Help 'Alleviate the Pain in Ukraine' by Giving to CARE International

MMC STAFF

Since Russia first invaded Ukraine on Feb. 24, more than two million refugees have fled the war-torn country in search of safety.

The United Nations warned: That number could rise to as many as five million, making it one of the largest refugee crises since World War II.

Thousands of newly displaced Ukrainians are without shelter, food, water or safety.

As the conflict continues with no clear end in sight, the humanitarian need of the Ukrainian people grows daily.

Humanitarian organizations, like CARE International, are stepping up to help those caught in the crossfire.

Multi Media Channels (MMC), the parent company of the Campbellsport News and Kewaskum Statesman, looks to its readers to join in the efforts of CARE by making a donation. Your donation of any amount can help get urgently needed supplies and support to those families in crisis as they attempt to rebuild their lives.

Donations to the Ukraine Crisis Fund can be made quick and easy through the CARE website at my.care.org.

Dozens gathered Feb. 27 in Ashwaubenon to show solidarity for the Ukrainian people, calling for peace and an end of the Russian assault.

No Leads on Ash Wednesday Thefts

MITCHELL BRADLEY KELLER
ACTING EDITOR

The Kewaskum Police Department (KPD) is still investigating reported thefts from the morning of Ash Wednesday, March 2, during which four cars were burglarized outside Holy Trinity Catholic Church during the congregation's annual holiday mass.

"No update at this time," said KPD Chief Tom Bishop in the week following the alleged thefts. "We followed up on every possible lead to attempt to ID the vehicle or driver, but have been unsuccessful at this time."

'Do What I Can' Olympian, Stolz, Reflects on First Winter Games

Jordan Stolz returned to the Kewaskum/Campbellsport area just last week after nearly two months competing in international speed skating events

MITCHELL BRADLEY KELLER

It's been a long almost two months for Town of Wayne resident Jordan Stolz, 17, who just competed in his first-ever Olympic Winter Games – he placed 13th in the 500m long track race and 14th in the 1,000m – and the U.S. speed skater announced he was happy to take some time for himself after leaving for Beijing, China all the way back in late January.

"The first thing I did was lay in bed for a couple days," said Stolz, adding that after the Olympics he participated in the World Sprints competition in Norway. At that competition, Stolz completed the second day of racing with a fifth overall placement due in part to a fifth and fourth place finish in the 500m and 1,000m, respectively.

Saint Patrick's Day

Dear Reader,

Unsurprisingly, St. Patrick's Day is celebrated in more countries than any other national festival. Festivities generally involve parades and parties. Everyone celebrating dons green attire, whether it be a hat, belt, shirt, socks, or something more creative. The day itself is a religious and cultural event held on March 17th to commemorate the death in 461 of Saint Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland.

that St. Patrick used to explain the Holy Trinity to the Irish. In some places, there is the custom of "drowning the shamrock," which entails putting a shamrock on the bottom of a cup, filling it with a libation, and toasting to Saint Patrick and all present. The shamrock is either swallowed as the cup is emptied or tossed over the shoulder for good luck.

While St. Patrick's day is a good day to celebrate "Irishness" and Irish heritage, it's also important to remember to do it with disciplined moderation. One can still partake in the happy-go-lucky joys of the day. Yet with an eye toward temperance, one can forgo potentially adverse after-effects the following morning like a throbbing head or a stay in the local hoosegow.

PATRICK J. WOOD
PUBLISHER

Author of "Dear Reader" and "Tapestry of Love and Loss"

St. Patrick's feast-day lands smack in the middle of Lent. Lent is historically known for restrictions on alcohol and other sacrifices, but these restrictions usually are lifted for this saint's day to properly share in the drinking tradition of the holiday. These days the celebrations among the Irish diaspora are bigger than those in Ireland itself.

Reader Supports Petersen and Ramthun for Kewaskum School Board

Fellow people of the Kewaskum School District,

These are dangerous times for our children, we must have school board members, administrators and teachers that we, as parents, can trust.

I feel the parents must be the impetus by going to the school board meetings and working with their elected officials.

In 2016, I was at my first Kewaskum school board meeting on behalf of my grandson. It quickly became cantankerous as one attendee, who later introduced himself as Bradley Petersen – a former student and 2015 graduate of the Kewaskum School District – asked the hard questions of the 2016 school board, and he had several members backpedaling.

Bradley was proven right that night, and I saw a fighter; a smart fighter who wouldn't back down because he had facts not opinion.

I went to congratulate him on a fine speech – I found a well-spoken, intelligent young man who simply wanted people held accountable and for the people to care of their community and the children in it.

Bradley Petersen was born and raised right here in Kewaskum. He currently serves as an elder and council member at Immanuel Lutheran Church; he sits on the Town of Scott planning commission; he is currently a Kewaskum school board member; he owns and manages commercial property.

I've known Bradley for [more than] six years now. He is one of a handful of people I trust 100% and believe in wholeheartedly.

High points from Mr. Petersen:

- Education over indoctrination;
- Your voice will never be forgotten;
- Your child will always receive the best education that can be offered;
- Bradley Petersen is fiscally conservative;
- No CRT or 1619 in any classroom. He will ensure your tax dollars are spent effectively and efficiently;
- Bradley will never vote to raise taxes, Identifying "wants" vs "needs";
- He is all in for an all inclusive learning environment;
- Bradley chaired an ad. hoc. committee for curriculum/transparency;

I hope that you all see what I see and vote with me for Bradley Petersen and Tim Ramthun.

A Listing List

AL WISNEFSKE
BROKER/OWNER, LAND &
LEGACY GROUP LLC

The sale price of your property doesn't always equal the amount you get at closing.

Prior to listing a property, I give my sellers a net proceeds sheet that breaks down estimated costs to sell the property.

Approximately one week prior to closing, the title company will send over a preliminary closing statement. This breaks down all of the debits and credits from the buyer and seller.

This will then be reviewed by all parties and prepared to be signed at closing.

A lot of sellers get hung up on commissions. There's so much more that needs to be understood prior to signing on the dotted line.

Here's a list of costs that you can expect on closing day:

- Property Taxes
- Title Insurance
- Wire and Delivery Fees
- Mortgage Payoffs
- Commissions
- Transfer Tax
- Deed Preparation
- Miscellaneous Title Costs and Fees

Have a question about closing costs or would let an estimated net proceeds sheet? Send me an email at: al@landandlegacygroup.com and I can provide that information to you.

G.A. SCHEINOHA
CONTRIBUTOR

"Eagles don't flock," said Ross Perot. "You have to find them one at a time."

Perhaps only birdwatchers can be rightly sure. For example, those who observe them soaring from High Cliff State Park down to Lake Winnebago. But it seems like hawks fly a similar solo sortie. Living my whole life in the country, I've noted and admired every kind of fowl, from sparrows, finches and wrens to raptors; red tails massive bodied enough to snatch a small dog from an inattentive dog person's backyard. Okay, so maybe a wee bit of exaggeration in play there.

Though the sight of a single hawk circling, wheeling through an enormous glide, only to rise again on warm upward thermals is pure poetry in motion, er, flight. On the one hand, a shadow as ominous to his prey as a hooded spectre to humans. On the other, an anatomy stunning in its fine-tuned natural efficiency as a hunter.

This necessity was brought to childhood's dismay during episodes of Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom. When we cheered when the hunted predator of the skies as he drifts in seemingly effortless, slowly tightening orbits above stone quarry's edge or open fields, the point's driven home again. My father told about the descent of an owl, whose wingspan approached the length of a man's outstretched arms, from the cliff face. No exaggeration this time.

Mary Webb in The Spring of Joy described such momentary interaction of man and bird, a glorious instant for us, an agonizingly lengthy interruption from their pursuit of food as "an eternal exposure."

Nothing makes clearer the fact we are just a tiny cog in the intricate gearworks of life. To spend these frequently brief chances with our eyes wide open means we realize – the world doesn't begin and end with us.

Reader Supports Engelking for Kewaskum School Board

It is time!

It's time for an open-minded school board member who knows how to listen and talk to all parents of the Kewaskum School District children, as well as teachers and school leaders. It is time to vote for someone whose actions and words are all about the well-being of children. It is time to put someone on the school board whose background comes with genuine interest in the education of children. It's time to put some balance back on our school board.

Do you think so, too?

If you do, vote for Rhett Engelking on April 5th.

| AS I SEE FIT |

Uncomplicating the Basics

ROY SMALLEY
 CONTRIBUTOR

At a firefighting class I took recently, the instructor reminded us that a closed hose line has a flow rate of zero. If you want results (no more fire) you have to open up that line and get water flowing.

Complicate things all day long with tactics and techniques, but it really all comes down to basics: we need to "get the wet stuff on the red stuff," and zero flow gets you zero result.

That principle also applies not only to life in general, but to fitness specifically: nothing gets you nothing.

Unfortunately, in this age of information overload, it's easy to get so overwhelmed with "tactics and techniques" that we just don't know where to start because we've lost sight of the basics, which are really not that complicated at all.

This week, I want to introduce or re-introduce you to four basic components of fitness that have nothing to do with your weight: Balance, flexibility, muscular strength and cardiovascular endurance.

Balance can be lost over time if we don't actively practice it. When we're younger this can mean reduced performance or increased risk of injury in your favorite sport. Then as we're older, it becomes more difficult to walk unassisted and harder to catch yourself when you trip on the rug or curb.

Like a muscle, balance is improved by working it. Basic balance exercises include standing and looking alternately at the ceiling then the floor, or turning your head side to side like you're watching a tennis match. If need some assistance, practice with your fingertips on a wall or chair, or try the exercises seated.

Intermediate exercises could include walking heel-to-toe or balancing on one foot (try this while you're washing dishes or brushing your teeth!)

Flexibility affects all other areas of fitness. After all, being strong enough to lift a house doesn't mean much if your shoulders are too tight to reach overhead.

Low flexibility can result in chronic pain and recurring injuries, especially in the legs, hips, low back, neck, and shoulders. And as we age, it can become harder or even impossible to do everyday things like reaching into the overhead cabinets.

There's a basic solution: Stretch!
 Move your shoulders by touching your fingertips together behind your head, then behind your low back. For the hips, you can sit in a chair, cross your right ankle over your left knee, and apply a little gentle pressure down on your right knee – feel that awesome stretch in your hip!

Muscular strength, like balance, tends to decline over time, partly because our brain doesn't coordinate signals to our muscles as quickly and partly because we slowly and steadily lose muscle as we age. This process, called "sarcopenia," can start as early as age 30. You might feel plenty strong now, but "if you don't use it, you lose it" – and in 20 years, you might have trouble simply lifting the grocery bags from the floor to the counter.

To maintain strength, work those muscles!
 A key principle of exercise science is adaptation: work muscles, and they will get stronger and denser. You don't even need a gym to start right there at home!

The most basic and useful exercise is the squat: Stand with feet shoulder distance apart, then slowly bend your knees and drop your hips, like sitting back into an "invisible chair." Stand again, then repeat that several times. If you need some assistance at first, do this to an actual chair.

To work those arms, grab something a little heavy, like soup cans or jugs of water (a gallon weighs about 8 pounds). Slowly lift them from your hips to your shoulders, and press them up high overhead. Lower and repeat.

Cardiovascular exercise improves your blood pressure and your insulin sensitivity. It lowers your resting pulse and your blood sugar. Regular cardio exercise improves sleep, reduces stress and anxiety, and reduces the risk of dementia. The benefits of regular cardio are too numerous to discuss in a short article like this, but one of the best benefits is being able to really enjoy those long walks with your spouse, your children, or your grandkids.

To improve it, get moving!
 Any activity that gets your heart pumping harder, your lungs breathing deeper, and your skin sweating for at least 15-20 minutes will help improve your cardio fitness – whether that's a brisk walk or jog, a bike ride, or the elliptical that's been gathering clothes in the corner.

Zero flow gets you zero result.
 Don't get overwhelmed with "tactics and techniques" – start focusing consistently on these few basics, and your result will be a lifetime of fitness.

Until next time, remember that we don't decide our future: we decide our habits, and our habits determine our future.

| KEWASKUM POLICE BEAT |

March 1 to March 9

The following information was provided by Kewaskum Police Department (KPD) Chief Tom Bishop:

In an effort to increase transparency with our residents, here is a short summary of some of the calls handled by KPD Officers over the [first week in March].

March 1 – Assist – All Others – A male party walked from his residence in New Fane to the Bonnie Bell looking to obtain a room. They turned him away as they did not have any rooms available. The male then walked to Kohn's Filling Station and had a clerk contact the police department because he needed a ride home. Upon arrival, Officer Bottleman advised him he would need to check to make sure he didn't have any weapons on him before he would be transported in the squad. The officer directed him to empty the contents of his pockets onto the hood of the squad. In the process, the male party placed items that would be considered drug paraphernalia. The items were taken, and he was issued citations. The officer then transported him to his residence without issues.

March 2 – Theft – Four vehicles were broken into and items were stolen while parked at Holy Trinity for mass [on] Ash Wednesday morning. Investigation continues.

March 4 – Traffic Stop – Officer Nurkala stopped a vehicle for speed. Upon running the driver, DOT showed the driver to be in suspended status. Citation was issued for Operating with Suspended Driver's License.

March 5 – Operating While Intoxicated 3rd Offense – Officer Bottleman stopped a vehicle for speeding. As he approached the driver he observed multiple indications that the driver was possibly under the influence of alcohol. Kewaskum Students to Host Fundraiser for Albrecht Free Clinic

The Albrecht Free Clinic is excited to announce its second annual St. Patrick's Day fundraiser hosted by the Kewaskum High School group of Future Health Professionals. On Thursday, March 17, the Kewaskum students and Albrecht Free Clinic staff will be collecting donations at Pocket Park (next to Sal's Pizza) in downtown West Bend from 12:30-4:30 p.m. The student organization is committed to raising money to support the clinic's dental program, specifically to provide partials and dentures to help restore the smiles of those in need.

Last year, through the St. Patrick's Day event and various school fundraisers, the student group raised more than $4,000 for the Albrecht Free Clinic's dental program. Their efforts recently resulted in a Champions of Change award from the Volunteer Center of Washington County, where they received the Rising Star award for their impressive volunteer work and commitment to the community. The group hopes to surpass last year's fundraising total.

"We are so fortunate that these student leaders support the mission of the Albrecht Free Clinic," said Melanie Gonring, associate director. "We hope the community will rally behind their efforts to change the lives of so many. We're incredibly inspired by what they have accomplished for our patients."

The Albrecht Free Clinic exists to meet the medical and dental health needs of uninsured, underinsured, and underserved individuals living and working in Washington County. It is a volunteer-driven organization, made possible by the doctors, dentists, nurses, hygienists, and administrative support volunteers who give so generously of their time and talents. Founded in 1996 by Dr. James E. Albrecht, the clinic proudly celebrates 25 years of serving the community this year. For more information, visit albrechtfreeclinic.org.

The new Kewaskum Savings office will officially open March 22 with grand opening to continue through March 24. Dieter Bombien will be the manager. Formerly with a large Milwaukee savings and loan, Bombien and his wife have purchased a home in Kewaskum for their family, which includes a son.

Kewaskum's board of education approved final plans for a building addition at the high school, after going over the plans with architect Jack Fieweger of Schutte-Mochon, Inc. The 140 by 56 foot addition will be used to house students when all are in attendance in a split shift attendance plan that will go into effect at the start of the 1972 school year.

This year's Badger Girls State representatives from Kewaskum are Maggie Roeder and Debbie Schowalter.

Kewaskum firemen answered a call Monday afternoon during a snowstorm. Sawdust used for packing in a railroad box car caught fire. Twenty-five firemen answered the alarm. They removed some of the sawdust and watered it down. Cause of the blaze was not determined.

An 18-year-old Kewaskum youth pleaded guilty to theft of a tape player from a car at Kewaskum High School and was sentenced to three months in county jail with Huber Law privileges. He was on probation on two previous charges of burglary. The tape recorder was recovered.

A son was born March 11 to Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stern of Kewaskum. A daughter was born March 11 to Mr. and Mrs. Roland Anderson of Kewaskum.

Nick J. Groh, 82, West Bend, passed away March 11.

Remembering 175 Years of Education in Farmington

About 35 people attended the Farmington Historical Society's program "Farmington's Country Schools: History and Recollections" on Saturday, March 12. ANNE TRAUTNER PHOTOS

BY ANNE TRAUTNER JOURNALIST

The Town of Farmington was established 175 years ago, on Feb. 11, 1847.

"When the first pioneers came, there was nothing here but wilderness and lots of trees. They had to clear the land and build homes and barns, and they had to raise animals and crops. But education was at the top of their list," said Marcia Theusch, president of the Farmington Historical Society.

In fact, at the town board's first meeting on April 6, 1847, the board discussed the need for roads and schools.

Prior to that meeting, education primarily took place in family homes. The first schools built in the Town of Farmington were one-room schoolhouses.

"Early schools had outhouses. Water was carried from a nearby farm and wood was used to heat the buildings. The duties of the teacher included lighting the fire, removing ashes, sweeping the floors and carrying water. These duties were often in the teacher's contract," Theusch said.

By 1880, the township had 691 students in nine school districts. Old Brick, Orchard Grove, Boltonville, Jt. District #3, Cheeseville, Fillmore, St. Peter, Washington and St. John of God all provided a public education.

To commemorate the Farmington's 175th anniversary and the creation of the town's first schools, the Farmington Historical Society held a program titled "Farmington's Country Schools: History and Recollections" on Saturday, March 12. About 35 people attended the event, which was held in the Boltonville Firehouse.

The program highlighted the history of the town's first schools. Attendees also shared their memories of attending school in the Town of Farmington.

"I lived only a block away. We had one hour for lunch, so I would run home and eat something, and within 10 minutes I was back at school playing softball," recalled Curt Yahr. "We had a wonderful education."

Mark Rodenkirch remembers attending school in Boltonville between 1946 and 1954. There was a total of about 50 students at the school at that time, with 25 children in each of the school's two classrooms. Students in grades one through four were in one class, and grades five through eight were in the other classroom.

"Teachers were gods. You didn't cross them, period. If you did, you had to answer to your mother and father," he recalled.

To become a certified teacher, people attended "Normal School" after graduating from high school. Teachers were expected to continue their education and were not allowed to teach once they got married, recalled Rodenkirch's sister, Peg Lyons, whose mother had attended Normal School in Kaukauna.

However, not all teachers were exemplary. One incident stands out in Rodenkirch's memory.

"I was in fifth or sixth grade and we had this big paper drive. There was a big shed behind the school, and we had that thing just stuffed with papers for that paper drive. We must have had at least $25 or $30 worth of paper. We sold the paper, and the following Monday or Tuesday, we came back to school, and we didn't have a teacher. The teacher was gone; never showed up again. And the money was gone," Rodenkirch said.

Still, Rodenkirch and the others at the March 13 event had mostly very fond memories of their teachers.

Another memory shared by many was visiting the cemetery on Memorial Day. A service was held every year, complete with a 21-gun salute by the Honor Guard and students placing flowers on gravestones.

That is a tradition that the Farmington Historical Society has continued. Each year, the Farmington Historical Society holds a Memorial Day program at Turner Hall in Fillmore. This year's event will be held on Memorial Day, May 30, with the West Bend VFW Honor Guard and the Kewaskum High School Band both taking part.

Other Farmington Historical Society activities include:

- As part of Farmington's 175th anniversary, the society would like to recognize Century (100 years) Farm and Homes and Sesquicentennial (150 years) Farms and Homes.
- A year ago, the Farmington Historical Society purchased software to better catalogue and ar-

LORI KREIS
DIRECTOR,
KEWASKUM
PUBLIC LIBRARY

When I was a young mother, I decided to raise my firstborn in a back-to-basic style. I don't remember why, but I was very young and had outlandish ideas about how a mother should be. I suppose I felt that not using the conveniences of the day made me a stronger person or something like that. Anyway, I look back on that time with fondness. I don't know if it made me stronger, but it gave me skills I didn't know I had.

Most of my parenting education came from books and I probably read about the fundamentals of child rearing in an old book and took it to heart. Also, I was stubborn and if someone told me it was easier to use disposable diapers or bottle feed, I would do the opposite. Furthermore, I would work hard on honing whatever skill I was told was a waste of time until it was perfect.

Some of these activities included nursing, cloth diapers and making baby food from scratch which branched out to making other meals from all fresh ingredients. The use of cloth diapers was much different than it is today. They did not come with Velcro or in cute patterns. Just plain white ones and diaper pins and plastic pants over them. I took pride in getting them as white as I could which included drying them outside on a line in the sun. I still remember the feeling of satisfaction when carrying in clean, dry, fresh smelling diapers.

I did enjoy making baby food and it was easy. It was pleasing knowing my daughter had the freshest foods without preservatives. That led to me making bread from scratch, not with a bread machine either. I got good at it too and I don't think we bought bread from a store in years. My go-to was a whole wheat loaf with a touch of honey but I made all kinds.

The smell of yeast throughout the house was a comforting scent. If you have ever kneaded dough, it is a peaceful activity, meditation for me.

I have not made a loaf of bread in a while and the topic for the recipe club this month is breads. I make quick breads and muffins often but saw the cover of a cooking magazine we carry with a wonderful looking focaccia. I challenged myself to make it and it is baking right now as I write this article. This feat brought back memories of being a young mother and the wonders of a digital-free, back-to-basics home for my children. The smell of the yeast while the dough rose was euphoric. Although this recipe didn't call for kneading, I joyously mixed the dough and spread it in the pan as a kind of muscle memory. Thinking back on my days as a young mother and the skills I perfected, I do believe I am strong because of that time.

Jehovah's Witnesses Reach Fond du Lac Residents with a Modified Ministry

Jason Kubis of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, now knows the power of a single letter. As one of Jehovah's Witnesses, Kubis used to knock on doors or visit Bible students as part of his volunteer ministry. That abruptly changed in the spring of 2020, when Jehovah's Witnesses suspended their in-person public ministry, meetings and large conventions.

Two years later, Kubis enjoys Bible discussions with a man named Wayne, who lives in an assisted living home. Those discussions came about after Wayne received a letter from one of Jehovah's Witnesses explaining the Bible's hope for the future, and he responded wanting to know more. Both men acknowledge that it would have been impossible to meet face-to-face previously, but the letter got through.

These days Jehovah's Witnesses carry out their public ministry by letters and phone calls, as well as by discussions via videoconferencing. Last year, the international organization reported all-time peaks in the number of people participating in their volunteer preaching work, increased attendance in Zoom meetings and more than 171,000 new believers baptized. In the past two years, more than 400,000 have been baptized world-wide.

In fact, the number of Jehovah's Witnesses grew 3% in the United States in 2021 alone, matching the most significant increase for the organization over the past decade and the second-largest percentage increase since 1990.

"Staying active in our ministry while remaining safe has had a powerful preserving effect on our congregants and communities," said Robert Hendriks, U.S. spokesman for Jehovah's Witnesses. "The wise decision not to prematurely resume in-person activities has united us and protected lives while comforting many people in great need. The results speak for themselves."

Having Bible discussions with someone like Wayne, who is not tech-savvy, took a bit of ingenuity. "We conducted studies every week over the phone, and we would tie him into our Zoom meeting so I could share my screen. Even though he couldn't see it, he could hear all the videos."

After several months, Kubis obtained a refurbished computer tablet and got access to the facility's Wi-Fi.

"Since that point forward, he's been connecting not only to our studies over videoconferencing, but also the congregation's meetings," Kubis said.

Now, Wayne is sending Bible-based letters of encouragement to others in the community too. "He talks about how he's never felt better, mentally or emotionally, since he's been having our Bible studies," Kubis said.

"Maybe we would not have been able to talk to Wayne individually if we went to that particular home," Kubis continued, "yet the letter contacted him."

By sharing the Bible's hope remotely, the fewer than 3,000 Jehovah's Witnesses in Alaska can preach across the 586,000 square miles of their state. "We're talking to more people in a day than we did in a month," said Marlene Sadowski of Ketchikan.

The official website of Jehovah's Witnesses, translated into more than 1,000 languages, has also leveraged the organization's outreach.

After starting a free self-paced Bible course on jw.org in December 2019, Lisa Owen requested a free, interactive Bible study over Zoom. She was one of nearly 20,000 baptized as one of Jehovah's Witnesses last year in the United States in private settings, including backyard swimming pools, tubs and even rivers.

"JW.ORG gave me somewhere to learn, somewhere to land, and to start living the way God wants me to. It taught me so much," said Owen of Moriarty, New Mexico.

HSPAC to Present 'The Canterbury Tales or ... Geoffrey Chaucer's Flying Circus'

"The Canterbury Tales or ... Geoffrey Chaucer's Flying Circus" will be performed for the public at the Recreation Center located at the Fond du Lac County Fairgrounds, 520 Fond du Lac Ave. in Fond du Lac. Show times will be at 7 p.m. on both Thursday, March 24 and Friday, March 25. This performance is free to everyone, all ages. Free-will donations will be accepted.

When a group of pilgrims, all traveling to Canterbury, meet up at the Tabard Inn, they decide to journey together. While on their way, they regale each other with stories, each with a lesson behind them. You'll hear some wild stories and meet the Seven Deadly Sins, Alex of Trebek, the bold and strong-minded Wife of Bath, and the devious Princess of Darkness. Even the Miller makes an appearance, but absolutely no one wants to hear his tale!

With humor that's sure to have everyone laughing, Geoffrey

Chaucer's classic, The Canterbury Tales is retold on the stage through the play "The Canterbury Tales or ... Geoffrey Chaucer's Flying Circus". Written by Burton Bumgarner and produced through a special arrangement with the Pioneer Drama Company, this play is appropriate for all ages. This year's play is the 15th annual production of the Homeschool Performing Arts Club (HSPAC), a non-profit organization of home-schooled kids who each have a part in creating every step of the play. Working together, the cast has been practicing since January to bring this performance to the public. The cast ranges from 4-18 year olds who helped choose a script; paint, make, or find set pieces; and create or find their own costumes. From painting the set, creating artwork for programs and posters, collecting props, and everything in between, the cast of HSPAC brings everything to life on stage this March.

More information about the performance, or about HSPAC, is available by contacting Dawn Doll at 920-921-4565.

Bradley A. Petersen for Kewaskum School Board on April 5

My name is Bradley A. Petersen and I'm a candidate for the Kewaskum School Board election on April 5. I was born and raised right here in our community and attended Kewaskum schools from K-12.

I have a passion to serve my community and do what is right not only for the students but also the taxpayer. My promise to you the people is simple, your voice will not be forgotten and your children will attend a school in which they receive the best education and opportunities that can be offered.

Ten Conservative Promises if Elected

Meet Rhett Engelking – Candidate for Kewaskum School Board

"The place where God calls you to is the place where your deep gladness and the world's deep hunger coincide." - F. Buechner

The accompanying photo is of me and my niece, Sharada (who is now 7). If you are wondering why a childless man like myself would choose to run for the Kewaskum School Board, it began with the unusual experience I had in the spring and summer of 2020.

I was living in Washington, D.C. when the pandemic arrived and a lockdown ensued. Unlike my brother Zach and his wife, my work was not deemed "essential" and I was asked not to go into work. The school district of their two daughters had gone to remote learning and, after some deliberation, I agreed to move back to Wisconsin in order to attend to their needs.

After six years away from Wisconsin I had lost track of my nieces' lives, so the decision wasn't as hard as you might think. I have always found a deep gladness in working with children and adolescents, because when the space is there to listen attentively, the conversation is usually fascinating. However, while attending a few of my nieces' virtual classroom sessions and listening to stories of classmates who had lost relatives during the pandemic. I quickly got the sense that some part of these kids' lives was unlike anything I had ever experienced, namely an unparalleled level of anxiety.

Even kids who were not remote learners have been starved of many of the kinds of immersive experiences we all took for granted in childhood. Today's kids face a daily disappointment and uncertainty that I hope we can remedy. It is with this sense of compassion for students' wellbeing that I hope to broaden the conversations the board has around public education.

Education to me is primarily about nurturing a student's vocation, that place of coincidence between deep gladness and deep hunger that Buechner spoke about. My seeds of vocation were planted during experiences at Kewaskum Middle and High School. During that time, my dad served on the school board and I was able to closely observe how ongoing board conversations and subsequent referenda brought forth a varsity soccer team and fully-equipped science lab.

I was proud to be among the first juniors to use Mr. Gosa's science lab and the first seniors to captain and to play all four years on the soccer team. A head start in science helped me attain a Pre-Medical certificate and MS in Educational Psychology from UW-Milwaukee and a MS in Physiology from Georgetown University. My experiences in athletic teamwork informed my earlier career as a recreation therapist at Rogers Behavioral Health, and I have been able to do science research in epidemiology at the Medical College of Wisconsin. I note this all in gratitude because, without Kewaskum taxpayers subsidizing my secondary education, my options would be narrow.

Last year my family was in the headlines because a man with considerably less options took my father's life. I grew up the son of parents who taught at nearly every level of public and private education, and the persistent question around our family dinner table has always been, "How can we best meet the needs of the most vulnerable?"

My dad taught economics and my mother special education, and yet this question is rooted in Christian principles. I won't always claim to have the answer, as it is situational and changes each minute and every day. I will say, however, that I am fully committed to the conversation. That is why last year I moved back to Wisconsin permanently and have been doing social work on behalf of Washington County Human Services. In this position, I have already been able to listen to the community of administrators, teachers, counselors, mentors, and law enforcement personnel we entrust to co-parent today's generation of kids.

It is unfortunate that state lawmakers are not always privy to these conversations, because not only are they humbling but they can help save a lot of misdirected dollars. Public education is the great equalizer, and for some kids it is the best option they have. To secure a safe future, I want to bring humility and fiscal responsibility to the Kewaskum School District. A board that can set ego aside, and listen closely to those with a real stake in this district will know exactly what costs are non-negotiable for our kids' future.

Tim Ramthun Candidate Profile

Biography

- Born in Kewaskum, March 13, 1957; married; two children; eight grandchildren.

- Graduate Kewaskum school district, 1975; MBTI Business Training Institute, 1983; diplomas in Project Management and Six-Sigma (green), Project Management Institute, 1999; diplomas in Organizational Efficiency, Operational Quality, and Service Execution, American Management Association, 1994-96.

- Former executive business management consultant; vice president and directorship roles for multiple Fortune 100 and Fortune 500 companies specializing in manufacturing, technology, finance, education, supply-chain, service and delivery operations, and 24/7 call center operations.

- Member of the Kewaskum School District School Board (past president); Heritage Foundation, WI State Legislature.

Why have I chosen to run?

- I serve at the pleasure of the People. They want me in the seat. They originally sought my involvement in board governance several years ago. They knew of my passion for people, structure in business execution, visionary skills effective for strategic planning, my non-nonsense approach to governance, accountability, return-on-investment for the tax dollars used, and my focus on government accountability. Being involved on the board, we've been able to show the community how well governance works when you have the right people in the right roles.

The KSD is in a position unlike any it has ever had, with a diverse board and a highly effective district administrator. Collectively, this leadership team will maintain its leading-edge management of the district, which ensures continued success. Challenges are constant. Having experienced members guarantees due-process in maintaining the tax levy, quality staff, a conducive learning environment for all students, fiscal responsibility, and a classroom curriculum that has a foundation that focuses on reading, writing, math, and testing score proficiency. I remain steadfast in my commitment to serve to that end.

Why is public education important to me?

- Education is the heart of a productive society. When delivered properly, it establishes life-long lessons. The educational process is a science, critical in the development of the student, from adolescence to adulthood. Representing the tax-paying residents of the district, it is a requirement that the board put the best interests and needs of both the students and the parents first. Ensuring a solid and thorough education, offering options that address conditions and the variable needs of each student in a cost-effective and efficient manner, is the heart of a productive board. Being flexible and open to discussions and debate that result in an action that formally resolves every question put to the board, is critical. The community needs board representation that maintains this focus and does not waiver.

Kewaskum School Board Prepares for Student Transfers

At the Thursday, March 10, regular Kewaskum School District Board of Education meeting, district administrator Dr. Mark Bazata gave an update on the process for transferring students from i4L-earning Community School (i4L) to the district's two other elementary school buildings.

Recently, the school board voted to close i4L starting in the 2022-23 school year citing the costs to operate the former Wayne Elementary School building in tandem with the district's ability to house all elementary students between the Kewaskum Elementary School (KES) building and the Farmington Elementary School building.

The shuffle of students will have an effect on the entire student body, not just those transferring from i4L to one of the other schools.

"KES families of students who are being moved will receive a Skyward message on Friday, March 18, notifying them of the decision. This information is being shared early in order to provide sufficient notification and for planning purposes. Consistent with previous years, in the event that there are major unforeseen enrollment shifts, additional student transfers might happen," said Bazata.

For more information and updates regarding the transition, please visit the schools' website at kewaskumschools.org/Content2/transition.

Employees Take Majority Interest in Van Horn Automotive Group/Executive Team Changes

On March 2, Van Horn Automotive Group transitioned the status of their ESOP (Employee Stock Ownership Plan) from 30% to 77%, giving employees majority ownership of the company. An ESOP is a qualified retirement plan, granting eligible employees a portion of company stock and ownership interest. Van Horn Automotive Group entered the ESOP in 2016 with employees as 30% minority owners. Van Horn is the only employee owned auto group in the state, and was named ESOP Company of the Year by the Wisconsin Chapter of the ESOP Association in 2019. This transition aligns with the company's mission of "Empower People. Amaze Customers," and moves employees from minority owners to majority stakeholders.

"Our employees are passionate, dynamic, and innovative team players," said Jeff Niesen, president of the automotive group. "The proof is in our consistent growth of both sales and profits. It only makes sense for our employees to have a greater stake in the continued success of this company."

This ownership shift also comes with executive-level transitions. After 35 years, Chuck Van Horn is pivoting from co-CEO of Van Horn Automotive Group to focus on Van Horn Development, LLC; an independent real estate development and property management company, based in Sheboygan County. Teresa Van Horn will serve as the sole CEO for Van Horn Automotive Group. And lastly, COO Richard Strong, is moving to chairperson of the board on Van Horn's Board of Directors.

"I'm very happy with the direction this new generation is taking this company," said Chuck Van Horn, former co-CEO. "The steep rise in stock valuation indicates how talented our employees are. This customer-centric organization has seen strong growth in sales accompanied by consistent annual investment returns."

Drive to Protect Workers this Construction Season

Wisconsin State Patrol's March Law of the Month highlights work zone safety

Construction season in Wisconsin is just around the corner and the Wisconsin Department of Transportation is urging everyone to be prepared to keep crews safe.

The Wisconsin State Patrol's March Law of the Month highlights the rules and guidelines for work zones that aim to protect workers as they repair the roads.

"It's never too early to look for orange barrels," WisDOT Secretary Craig Thompson said. "From big projects to pothole repairs, you can expect to see construction and maintenance workers out in traffic all season. Drive to protect them. Buckle up, phone down."

There have been more than 12,000 crashes in work zones in the past five years. Those incidents led to about 61 deaths and more than 4,700 injuries. Most work zone crashes are caused by speeding, tailgating, and distracted driving.

Cell phone use is one of the most common factors in distracted driving incidents. Wisconsin law forbids texting while driving on any road. It is also illegal to use a hand-held mobile device in work zones. A new state law took effect in December 2021 that expands this ban to areas surrounding emergency response vehicles with flashing lights.

"Work zones require a driver's full and complete attention. Barrels, lane shifts, and traffic backups can appear suddenly. Keep your eyes on the road and move over or slow down to protect construction crews and emergency responders," Wisconsin State Patrol Superintendent Anthony Burrell said.

The state's Move Over law requires drivers to move out of the lane of traffic next to first responders and maintenance workers. If you can't move over, you must slow down.

Fines for traffic violations double in work zones and the consequences for injuring or killing someone in a work zone are even more costly and tragic.

Wisconsin State Patrol asks drivers to be cautious in work zones:

- Slow down when approaching construction work. Move over to avoid hitting a worker or equipment.
- Buckle up, phone down. Every trip. Every time.
- Be courteous with other drivers. Follow the zipper merge method to reduce backups, taking turns at the merge point.
- Download the 5-1-1 app to know before you go. You can monitor construction projects and incidents on your route. The upgraded 5-1-1 conditions map now includes 14,000 miles of roads.

MARK WALTERS
COLUMNIST

This past week, I headed up to Sawyer County to fish a lake near Birchwood with three good friends and laugh a lot. Besides the fact that we had a ton of adversity, we had a blast and caught some very pretty perch and crappie.

FRIDAY, MARCH 4
HIGH: 32, LOW: 28

For those that are not aware of this fact: This winter, there is a lot of ice on the northern-tier bodies of water, and in the northern parts of Wisconsin on up, as there is a lot of snow. The snow part would be the first part of this trip's adversity and it had the potential to be a real big deal.

Paul Bucher, who is the publisher of the Cumberland Advocate, was on the lake that we would be staying on this weekend, and at sunrise the deep snow and slush was making truck and ATV travel impossible.

I was driving on Highway 53 when I got the call from Paul, and I did not have my snowmobile; neither did Ryan Ransom of Black River Falls or Preston Johnson of Rice Lake.

I had a brainstorm and called my newest friend, Darren Skar, who is the owner of Bay Vue Resort where we had a cabin rented. Darren did us a major favor when he found us a Polaris 600 snow machine and our problems kind of took a break.

So, we are staying at Bay Vue Resort for the first time and are more than impressed but have to travel exactly 2.1 miles on the ice/snow/slush to get to our honey hole.

At first, I'm the driver – our sled set up is limited – and I make three trips, each one with a comrade and gear. The first trip is with Paul and gear, the second is with Preston and gear and, when I arrive with Preston, Paul has three jumbo perch in his bucket (P.S., good buddies of Preston's, ask him where the beer, gas and minnows went?).

Last but not least was Ryan, and we were super excited to start fishing.

We had a shack to set up that would fit four and, first, I put out two tip downs and a Finicky Fooler, which I just purchased after seeing it catch the heck out of fish the weekend before on the Mississippi. On each of my rigs I put a #14 treble hook, a bead, small split shot and a crappie minnow. I would have used rosies but could not find any.

So, the four of us had about three hours of daylight, and the perch catching is slow, but steady, and they are 9-12 inches.

Toward dark, we all headed into the shack where we had holes drilled and a propane lantern. We kind of thought we were too shallow for crappie, but we really started giggling, for various reasons, when Paul's slip bobber vanished, and he caught an 11-inch crappie.

Our evening changed from cabin-time to shack-time and, when we made it back to the cabin at 10:30, we had a pile of crappie and perch and four good friends that only see each other once a year. We had more laughs than most people have in a month.

Back at the cabin, I was heating up a pork roast dinner that I had pre-made, and these guys were hungry enough to eat bark off a tree. Paul cut up a stick of bear sausage that was made at Louie's Finer Meats in Cumberland. We all agreed: It was the best sausage of any type that any of us ever had in our life.

We hit the rack about midnight and that is when the storm began.

SATURDAY, MARCH 5
HIGH: 32, LOW: 27

The ice storm that hit this part of Wisconsin is one that very few people will forget soon; simply walking, especially on anything with an angle, was almost a no-chance type-of-deal.

Here is a funny story: Perhaps in the cloud of darkness, last night, when we made our journey back to the cabin, someone may have accidentally not realized that they had left a tip down out. If this happened, it honestly was a mistake. A great laugh was had by everyone when that someone caught his or her biggest perch of the trip in that manner.

I am not lying when I say that the fish catching was very steady for dandy panfish, and Mr. Paul Bucher even caught a 20-inch walleye on his jig pole.

We came up with a method to put me in an Otter Sled and that saved us trips as we were running low on gas, beer and minnows ("Preston").

This mission has been taking place for a good 15 years, we always catch fish, eat well and, most importantly, peg out the fun meter.

Think outside the box!

KMS Cheer Takes First at State

REBECCA SHAVLIK
CONTRIBUTOR

The Kewaskum Middle School Competitive Cheerleading Team, coached by Stacy Brzozowski and Allsun Molenda, wrapped up the season at the Wisconsin Association of Cheer/Pom Coaches (WACPC) Cheer Finals with a first-place win. The team competed in the middle school small division against nine other Wisconsin middle school teams on Saturday, Feb. 29, at the Oshkosh Arena.

The group's performance consisted of a cheer followed by a choreographed routine to music that included jumps, tumbling, stunts and a pyramid.

The team was scored based on the difficulty, timing, jumps and stunts. Team spirit, showmanship and unity are also factored into the scores.

The KMS cheer team competed in the middle school rec. division at three area competitions leading up to state, which included the Menomonee Falls Phoenix Invite wherein the girls placed first, the iCheer Championship at Greendale High School wherein the team placed first and, finally, at the Kettle Moraine Lutheran High School Cheer Competition wherein KMS cheer placed third.

Between competitions, the troupe spent many hours practicing and working hard to improve strength and skill, as well as cheering for the middle school boys' basketball team and also participating in the Kewaskum Christmas parade.

Congratulations to the whole team on an incredible season!

He returned home to the Kewaskum/Campbellsport area just last week

“Haven’t gone out to eat, yet,” he said, “but I am planning on it. Home cooked meals are pretty great compared to what we were eating.”

That sentiment was shared by many of the athletes from around the globe, all of whom congregated in the Chinese capital city for the 20th Winter Olympiad, which ran Feb. 4 to 20.

“It was kind of strange,” said Stolz matter-of-factly about the overall experience, although, when put in context of the global pandemic, there was an expectation of “Olympic life” being less than what it used to be in prior iterations. “There wasn’t much to do there. You are either in your room, the cafeteria or at the rink. It got a little boring.”

For a sanguine sportsman like Stolz, though, the pageantry and scope of the Winter Games was hardly the purpose of attending: He was there to win.

While the teen fell short of his own expectations (“it wasn’t a terrible finish,” he said), he certainly turned heads among aficionados of the sport, many of which noted the combination of his youth, supreme athleticism and size.

In breaking down his performance, Stolz said the unexpected quality of the ice (he described it as brittle and cold) was a disadvantage to his style of blades, which he said are more round than sharp.

“You can switch your blades, but mine weren’t in a proper condition to work on that kind of ice,” he explained. “The ice was really cold and brittle...with rounded skates, sometimes the ice will break away and it creates less contact to push off of.”

Stolz noted that, having fewer international competitions to compete in the previous few years, he was caught off guard by the ice quality in Beijing.

“I wasn’t prepared for it,” he said. “I could have done something if I knew it would have been like that, but I’m still happy with the races.”

Overall, his first-ever Olympics are sure to be a monumental learning experience. At the very least, in four years, should Stolz qualify again, he will have an upper hand on leveraging the expectations of the experience verse his performance.

“It was a little bit less than a World Cup; pressure wise,” admitted Stolz, who said he was not caught off guard by the world stage. “It was just kind of like a time trial with camera crews; it didn’t seem like anything too special.”

With all butterflies and pinch-me-moments now in his past, Stolz only talked about the future. He plans to take a well-deserved break in the short term, but he’s eagerly looking forward to the next season of competitions.

“I’m going to take about two-and-a-half to two weeks off and then I’ll get back into some cycling some weightlifting,” said Stolz. “And then, start over.”

There will be plenty of big-rink moments before the next Olympic Winter Games (Italy, 2026), but the Kewaskum teenager will be hyper-focused on controlling his own destiny before then.

“Just do what I can,” he said. “I realize I could be pretty good at this and could maybe win something in the future. I just have to keep focusing on the training, and, really, do what I can.”
