Paul Amundson looks back at tenure as Campbellsport schools' administrator

"I can still hear my dad's voice," said Paul Amundson during an interview with this newspaper's staff, which was held to put his nine-year career as Campbellsport School District Administrator in retrospective as he eyes retirement at the end of June. "Don't leave things messy."

For the born-and-bred Wisconsin boy, it was not an unpleasant memory of his family's patriarch, but instead a lesson learned over-and-over, and one that Amundson passed along to his thousands, maybe even tens-of-thousands, of students taught and observed over his four Party on the Pavement will be held in downtown Kewaskum on Tuesday, June 21.

"It's the best party on a Tuesday in Wisconsin," said Wendi Dreher, who is co-chairing the event with Jaime Enright for the Kewaskum Area Chamber of Commerce. "I'm just pleased we have so much music and great food. It is a wonderful event in the middle of the week. Bring your lawn chairs and enjoy the day."

The festival, which is sponsored by the Kewaskum Area Chamber of Commerce, will run from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. All proceeds benefit the community.

"One hundred percent of this goes back to the community. We don't take a share," Dreher said.

There is no charge to attend the event. The day features an array of live entertainment, vendors, crafts and children's activities. Plenty of food and refreshments will be available throughout the day.

"Local businesses have really stepped up and helped sponsor acts so we can offer this huge event for the whole community," Dreher said.

Artisans, crafters and food vendors will be on site from 10:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

New Waste and Recycling Service to Start in July

The village executed an agreeable split with Waste Management and signed a contract with GFL

MITCHELL BRADLEY KELLER
ACTING EDITOR

As was previously reported in this newspaper, the Kewaskum village board was considering changing its garbage and recycling collection service provider, and that decision was made final at the group's regular June 6 meeting, as the elected officials voted to amicably split from its contract with Waste Management.

"GFL is beginning July 1, and they are giving us a year-one rate for garbage pickup for the remainder of 2022 and all of 2023," said Kewaskum Village Administrator Adam Gitter, adding that both the village and Waste Management saw significant hurdles in continuing the professional relationship. "We wanted to start with GFL as soon as possible."

The GFL contract will be for five years.

A sea change in garbage services has swept southeastern Wisconsin, as once stalwart collection services like Waste Management and Advanced Disposal have been dumped for GFL with many municipalities noting significant declines in service quality from the two former companies listed. Advanced Disposal was ac-

What Would God Think?

Dear Reader,

Let's assume for a moment that we know with certainty that there is a God. (I'm saying it this way to invite agnostics and atheists to join in this train of thought.) Let's pretend that at times He looks in on His creations and hears all human thoughts, catches all human words, and sees all human interactions.

He witnesses the suffering we inflict on one another –

- ~ World Wars I and II, as nations invaded other nations.
- ~ The persecution of Jews, Roma and Sinti (sometimes referred to as "Gypsies"), blacks, gays, Poles and other Slavs, and Catholics.
- ~ The Armenian genocide at the hands of Turkey.
- ~ The starvation of millions of Russians after WWII.
- ~ The Rwandan genocide against Tutsis.
- ~ The murder of tens of thousands of Ukrainian civilians, including children.
- ~ The Chinese genocide against the Uighers.
- ~ The Taliban's ubiquitous oppression of women.
- ~ The starvation of millions of North Koreans.
- ~ The wanton massacre of innocent American school children, as well as many others who have the misfortune of being in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Is it just me, or do you also wonder whether He is bowing His head in sorrow? Perhaps He is saying, "I gave them gifts beyond measure, all they could possibly need or even imagine, and yet they can't find the compassion to share with one another. They hurt each other for land, power, and wealth, causing millions of pointless deaths."

Or is that just me thinking out loud...

G.A. SCHEINOHA
CONTRIBUTOR

June is Dairy Month. While that doesn't spring to mind the way it once did, when I worked in a restaurant and saw placemats promoting the occasion on a daily basis, knowledge of how important agriculture is was steamrolled into me from childhood on.

About this time of year, my father took vacation from his job at Stella Cheese in Campbellsport and we got excited because we knew sooner or later that week we were headed up north to visit his family. In particular, his sister and her husband's farm near Marathon. He, Harry Gresens, raised a herd of cattle and we got to see milking done up close and personal. Admittedly, the operation was a bit behind the times because the milk cans were lowered into a hole in the milkhouse floor that was filled with water to keep them cool till the truck arrived to pick them up. Besides which they still used an outhouse.

But I think Dad enjoyed those trips most. They took him back to his boyhood on his parents' farm near Edgar. That's why he liked his work at the factory. Even though his life was ruled by late morning to early evening shifts, sometimes Sunday intake hours. Often we, his wife and eight offspring, waited impatiently on his arrival.

Overdue when the last truck hadn't come in yet, the driver running late. We became familiar with that squat brick building on Sheboygan Street. The steamy vatroom with its huge stainless steel bins where the cheese was made. The stone tubs in the chilly cellar where the cheese aged in a salt brine. And we saw the bruises on Dad's arms from brushes with the tight confines of milk haulers and bulk storage tanks while he scrubbed them. An early, vital lesson in what it costs to keep food on the table.

Connecting Buyers and Sellers

AL WISNEFSKE
BROKER/OWNER, LAND & LEGACY GROUP LLC

I've always felt like I've struggled as a buyers agent.

I know I can connect with people, but it's so frustrating when you have great clients, but the right property just isn't presenting itself.

It's even more frustrating when you're fighting low inventory.

Or, you find the property, and the buyer was never actually qualified to buy it.

I had to flip the script. I had to take charge.

I invested in two courses to learn more about working this market. I had to figure out a consistent system to help put these deals together for buyers.

I came up with the "Preferred Buyer Program."

Sure, other companies across multiple industries have these types of programs; it has to be fluff to get more people in the door, right?

Wrong.

Long gone are the days of showing properties to unqualified buyers. Long gone are the days of trusting people's word that their finances are in order and putting belief in the phrase "when the right property comes up, we'll get pre-approved." Long gone are the days of sitting around and waiting.

If these tough times have proven anything it is this: I want to work with people who have their affairs together.

So here I am, fine tuning my process for the benefit of myself, as well as the people who want to use me as a resource.

There's so many great benefits to this program (as if you haven't heard that one before!), but, for real, I'm spending $15/day on an ad to try and get a property for one of my clients.

This is the new way of connecting buyers and sellers in today's market.

Interested? Send an email with the subject line: "Preferred Buyer Program" to al@landandlegacygroup.com.

decades in education: Finish the job you promised to, or keep doing it until it's done.

This was the mentality Amundson held coming into to 2021-22 school year, as it was one year later than he planned on retiring.

He used the metaphor of taking apart a car engine – something he did often as a pre-teen growing up near Pittsville, Wis. in the central part of the state – to explain why leaving a project unfinished can have dire consequences.

“If you put all the parts in the bins, but you don't know how to put it together, that would not look good,” said Amundson.

Of course, what the lifelong educator was referring to was the myriad changes brought on by the pandemic in conjunction with the school district's recent – and massive – building and referendum project. Amundson, who got started in education as a science teacher, said his planned retirement following the 2020-21 school year simply didn't feel like the right time.

“[My wife and I], we thought and we prayed on it,” he said. “And I said, ‘I got to hang on one more year,’ and she said, ‘okay.’”

Now that this year's graduates are officially on to their next step and the rising classes are eyeing their next level, Amundson feels comfortable about where he's leaving the district, and he thanked a dedicated staff, a caring community and passionate student body for making his job a joy the last decade.

“I get a little weepy [thinking about] it,” said Amundson when asked to reflect on the legion of Cougars he will leave with the light, adding that one of his favorite parts about working in Campbellsport was the parents' passion and honesty.

He said those characteristics made him a good fit to be district administrator, and he believes he maintained a positive working relationship with parents and students throughout his time working on W. Sheboygan Street.

“We adjusted some things,” he explained, adding that he brought a fiscal-conservative mentality with operating the school that, he believes, was refreshing to the residents of the village and parents of district students. “I had an extensive background in school finance, so we were able to work some things and do some planning to protect the stability of the school district down the line.”

These actions go beyond the referendum project that brought significant upgrades to the middle/high school building, which added more than 60,000 square feet and renovated another more-than-50,000 square feet of the campus and was completed in 2018.

That project, though, Amundson looks at fondly as a hallmark of his time in the Kettle Moraine.

“I was part of referendum and build situations in the past,” said Amundson, who noted that he worked on building projects at Richland Center, at Webster (“we were the nearest school district to Superior, and we were 70 miles away”) and at Omro (where Amundson spent eight years as principal of the high school and another eight as the district administrator).

He said, often times, the difference between successfully asking residents for more funding comes down to messaging, and he said prior referendum attempts in Campbellsport failed because the right message was not being delivered to parents and voters.

“It's about helping people see the need,” said Amundson, who added that Campbellsport replaced portions of its middle/high school building that were nearly 90-years-old. “We had a building that was built in 1935-38, but I would say the biggest needs were in aiding the curriculum.”

Amundson stated that the chief goal in growing the physical space of the school was providing more applicable career-orientated learning experiences for the students.

“People think that athletics drove the whole thing, but it was the curriculum. CTE [career and technical program] upgrades; metal shop, wood shop and our use of technology in those areas... that was sorely lacking.”

The referendum project improved almost every aspect of the schools' STEM (science, technology, engineering, mathematics) offerings, and Amundson believes that the results have already paid dividends. He pointed to the roughly one-dozen Campbellsport High students who passed their Certified SolidWorks Placement exams during this most recent school year as a small example of the gains made in the classroom since 2018.

For this “neck of the woods,” Amundson said providing more offerings at the high school and middle school level that expose students to the agriculture and manufacturing sectors will be paramount going forward.

“This is Campbellsport. We are ‘Earth People,’” he said, adding that exposed rocks (as part of the schools' design) was an intentional creation at CHS/CMS. “You see rocks exposed on the floor, because what we do is about the earth.”

For the oldest son of a cranberry farmer, it was a storied road to the finish line, but one that Amundson, who is particularly “folksie” and easy to speak with, realized required encouragement (even if it didn't initially seem all that encouraging).

“I was supposed to take over the farm, but I said: ‘I am going to be a science teacher,’” he recalled.

He went to Trinity College (now Trinity International University) in Illinois, and he got married his junior year and shortly thereafter was blessed with his first child.

“You'll never finish,” said Amundson's father, who, more than anything, hoped to hammer home the seriousness of being a father.

“But my dad knew how to play me,” admitted Amundson, who spoke nothing but fondly of his dad. “He knew that if I couldn't get the engine going on the lawnmower that all he had to do was tell me I would never get it working. So, that's one thing he trained me in: Persistence.”

Dad was right, and the reverse psychology was inspiration enough for the younger Amundson to finish college and achieve his dream of being a science teacher.

He made the move from classroom teacher to principal before obtaining his first administration job (at Omro) roughly 20 years ago.

It was a process that did not come easy for an educator that loved his students.

“I missed the classroom terribly,” he admitted, noting that his first transition from science teacher to principal was particularly jarring. “I had great mentors and great kids. We would do experiments, and they wouldn't always work, and you'd laugh and you'd learn... Teaching was my favorite.”

He said one of his favorite parts of the job, at times, was when kids weren't always exhibiting their best behavior.

“Sometimes, it was hard not to laugh,” said Amundson, detailing some of the best excuses, fabrications and tall-tales he has heard throughout the years, and sharing one of his favorite student experiences from this most recent school year. “A second grader walks up to me and asks, ‘Are you a mean boss to my principal?’”

Amundson will finish out his contract this month, but he will get to spend a few of those weeks abroad, in Italy, at his daughter's wedding. He is looking forward to the well-earned time off, but he can do so knowing the future of the district is in good hands.

Thomas Wissink, last school year's New Richmond High School principal, will assume Amundson's duties starting in July.

“I've known Tom for years,” said Amundson, who noted that the pair were familiar with another as a coach (Wissink) and referee (Amundson). “He's a solid guy; very honest and straightforward, and he loves this community. He's been here several times, and we've done some transitioning, and he will carry this place forward and keep things moving.”

Amundson said there is a lot to like about the current state of the Campbellsport schools, but he said there will always be challenges in the future.

“We will need some assistance in growing other areas of curriculum,” said Amundson, who also added that, even though folks might not want to believe it, that more building projects in the future would be inevitable. “We have parts of this current building that were built in the 1960s, and a determination on what should be done with that space will need to happen.”

But, Amundson recognized he is largely leaving on a high note, especially during a season that saw exemplary performance in the classroom, in clubs and on the sports fields, courts and diamonds. Putting it all in perspective, Amundson is honest in realizing a

On Thursday, June 23, in the City of Mayville, the Wonderful Wisconsin Tour featuring Model T vehicles will be displaying history, as 120-plus Model T Fords will be parked at the Mayville Limestone School Museum and Mayville Park Pavilion.

The visit to Mayville is part of a weeklong tour by the Model T Ford Club of America, hosted by the Dairyland Tin Lizzies Charter.

Enjoy music outdoors from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. with Ryan Kautzer's three-piece band at Mayville Park Pavilion, along with food and beverages available. Please, no carry-ins.

Bernhard Plumbing, Inc. of Mayville sponsored the music for this event.

Local polka dance organizer Donna Gudex-Kamrath, in recognition of the Model Ts coming to town, added a new dance to the Mayville Lions Club schedule: a June Dairy Month Dance, which will also feature Ryan Kautzer and a five-piece band in the Pavilion.

This event will take place from 4 to 8 p.m.

BHF Pumping, Gar-Rae's Dairy, Hesprich Family Dairy and Triple B Trucking will sponsor the music.

"It is our honor to have Ryan Kautzer back to Mayville," said Gudex-Kamrath, adding that a chance encounter has led to a budding relationship. "[He] attended one of our dances previously, and I was selling tickets and, he told me he had a band too!"

Gudex-Kamrath recalled the conversation and gave Kautzer a call in a pinch. He ended up filling in as the musical feature for a dance on two-days notice, and he has since become a hit locally.

"People were extremely impressed at his talent," she said, adding that Kautzer was just 19 years old at the time. "[The people] demanded he come back!"

There will be food and beverage (no carry-ins) available for purchase and raffles, a silent auction of cheese baskets and dairy samples to enjoy. The whole family can attend the June Dairy Month Dance, as tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for teens and children 18-and-under.

Colleen Van Ellis of the television program "Polka! Polka! Polka!" (sponsored by the City of Mayville and TTI Trucking, Inc. and advertised by Metalcraft of Mayville) will be on hand to film the event. A future program featuring the dance would air either on a Saturday starting at 9 p.m. on CW 18 Milwaukee and/or a Sunday starting at 11 a.m. on CW 14 Green Bay.

The next Mayville Lions Club polka dance will be the Audubon Dance, featuring Wendinger Band of New Ulm, on Sept. 16 from 5 to 9 p.m.

He left Wisconsin again to join Ruth during her active duty assignment in the United States Army Nurse Corps at Fort Hood/Killeen, TX.

He worked there at the PX assembling tricycles and bikes etc. and also delivered fertilizer (BS) to officers' wives vehicles, (his favorite job). He completed photography correspondence courses during that time landing him a more desirable job, as chief photographer, at the Killeen Daily Herald. Upon Ruth's discharge, they once again moved back to Wisconsin.

In the spring of 1970, he was hired by his future lifelong best friend Joe Karius, and began working at the Wisconsin Rapids Daily Tribune. In 1977, Max left newspaper work to continue his higher education at UW Stevens Point, receiving his Bachelor of Arts degree in instrumental music education K-12. Upon graduation, he accepted a job at Shullsburg Public Schools, teaching instrumental music for grades 5-12. In 2001, he accepted a job at New London Middle School, teaching grades 5-8 instrumental music, and developed their jazz band and Veterans Day memorial programs at the middle school. He "WAS" retired in 2010.

During all of this time, they enjoyed numerous vacations in their motor homes, on cruises, and organized two family / friends bus trips out east. Their travels also took them to all parts of the United States, attending retired Air Force Musicians Alumni Association Reunions for which he was historian for several years.

Their last excursion in the fall of 2019 was on Viking Ocean Cruiseline, sailing the St. Lawrence Seaway and Atlantic Ocean. Freezing his ass off in Canada and North East United States. While on a whale watching excursion, he was bundled up like an Eskimo and walked like a Samari!

His musical career also included being a member of Big Band Express in Dubuque, IA, the Fox Cities Bands; including Swing Time Big Band, The Happy Wanderers, Swinging Angels, and as of late the Neenah Ambassadors.

Max was also an avid Packer fan, spending one of his cruises with his wife, and Packers President/CEO Mark and Laurie Murphy. Mark gave Max his direct phone number but never seemed to pick up when the team was losing. LOL!

Max was on the Board of Directors for the South Wood County Humane Society and the Building Committee for the First Formal Animal Shelter built in Wisconsin Rapids in 1982.

Max was also a member of the American Legion Norris Spencer Post #263 of New London.

After leaving there, he worked at Weasler Engineering until retirement. Roger also had his own rug cleaning business "Flitter's Rug Cleaning" for many years.

Roger had a good sense of humor and held different offices in various clubs and organizations in his younger years. He loved all sports and watched all of them on television in his later years. He was a big NASCAR fan; Dale Earnhardt was his favorite.

Favre-esque reaction to retiring might crop up.

"We will see how I do next September," he quipped. "I might have to jump into the classroom and substitute teach or drive the bus."

In addition to his family and staff throughout the years, Amundson made special mention of the Campbellsport school board, which he said has exhibited tremendous leadership during his time as administrator.

"We always work together," he said. "So it's a credit to the board and my staff, as success goes all the way down."

"Down," Amundson said, was where his position on the pyramid was, in a relative-order-of-importance. "I'm at the bottom and then it's the school board and the administration and then the teachers followed by the parents and then students; right there at the top."

No matter what the future for Amundson, who lives in Omro, he sees a place for him somewhere in the pyramid of education, and he assumes, one way or another, the best part of a career in education is assured to bring him back.

"The kids," he said. "It's really all about the students."

Teens & Museums – M.O.W.A. Teen Council is the First of Many

Museum of Wisconsin Art highlights three Kewaskum High students in inaugural year of Teen Council program

NIA WILSON
NAST FAMILY FELLOW
IN EDUCATION
MUSEUM OF WIS. ART

Teen engagement in an art museum gets young people involved in their community through activities and programs that promote their interests as well as the interests of the community to benefit all.

The Museum of Wisconsin Art (MOWA) provides that opportunity for young people, and my role as the Nast Family Fellow within the Education Department allows this exchange to flourish.

During my fellowship, I have worked on educational programming for MOWA's inaugural year of their Teen Council program.

The Teen Council is a selective group of teen art enthusiasts from local high schools in the surrounding area who come together twice a month and engage with the ins-and-outs of the museum. That entails the teens expanding their knowledge of art, careers and the art community. Members learn about MOWA's exhibitions, work with exhibiting artists and the state's art community and discover how museums function behind the scenes, all while connecting with other teens who share the same creative passions.

"What I love most is that we get to interact with each other in such a very welcoming and open space, [and] being a part of something with others just like myself," said Avery Michaels, a senior at Kewaskum High School (KHS) and a MOWA Teen Council member.

What is uniquely special about the first year of our Teen Council program is that three of our nine Teen Council members are seniors at KHS: Courtney Duren, Michaels and Logan Moris.

All three applied online to be members and all were encouraged by either an art teacher or school counselor to apply for the MOWA Teen Council.

"I really like meeting different people and having that new network of friends," added Duren about the program.

Another exclusive opportunity that MOWA Teen Council members have is the access to engage with the state of Wisconsin arts community.

In March, MOWA took the Teen Council on a day trip to downtown Milwaukee and visited various art destinations throughout the city, such as Saint Kate—The Arts Hotel, Milwaukee Institute of Art and Design, and MARN (Milwaukee Arts Resource Network). The students met with artists, curators, staff and directors and expanded their knowledge on multiple avenues within the creative field of the arts.

Alongside this, the teens worked with the museum exhibiting artists to do hands-on workshops and art-making workshops that allowed them to practice and broaden their insight on different art mediums and practice. Council members had the chance to learn from professional working artists connected to Wisconsin like Nina Ghanbarzadeh, Kelly Alexander and Khari Turner, as they shared details of their professional career as an artist and their artistic techniques and skills.

The Teen council also collaborated and brainstormed to create the title and theme of MOWA's second annual teen exhibition – "The Weight We Carry: A Teen's Perspective on Resilience" – in which they considered commonalities among topics that are important to their peers.

With the many firsts around MOWA Teen Council, they finished their first group project, in which they conducted a "zine" project responding to the teen exhibition called The Weight We Carry Zine. A zine is a small publication that is often done as a do-it-yourself (DIY) publication. Zines have historically been used by non-mainstream voices as a creative and social outlet to express their thoughts, social commentary and art in an easy and accessible way.

The Teen Council's zine was a collaborative and personal narrative project that used watercolor, micron ink pens, poetry and Polaroid photos to re-conceptualize the idea of weight. Their zine examines themes of hope, change, transformation, memories and community.

The Teen Council has certainly impacted our Kewaskum seniors, as they all shared similar sentiments about how being a part of MOWA Teen Council has created a stronger sense of community by working with fellow local teens within the museum.

This fall, they all will continue to pursue their studies attending college. Duren plans to attend Marion University located in Fond du Lac as a communications major with a public relations and digital creative focus while playing rooster on their volleyball team. Avery Michaels will go to Milwaukee School of Engineering (MSOE) to study architecture engineering while continuing to make her art on the side. Logan Moris will attend the Milwaukee Institute of Art and Design for product design with dreams of one day to be a product designer.

"Teenagers are the future of the art exhibitions and teens play a very interesting role... they take the inspiration they get from art museums and make it their own," said Moris.

I believe teens and museums can share a valuable and mutual exchange of growing, learning, building and making a space that allows moments of community. From first-hand experience of once being a teenager who was once a part of museum teen programming, I found inspiration from art museums that pushed me to want to pursue a career in the arts. My hope is for the next generation of young people to find inspiration from art and let the space of a museum be that life-changing connection.

The current teen exhibition – "The Weight We Carry: A Teen's Perspective to Resilience" – will be on display at MOWA until July 3 of this year. The show exhibits regional high schools from across six counties that were invited to create art in response to the chosen theme.

The exhibition features artwork selected by each school's art educators.

Applications are now open for rising sophomores, juniors and seniors for the upcoming school year of MOWA Teen Council (2022-2023), visit the Museum of Wisconsin Art website – wisconsinart.org – for more information.

KHS Rocket Club Adventure Ends with Second-place Finish

BREANNA RICE

3-2-1, liftoff!

On May 6 and 7, the Kewaskum High School Rocket Club blasted off on a short journey to a competition called "Rockets 4 Schools" in Sheboygan. Calling themselves the Electro Bros, the Kewaskum team took second place in the Class II division.

Receiving second was no easy adventure for the club, as they had to prove themselves in many ways.

An Electro Bros advisor stated:

"Participants in the competition are judged on the construction of the rocket along with researching and designing an experiment to test in the payload area of the rocket. A presentation board documenting the construction is also critiqued. Research and work process gets noted. Finally, the students performed a skit and oral presentation in front of a panel of judges."

During the two-day journey, the Electro Bros were able to perform mission control duties while other teams launched their rockets.

In addition, the students listened to John Grunsfeld, a keynote speaker. The retired astronaut spoke about his time working for NASA.

The rocket club's mission was an overall success. An advisor stated, "This is the second year the club has participated in the competition at the high school level. Both years, the team qualified to participate in the NASA Student Launch Program."

There are less than T-365 days until the club's next mission!

LORI KREIS
KEWASKUM LIBRARIAN

Our Summer Learning Program has begun and I hope you and your family have registered. If you haven't there is still plenty of time. How does it work? This year we are again using Beanstack at Kewaskum.beanstack.org provided by a grant from the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction to track reading minutes. If you have used it before, look for this year's challenge, Oceans of Possibilities, to register or we can sign you up at the library. Kids and teens who register will receive a bag with coupon prizes. Adults who register will receive a coupon while supplies last.

For every hour read, participants will earn badges and an entry ticket for a basket raffle. There are 5 baskets for each age group, check out our website or come in for a complete list of prizes. When the reader completes 15 hours of reading, kids and teens will earn a free book from our prize cart and the first 10 adult readers that complete the challenge will receive a family pass to Schlitz Audubon Nature Center.

Besides the reading challenge, we will have programs every day each week for eight weeks except for Friday. We are happy to welcome back in-person performers that will accommodate large groups. Here are just some of our special events this summer.

Our teen programs are Mondays at 3 p.m. Some of the themes are candy sushi, glow in the dark party, shark week and a survivor island escape room. These are appropriate for ages 12-18 and no registration is necessary.

On Tuesdays, we will hold our kids' programs which will usually be in the library. Come in for a shipwreck escape room, tie-dye ocean art and a hula hoop dance class. These programs are best suited for children ages 5-12 and their parents/guardians.

Storytime will resume on Wednesdays at 10:30 a.m. We hope to hold it on the library lawn as we did last year, weather permitting, otherwise it will be in the community room. Besides stories, join us for songs, movement activities with the parachute and crafts. Although this is preschool storytime, parents can bring older siblings as it is enjoyed by all. Don't forget a blanket or lawn chairs.

Thursdays at 1 p.m. we will have family programs in the annex. Some of the presenters include the Community Rivers Program, Wisconsin Maritime Museum, 4-H of Washington County, Kohl's Wild Theater and Miss Kim's Amazing Animals. None of these programs require registration and are open to families and daycares.

For adults, look for the recipe club in July and August. We will have our popular iris folding program in June. In July, we will be joined by authors Ken and Barb Wardius for a lighthouse program. Both special programs require advanced registration and are appropriate for adults although older teens may also be interested.

For more information about our Summer Learning program, check out our website or come on in.

One Injured in Fire at Mike’s Auto

ANNE TRAUTNER
JOURNALIST

The Kewaskum Fire Department and Boltonville Fire Department responded to a fire at Mike’s Automotive Service at 1245 Fond Du Lac Ave. in Kewaskum on Tuesday morning, June 14.

One employee of the auto shop was transported to Froedtert West Bend Hospital with burns to his arms and face.

“The preliminary finding was that they were working on a gas tank, and the gas tank was removed from the vehicle. They were drilling a hole in it to drain the gas out of it,” Kewaskum Fire Chief Mark Groeschel said.

The fire could have been much worse, but fortunately Mike Dickmann, the owner of Mike’s

Auto, reacted well.
“It was some quick thinking by Mike. He used five or six extinguishers and knocked it out, so the fire was basically knocked down when we got here,” Groeschel said. “We did end up with a little extension of the fire in the area between the decking on the roof and the material underneath, so we pulled down some ceilings and applied water to put it out.”

Traffic on Fond du Lac Avenue was rerouted as firefighters responded to the scene.
There was some damage to the building and vehicles, but preliminary estimates were not available at press time.

KEWASKUM CELEBRATES 125 YEARS

The crowd interacts with a cyclist from the Wisconsin Wheelmen on Sunday, June 12, as the village came together to celebrate its 125th anniversary. The weekend-long event was supposed to be held in 2020, but organizers delayed all festivities until 2022 with the celebration running June 10-12 throughout Kewaskum.

Hundreds came to check out the Pioneer Encampment at River Hill Park. Many longtime residents will recall similar encampments and reenactors were the feature of Kewaskum village events of the past.

Michelle Reed of the Woodland Sky Native American Dancers dazzles onlookers with an authentic Native American dance in traditional gear.

Many tents and displays were set up at River Hill park for the public to observe. These encampments helped bring to life what the village may have looked (and smelled) like 125 years ago.

A horse and buggy set gets through the 125th anniversary parade.

Val Scrivner and Joie Liscano pose inside the Kewaskum Historical Society Museum. The two sisters are granddaughters of Maggie Kewaskum and gave a presentation about the Kewaskum family on Sunday, June 12.

quired by Waste Management for $4.6 billion in October of 2020.

The issues relating to the collection services ranged in severity by municipality, but those governing bodies that have chosen to switch (including Mayville and Horicon and a bevy of others) noted entire neighborhoods were skipped regularly and a lack of response to mounting questions and concerns.

Despite the challenges, Gitter reiterated that this was an amicable split.

He added that residents should expect their new GFL bins to show up around June 27 with Waste Management completing its last cycle in the village on June 29. He noted that the 29th is not a recycling collection day, but he asked all residents to put out their Waste Management recycling bins so that the company can collect them.

“Just leave [the recycling bins] out for the remainder of the week and a third party will pick them up,” said Gitter, adding that new recycling materials must be put in the GFL bins once received. “There will be a point when everyone has four bins.”

Gitter also noted, as was published in an earlier edition, residents can bring bulk garbage items to the West Bend Transfer Station – at 803 N. River Road in the City of West Bend – between the hours of 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. (Monday through Friday). A limit of two eligible items per visit is allowed. Contact the village – 262-626-3623 – for more details. The access to this bulk service does not replace the village’s annual bulk pick-up day.

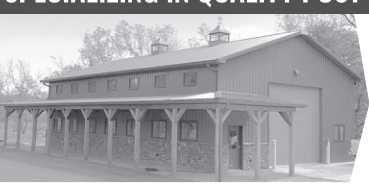

With the change over, commercial collection will be eliminated, and services will, also, no longer be provided to multi-family units of five or more. Gitter encouraged those losing services to stay tuned for information from the village and encouraged folks to call if they had questions.

While it can be a dirty job, someone really needs to do it, and village officials are eager to see GFL at work starting next month.

Going Back in Time to Have Some Fun, Hickory Golfers Enjoy Auburn Bluffs

MITCHELL BRADLEY KELLER
ACTING EDITOR

Anyone driving by Auburn Bluffs Golf Course just outside the Village of Campbellsport the morning of Saturday, June 4, may have had to do a double take at the ladies and gentlemen lining up for tee shots.

First, onlookers definitely noticed the attire – layered vintage clothing and frilly hats adorned golfers – and if that continued by-passers' curiosity, folks would have also noticed peculiar clubs hanging off the shoulders of those old-fashioned-dressed swingers and putters.

That's because the site played host to a hickory golf outing, a unique sporting experience where golfers forgo the modern titanium drivers and composite "woods" for actual wood-made clubs more common in an era roughly 100 years ago.

Jim "Wally" Koss was one of the attendees of the event, and he has been hickory golfing for nearly one decade. Koss, from Green Bay, makes a point to travel across the state for such events. The unique experience, he said, is part history (learning the old form of the game he loves so much) but mostly just fun.

"When I got this 'disease' about nine years ago, I resurrected the nickname 'Wally,'" joked Koss, saying tongue-in-cheek that his obsession with hickory golf had become a sickness. "We're just having fun."

It was a sentiment echoed by the roughly two dozen golfers from that early Saturday morning, all of which wore delighted smiles even before taking their first hacks – the unique garb certainly serves as an icebreaker for those in the group meeting for the first time.

For Koss, the joy of playing with refurbished or specialized clubs (often older than those swinging them) comes as much from the camaraderie as it does success on the links.

"We've become like brothers. It's been a great journey," said Koss. "Hickory, to me, takes the modern competitiveness out."

One such brother, Dan Norstedt of Eau Claire, said that, while the use of clubs from a different century levels the playing field, it doesn't make winning any less sweet.

"If you stick around to the end, those near the top of the standings are going to get a little bit more competitive," he said with a laugh.

The clubs, for the most part, are made in the present day with the specifications of century-old clubs, though older clubs can be fixed up to be made playable, again.

There are only a few professional makers of these items, still, which can drive up the price to participate pretty quickly. Luckily, an accepting and understanding group is the hickory golfers, and one should simply ask one how he or she can get clubs (and the answer is probably a lot easier than you think).

Dave Long, who lives just outside of Campbellsport, was the organizer for this month's event. He leads the Wisconsin Copper Cuppers, a smaller hickory group that plays locally, and both Norstedt and Koss were extremely grateful for him carrying the torch. All three men noted that collecting the clubs does take time, but they said they're always happy to loan them out, help refurbish or sell select items to beginners.

"Dave Long is extraordinary," said Koss, who noted that Long took an interest in the hobby during a chance encounter with Koss. Koss gave Long an old hickory ball, and at another run-in in the future, Long approached Koss about how he could obtain his own hickory set.

"The 'disease' grew," joked Koss, who said his wife was happy when he started lending out his clubs, even selling a few to new hickory friends. He estimated, at one point, he had more than 500 clubs, so he was happy when Long asked if he could obtain four sets of clubs. "Dave is a people person, an organizer. He works on clubs. He's an extraordinary asset for hickory golfers. I knew they were in good hands."

Norstedt said, for himself (an experienced and successful modern golfer), the chance to use older clubs was a unique challenge that he welcomed.

"I just kept up with it, and the organization is so strong that it's easy to find events and keep growing your collection," he said, adding that he relies on the Wisconsin Hickory Golfers organization, which Long's Copper Cuppers belong to, to stay in touch with friends and find future outings.

Among the more interesting aspects of the games are the clothes and clubs, for sure, but specialized balls are also used and, in some iterations, tees are not allowed. Instead, golfers prop the ball up on sand or dirt (as was common in the early 1900s).

“Sometimes we play with feathery balls made of goose feathers,” added Koss.

Whatever the scenario, though, it’s all about the hugs, high-fives and encouragement. There was not a frown to be seen when this group finally teed off on June 4, and the post-round gathering at the Auburn Bluffs Clubhouse appeared well attended with plenty of door prizes, food and beverage to go around.

Long said it best, though, and while there is a “novelty” element to dressing up and swinging old-style clubs, it is not a joy that wears off with extended play.

“When a person is involved with golf, and if they get introduced to hickory, it just opens up a whole new world for them. They’re going to find out what it was like to play 100 to 200 years ago, and everybody is always surprised at how well they can play,” said Long, adding that transitioning to the “old game” isn’t an immense challenge for experienced or intermediate golfers. “It really isn’t a real big difference. Instead of hitting your drive 250 yards, you might hit it 210 yards. You get involved with the history of the game, and it’s just a real nice hobby.”

Long added that there is a good blend of diversity among the group with players of all ages, men and women, all joining the fun.

“I got two young guys that are in their 30s, and they’re pretty good players, but they sold their modern set and [hickory] is all they play now,” he said, adding that beginners to hickory golf might even have grandpa’s old set in the basement, which could be refurbished or updated to use today. “It’s quite the process, but it’s something I’d be happy to help people out with.”

Long encouraged anyone interested in trying out hickory golf to give him a call at 920-

979-5055. He said folks might be interested in checking out the Wisconsin Hickory Golfers Facebook page, as well, which has details from recent outings, as well as information on the sport in general. Long’s group will play locally throughout the summer season, but he is also looking forward to expanding the Auburn Bluffs outing into an annual tradition, and he expects it could sell out next season if there’s enough interest.

“We might have to cap it at 36 people, but I’d love to expand,” said Long. “And Auburn Bluffs is such a beautiful course. It was a really great day.”

Rookies

June 7

This was a hard game to watch, as Kewaskum lost 17-0.

Our girls were not ready for such a great team and, unfortunately, we were not given the opportunity to get a run in.

We had two new pitchers this game after Schnabel started us off for the first two innings.

Pierce pitched our third inning and did great; we hope to see her pitch some more in the future.

In the fourth inning, Wagner pitched her first game, as well. She did great, however, Bishop came in and finished pitching the end of fourth inning.

Minors - Green

June 9

Kewaskum Indians Minors's Green three pitchers didn't allow a single hit, as they defeated Kewaskum Indians Minors white, 11-0, on Thursday. Sybil Gadouas induced a groundout from Marley to get the last out of the game.

Kewaskum Indians Minors Green secured the victory thanks to eight runs in the fourth inning. The offensive onslaught came from singles by Jasmine Wulff and Ruby McCain, doubles by Kendal Schnabel and Daphne Wolff and a walk by Eva Lemmer.

Kewaskum Indians Minors Green put up eight runs in the fourth inning. The offense in the inning was led by Eva Lemmer, Jasmine Wulff, Ruby McCain, Kendal Schnabel and Daphne Wolff, who all drove in runs in the inning.

Ruby McCain got the start for the Kewaskum Indians Minor Green as the pitcher went three innings, allowing zero runs on zero hits and striking out six.

Lacey Krejcarek was in the circle for Kewaskum Indians Minors White. She surrendered three runs on one hit over two innings, striking out four. Sydney threw one and one-third innings in relief.

and, now five days later, is still alive and well.

I start fishing/hunting for big gills, but all I catch is very small gills and perch.

I move a lot; I'm running out of daylight and have no idea where I will camp.

On my fifth move, I catch what I believe was a 10-inch sumo, pigasauras gill, and I no longer care if Rebel and I die, as I am in heaven.

I catch two more and must find a place to camp. I accomplish that goal and, of course, throw out lines while unloading and building camp. I catch seven of the fattest most beautiful, hogasauras, piglets (bluegill/sunfish) in the world.

At dark, I retreat to my tent with Rebel and her mother.

I honestly felt that I may expire in my sleeping bag.

MONDAY, JUNE 6

HIGH: 71, LOW: 48

Today the weather was picture perfect, and I did not lose my health until midday.

I had the pleasure of fishing with my friend, Ed Smith, who was the longtime owner and operator of Northwoods Insurance in nearby Crandon. Ed sponsored my column for many years and that is how we met.

Ed is a golden retriever fan and interacted perfectly with the pups, as we spent a day in the boat and caught some beautiful gills and sunfish. I think it is very cool to see a person in my age bracket that has stayed an outdoors person and now gets to enjoy a healthy retirement.

Naturally, after Ed left, I became very sick and the bluegill spawn literally ended. Between the rest of the afternoon and the next morning, I only caught four keepers, and I could tell the spawn, at least for this lake, was over for 2022.

So, I get sick again - about the time I get to where Rebel about met her Waterloo earlier - load the trailer and boat, drive to Abbotsford to BBD Sporting Goods, get me a barrel of bait, some peanut butter and scent (the peanut butter spilled in the back of my truck and it's ugly).

I drive to bear central which, in some cases, like on this day, is not where you should be pulling an 18.6 boat with a 90 Etec on the back, and I honestly felt like I could fall over dead and become bear food!

After all the trials and tribulations of the last 10 days, one of my baits has bears hitting it like crazy. Obviously, some of these bruins, according to the pictures, are well aware that it is the breeding season.

In short, I had some world class photos.

The next morning, I was back to the doctor and found out I have an upper respiratory infection, and today I feel like the undertaker may have to wait a while before burning me up!

Jake's Fishing Day

Jake's Fishing Day was held on Saturday, June 4.

The annual event took place at Riverhill Park in Kewaskum.

The day was sponsored by the Gateway Gobblers, a chapter of the National Wild Turkey Federation (NWTF). This group works hard to encourage kids to spend time outside. The NWTF created a program called Juniors Acquiring Knowledge, Ethics and Sportsmanship (JAKES), to organize fun and engaging ways for kids to spend time outdoors.

Jake's Fishing Day invites children to fish in the Milwaukee River from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

The morning of the event, the Gateway Gobblers purchased 400 bluegills and released them. This year, more than 65 kids were registered to participate in the fisheriee.

As kids caught fish, volunteers helped measure and record the size of the bluegills. Cousin Subs sandwiches were provided for participants along with water and soda, which was provided by Geidel's Piggly Wiggly.

At the end of the event, trophies were awarded to the child who caught the biggest fish in each age category.

The biggest fish, overall, was caught by Harrison Wenninger and was recorded at 10-inches long.

I am driving on interstate 39 near Stevens Point and pulling my 18.6 War Eagle. My plan is to camp on a lake in Oneida County near Three Lakes and fish sumo bluegill on the spawning beds.

I am sick as H.E.-double-toothpicks and have been for eight days. I had a covid test and that was negative, but major headaches, lung and throat issues.

I was going to turn around and go home, but I stick with the plan; I should not be driving.

she is crazy as my buddy Marty Haney was back in high school (Marty died too young!).

Two days ago, Red was chewing on something, it was a very old chunk of mouse poison. I made a call, was told to get two tablespoons of hydrogen peroxide down her throat and, five minutes later, Rebel barfed up the poison. Just two minutes after that, she was in her non-stop world of attacking her mother.

I am at a remote landing on a beautiful lake, and all I want to do is sleep. I launch my boat, which is loaded with camping gear. I tell Ruby and Rebel to stay, and as I am slowly pulling my empty trailer out of the water, Rebel decides to disobey orders and is completely run over by the trailer.

I figure Rebel is going to die on the same day as her master at a remote launch on a beautiful lake. Rebel squirms into some weeds but is okay. She crawls over to me, and right when Rebel sees Ruby – her biggest adversary – Rebel attacks her
