dream.

Jordan’s father Dirk provided a list of those who had been instrumental to his son’s growth, including Jordan’s grandfather Werner Stolz, as well as Joe Kudlata and Steve Gorton, all three of which helped drive Jordan to practices and events when his parents were not able to. He also credited Mike Greenland for providing Jordan with skating and biking equipment.

“There’s been so many people that have helped Jordan,” said Dirk Stolz, adding that he still works third shift as a police officer to better-accommodate his son’s ambitions.

Now, on the precipice of Olympic history and glory, Jordan Stolz’s extended group of supporters has, indubitably, grown by the thousands. The Town of Wayne and Stolz’s neighboring hometown village, Kewaskum, are sure to wave Jordan’s flag and sing praises of support as the “local boy done good” chases his dream of Olympic gold.

While the excitement locally is palpable, it is important to remember that this is Stolz’s first time at The Games, and he is historically young for this stage. While those around him know he’s capable of medaling, at age 17, fans of the sport and of Stolz should often be reminded that there can be plenty more where this came from.

Like Stolz plans to, let us all just enjoy the ride.

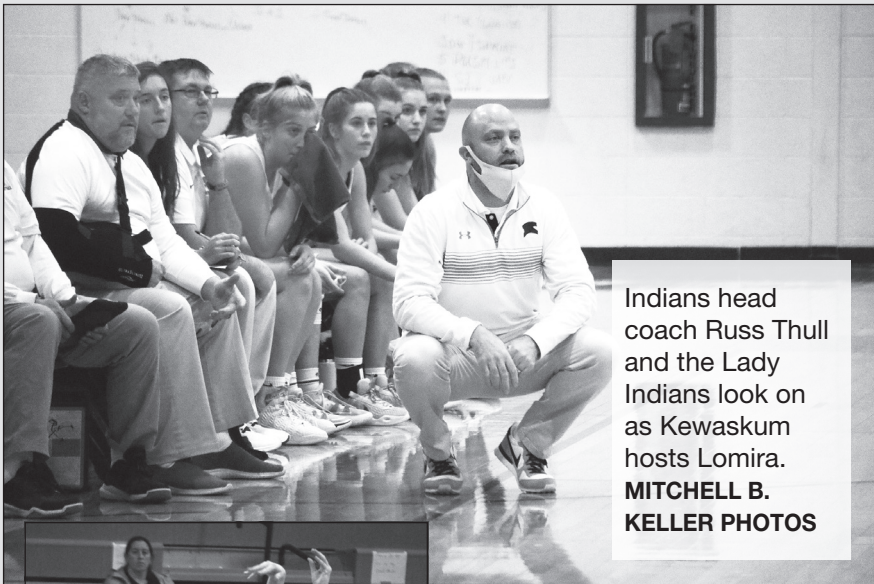

“It’s a good feeling to be in the legacy of [Wisconsin’s speed skaters]. I just try to do the best I can and see where it goes,” said Stolz.

Stolz will compete in the 500m and 1,000m races at the Beijing Games. Men’s speed skating events will start as early as Feb. 6, with the 2022 Olympic Games being broadcast on NBCUniversal channels and websites.

ly rigorous classes as I could, being involved in more than 10 school extracurriculars, and working at Schloemer Law Firm.
I am glad to say I have had great academic success, which consists of maintaining a 4.0 grade point average to date and being recognized as AP Scholar with Distinction by CollegeBoard. However, my proudest achievements stem from my extracurricular involvement.
Not only am I involved in more than 10 extracurriculars, but I hold leadership positions in six of these activities. I have had the honor of being selected as a Junior Class Officer and the Senior Class President for those respective years. I was also voted to be the Key Club president and National Honor Society president this year, and I am a Peers4Peers committee head and the Mock Trial team captain.
Of all the activities I am a part of, my participation in Mock Trial is what I am most proud of. I have been a varsity attorney for the past three years, a State Qualifier with my team in 2020, and a recipient of nine Best Attorney Awards so far. I am extremely grateful for my experience, which I will carry with me throughout my life, and I have been able to spend the last four years creating new friends and improving upon many skills.
My high school experience was not only limited to these activities, but I am extremely excited to begin the next stage of my life by pursuing higher education. I am not entirely sure of what my major will be, nor am I sure of what college I will be attending, however I have applied to the University of Chicago, Northwestern University, Boston University, Northeastern University, and the University of Wisconsin-Madison. My ultimate goal is to attend law school, and potentially complete a Master of Laws degree as well, in order to pursue a career as an attorney.

Stoltz, a member of the Warriors men's basketball team, averaged a team-high 17 points per game last week. The sophomore guard went 17-for-20 from the free throw line for an 85 percent clip.

Each week throughout the academic year, a Wisconsin Lutheran College student-athlete is acknowledged for his or her accomplishments from the previous week. Warrior of the Week is meant to acknowledge a student's dedication to excellence in their given sport as well as inside the classroom.
