CCT to Present 'Murder on the Rerun'

Campbellsport Community Theater presents "Murder on the Rerun," a mystery/comedy that takes a different approach to mystery as a ghost tries to find out who murdered her in suspenseful look at the upper crust of Hollywood.

"See if you can figure out who done it?" challenges the cast and crew.

The mystery/comedy will be performed at Campbellsport High School's Lang Auditorium on Thursday, Aug. 4, and Friday, Aug. 5, at 7 p.m., and on Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door and are available at True Value Home and Hardware in Campbellsport, as well as from cast members, or by calling 920-533-4375.

Jane Ackerly is found dead at the bottom of the stairs. An accident, or was it murder? She insists she was pushed. Four friends and her husband were there.

Who could have done it – the leading man (Nick Timm), the ingenue (Hannah Thelen), the middle aged actress (Izzy Sabish), the arrogant director (Brady Bania) or the reigning Hollywood gossip columnist (Mercedes Herrmann)? Who had the motive? Kitty (Samantha Zimdahl) is here to advise and assist Jane (Emily Reigle) to figure it out.

Kewaskum Women's Club Announces Beautification Awards

BREANNA RICE
JOURNALIST

The annual Beautification Awards were given out at the Kewaskum Village Board meeting on Monday, July 18.

Village Board president, David Spenner, and Gwendolyn Dreher, Women's Club member, presented the four awards.

Every summer, the Kewaskum Women's Club distributes plaques to residents who they believe have exceptional landscaping and décor. According to club members, choosing the recipients of the Beautification Awards is a difficult task.

The ladies spend an entire day driving around Kewaskum looking at all of the residences and writing down their top choices for each award.

After lots of discussion, four houses are chosen for the following awards: Creative use of Landscape Materials and Shrubs, Floral Shrubbery and Tree Arrangement, Colorful Floral and Selection of Design and Lawn Ornaments and Décor.

There is also a Business Beautification award.

The Asset of Time

Dear Reader,

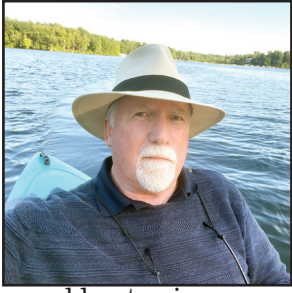

Time is our greatest asset.

Health, family, friendships, wealth, mental acumen – while these and other endowments are truly valuable assets to have, without time we could not enjoy or use them.

In aging, we begin to realize the importance of time as a dimension that governs our lives. As our allotted portion dwindles, we begin to appreciate this most precious of gifts. Let us go forth and squeeze the joy out of each day!

Due Diligence: Know Your Covenants and Restrictions

AL WISNEFSKE
BROKER/OWNER, LAND &
LEGACY GROUP LLC

Last week, I was working on a new listing in Dodge County.

This particular property is part of an older subdivision in which the seller has owned it for about 20 years. When I asked him about covenants and restrictions, he was unsure and believed it just followed the county zoning.

While this could be true, and the average agent would probably roll with that, my gut and experience told me there probably was something recorded.

Not every county has the best online file system, but upon looking deeper at the recorded documents, there was quite a bit recorded for this property. This revealed that there were not only recorded covenants and restrictions, but they were also amended from time to time. They weren't super restrictive, but it very much affects the property.

All of these documents and everything else I found and prepared will go into our "Property Information Packet" and be made available to buyers.

This is why I do so much due diligence prior to listing a property.

What's not to love about driving round these parts during the dog days of summer? Whether across gently rolling slopes or down in the bottomlands, everything is green and growing. Well, almost everything.

Truth be told, the landscape is like a giant patchwork quilt. Stitched with squares of corn, alfalfa and a lot of oats this year. Their golden stalks offer a pleasant break among the various hues of green. Does the corn seem to be growing slower? Maybe the fields were too wet to sow seed earlier. At any rate, the old expression knee high to an elephant's eye doesn't apply.

This writer is vaguely surprised by neighboring farms which plant the same crop in the same fields every year. Didn't these farmers participate in the FFA when they were in school? Despite my living all my life in the country, I remain largely ignorant of agriculture's ways and means. But one thing I do know is the theory of crop rotation. Some take nutrients out of the

Reader Requests Milwaukee River be at Forefront of Kewaskum Vision Meeting

In this advent of revisioning Kewaskum, our village leadership has requested villager participation on August 3.

Hearing this call, my experience goes directly to this river, which we were founded on 127 years ago. From the beginning, and now more than ever, we remember: "A river runs through us."

Here is a perspective on community rivers with some questions to ponder, as well as an invitation to the visioning meeting:

- Rivers are of inherent importance to communities, beautiful and powerful systems of tremendous and unquantifiable aesthetic value.

- Rivers connect and unify communities.

- Rivers are the connection between environmental quality and human well-being. It has been said that a river's "flow" reaches deeply into the human consciousness. Is it perhaps the energy involved in the flow of the river, or is it the flow itself that is suggestive of a living entity to have a relationship with?

- Rivers around the world are recently being recognized legally as "persons" meaning that, under the law, they can be ascribed certain rights that can be enforced, which protect them as a vital life force. Water is life! Indeed, this freshwater is a gift that welcomes reciprocity for her care. What is your relationship with the river... any river?

- Rivers capture human fascination. Their network-like structure noted to parallel the human circulatory or nervous systems of our own bodies.

- Rivers remind us that everything flows, and the nature of "reality" is ever-changing.

- Rivers reflect a fascination as a source of abundance, or devastation when we do not care for their flow.

- Rivers are the central theme in human religions, mythology and culture. Books, poems, movies and art reflect deep connection between rivers and the human experience.

Sadly, we have bent rivers to our will and transported ourselves to an era of water shortages, habitat loss and species extinctions.

We mow to the river's edge where habitat is lost. We spray herbicides that flow to our river.

Many have entrained minds to see River Hill Park as a static pond rather than a river which depends on the movement of the water.

When I stand near her side, she receives whatever I need to let go of in life. When I am out for a quiet paddle, my oars come in, I let go and, playfully, I am curious where my boat will go and what I will experience. I hear anglers have similar experiences. I always come alive in/near the water.

How might we, the villagers of Kewaskum, place our attention on this river as gift? Build our relationship with it? Engage with it? Touch it? Be inspired by its sacredness?

Are we a "gateway" to someplace else?

Perhaps it is time to consider that this is about ecology of place. Young families want to grow roots in place, here and now. Perhaps, we consider "A River Runs Through Us" as our mark of community in this world.

Bring your lively "river heart" to the village planning meeting Aug. 3, 6 p.m., at the village's Annex building (and consider wearing something blue so that we can find each other).

Speak your vision of building a new generation of community focused on water as a gift knowing that what we place our attention on will grow... for the joy of it!

See you there.

Respectfully submitted,

Peggy Kober

Premonition or Providential?

CLARICE CASE
JOURNALIST

Last weekend, I was trying to explain to someone this cool phenomenon that I have experienced many times. In the moment, I could not think of a recent example, but even with my best attempt at an explanation, he could not relate.

The next day, I was watching a YouTube video, and one of the focal points within the video was entertainer/magician David Blaine. They were referencing some of his stunts: being buried alive, being frozen in ice and living inside a box for 30 days with no food.

I knew who David Blaine was, but, to my knowledge, I had never heard about these endurance acts he had performed in the past. If I had, I had forgotten. The only magic tricks that come to mind when I think of Blaine are ones that make you want to look away, but you can't.

It was only a few hours later when I turned on the TV.

I saw one of my favorite shows, Bob's Burgers, was on Fox. I had already watched this episode, but each time you watch this show, you catch something you had not seen or heard the last time (there is a good chance I was on my phone the first time I watched it, as well).

It was episode 20, "Sauce Side Story", from season 12, and it opens in the Belcher's kitchen on Mother's Day. Bob, the father, is making breakfast while the kids have a conversation about the last-minute card Tina, the oldest child, made for her mom. About a minute later, Linda, the mother, walks in holding a box, she sets it on the table, and Gene, her son, asks, "What's in the box? Is it a tiny little David Blaine?"

I couldn't believe the timing.

First, the thing I had just tried to explain the day before happened the next and, second, it was just hours between receiving new information on the subject before it coincidentally popped up again.

However, it was not all that unbelievable, because this has happened to me before.

I learn something new and hours, or even days, later it conveniently comes up somewhere else.

Has anyone else experienced this phenomenon, or is it just me?

soil. Others put them back in.

Perhaps, beside the fact their cows produce so much dung, it's the reason why they spread the liquid manure on those fields so heavily. Maybe I'm wrong but aren't they burning out the land? Not to mention risking runoff into the ground water table.

Perhaps one of the sights to behold which is enjoyed most is the fiery blaze of tiger lilies along the roadsides. The DNR has declared them an invasive species. Which probably makes them ripe for eradication. Though I think the rural areas won't be near as beautiful without their carefree orange blooms.

Such are the signs of a thriving and robust earth. But the time to get out there and enjoy them is now. Before the gleaners descend like locusts to strip fields bare. Spewing out both kernels and chaff.

Courtney Timblin, a 33-year-old Kewaskum native, has been named one of Arizona's Most Eligible Phoenicians. Timblin, who currently lives in the Phoenix area, was one of 14 singles recently featured in the magazine Arizona Foothills. A friend nominated Courtney, and then a representative from the magazine called her and asked a host of questions. No one has been more thrilled about the distinction than Courtney's father, Kewaskum resident Tom Timblin. She said her father is hoping the title will help her find a husband as he wants grandchildren. Two of Courtney's three siblings are married, but none of the four has a child. Courtney works as a director of operations for U Konserve, which manufactures and designs food storage containers.

On July 28, the attendant on duty at Kewaskum Citgo stated to police that a male subject entered the gas station after closing time, displayed a firearm, and ordered her to the ground. Not only were there two pages of pictures depicting the fun of the Washington County Fair, there were also a couple of stories dedicated to the event. One of the stories was about the use of new technology to judge livestock. For the first time, carcass ultrasounds were done on the market steers, hogs and lambs at the fair. The ultrasounds were used to predict carcass composition in live animals at the fair. According to Stephanie Plaster, agriculture educator for the University of Wisconsin-Extension, it's a way to look at the live carcass instead of having to slaughter it. The other article was about the performance of the Aerotek BMX Stunt Team, which performed despite wind gusts up to 24 mph.

Boltonville Firecrackers July Update

ELLIE STEINERT
BOLTONVILLE FIRECRACKERS REPORTER

Hi, this month is very busy for all 4-H members – it's FAIR time! Most of our meeting time was spent working on fair projects.

We split into two groups to work on some things. Some members worked on the club scrapbook and some members worked on the club booth. The scrapbook is full of pictures of things we did this year as a club. The club booth will showcase different projects you can do in 4-H. We made little cars and people to add for decorations. Both things can be found at the fair in the Ziegler Building, be sure to check them out.

We had two demonstrations during the meeting. The first demonstration was from Layla. She taught us about the dog project. She even brought her dog along. The second demonstration was from Taylor. She taught us about cake decorating.

All our members have been working very hard this month as we get ready for the fair. We hope you will be able to go to the fair because it is full of lots of great things – like the animal exhibits and youth projects found in the Ziegler Building. Many of the Boltonville Firecrackers will be there throughout the week with our tie-dye shirts on. If you see us, be sure to say hello!

July 9- DC: Officers responded to Kiwanis Park for an unruly parent swearing and yelling during a baseball tournament. Officers made contact with the male subject who also appeared to have been drinking alcohol. The male subject was initially uncooperative with officers when asked to step away from the crowd so the officer could speak with him. The subject was cited for Disorderly Conduct and ordered to leave the park with his family. He crumbled up the citation and left as directed.

Most communities celebrate National Night Out by hosting block parties, festivals, parades, cook-outs and other various community events with safety demonstrations, seminars, youth events, visits from emergency personnel, exhibits and more.

National Project Coordinator, Matt Peskin said, "This is a night for our nation to stand together and promote awareness, safety, and neighborhood unity. National Night Out showcases the vital importance of police-community partnerships and citizen involvement. When law enforcement and the community work closely together, some amazing things can happen."

W.S.P. July Law of the Month Reminds Drivers that When Speed Increases, Dangers on the Roads Increase

WISCONSIN STATE PATROL CONTRIBUTOR

Excessive speed is one of the most common causes of traffic crashes. Speed-related crashes in Wisconsin were up 10% in 2021; 186 people died and 6,871 were hurt in 17,597 crashes involving speed.

"Crashes are more dangerous and can be more deadly when a driver is speeding," State Patrol Superintendent Anthony Burrell said. "Speed contributed to about a third of all deaths on Wisconsin roads last year. We can't let these preventable tragedies continue. We need drivers to slow down and be patient on the roads."

Slowing down allows a driver to better maintain control of the vehicle and provides more time and distance to avoid a potential crash.

State law requires drivers to follow posted speed limits. Law enforcement can also cite a driver for going too fast for conditions when there are hazards like weather, construction, or visibility issues.

Wisconsin State Patrol (WSP) troopers and inspectors handed out more than 49,000 speeding citations in 2021 and issued more than 22,000 so far this year.

States across the country have seen a rise in risky driving behaviors like excessive speeding during the pandemic, which ultimately led to more crash injuries and fatalities.

Wisconsin State Patrol issued more than double the number of 100-plus mph citations in 2020 compared to 2019. The number rose again in 2021.

"There is no reason to drive so fast. It is reckless and puts the entire community at risk. We ask drivers to put safety first every time you get behind the wheel," Superintendent Burrell said.

Speeding is dangerous and costly. A citation comes with hundreds of dollars in fines, in addition to demerit points on your license and increased insurance premiums.

Wisconsin will partner with other states in the Midwest to address speed concerns for Speed Awareness Day on July 27. Law enforcement agencies in the region will focus on reducing crashes, preventing injuries, and saving lives through proactive enforcement and public awareness.

Perfect Excuses

ROY SMALLEY
CONTRIBUTOR

We adopted our first child in 2010 – a darling two-and-a-half-year-old girl from China with a round little face, an amazing smile... and a scream that could shatter plate glass.

She was the most tiny and beautiful and terrifying thing on the planet; not just because I was clueless about being a parent, but because she had spina bifida, a disease we knew next to nothing about when deciding to adopt her.

We didn't know what challenges she would face as she grew up; we only knew what we were told: She would never walk.

Fortunately, no one told her.

When the naysayers "nay'ed," she "yes way'ed" and was walking unassisted before her third birthday.

Her entire life, she has been oblivious to limitations and ignorant of boundaries – smashing barriers she didn't even know existed and surprising everyone along the way.

My daughter is my hero.

This week is the 32nd anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), and July 26 is "National Disability Independence Day" – a federally recognized day celebrating the 1990 signing of the ADA by President George H.W. Bush.

For me, watching, not only my daughter, but, anyone with disabilities overcome seemingly insurmountable obstacles is a reminder that our excuses are often just that: excuses. Stories we tell ourselves to justify our own inaction.

"We have more ability than willpower," said François de la Rochefoucauld, "and it is often an excuse to ourselves that we imagine that things are impossible."

I hear a lot of "exercise excuses" in my line of work. In fact, three-of-five Americans regularly make excuses about why they can't exercise. Sometimes these are legitimate, but usually they are tales about what people imagine they can't do, or feel they don't have.

Like: "I'm too tired."

The law of inertia says an object in motion will tend to remain in motion, while an object at rest remains at rest. This is true for people: the more you avoid exercise, the harder it is to get yourself to exercise.

Here's the thing, though: Rather than use up your little remaining stamina, exercise actually boosts your energy levels.

In University of Georgia research, regular low-intensity exercise significantly increased energy levels and reduced fatigue. Even if you're "overworked," the science clearly shows that moving helps you feel energetic – while also improving sleep, which can leave you even more rested when the alarm goes off.

So ditch the canned wake-me-up beverages: Simply walking around the block a few times or spending 20 minutes on an exercise bike first thing in the morning gives you a better daily boost than that "energy" drink or triple espresso.

As a bonus, not buying those caffeinated beverages every day will keep extra cash in your wallet – which brings me to my next excuse:

"I can't afford a gym membership."

Believe it or not, people were exercising long before gyms were even a thing!

There are so many ways to be active without going to the gym, including walking or running, body-weight exercises, at-home exercise DVDs or free workouts on your favorite video website.

Biking is great exercise! To keep it up year-round, I purchased an indoor bike trainer at a thrift shop for about 20 bucks. With my road bike mounted in the frame, I can pedal away to my favorite streaming shows.

For gym-free workout ideas, visit my website and look for the link to my "At-Home Virtual Workouts," all of which can be done with no special equipment.

"I don't have time."

Many studies have focused on the benefits of 20-30 minutes of exercise – and the data show that as little as 20 minutes significantly benefits your heart, brain and metabolism.

I'll be brutally honest here: If you've got time to scroll Instagram for 20 minutes, you've got time to get out for a walk, or to ride that elliptical you're currently using as a clothes hanger.

A similar excuse is "I have kids."

This is all the more reason you should be making time! Not only because exercise helps bust stress and improve your emotional stability, but because your health has a direct effect on your children: A child with one obese parent has a 50% chance of becoming obese. With two obese parents, that becomes an 80% chance.

If you want to protect your kids' health, it's vital that you protect your own.

There are countless "perfect excuses" to avoid exercise and self-care. When it comes to fitness, though, anything is better than nothing, and consistency is better than perfection.

Consistency is another word for "habit."

Remember, as always, that we don't decide our future; we decide our habits, and our habits determine our future.

Greetings from the Campbellsport Library!

On July 20, Jackie Scharfenberg from the Kettle Moraine State Forest Northern Unit, Joined us at the library for Fish Tales. Jackie read a story to the children and then they participated in a craft activity and were measured to see what kind of fish they might be. Children were then “tagged” and released to go magnet fishing in the morning and to practice casting with a real pole outside in the afternoon! We have so enjoyed having all of these wonderful guests at the library this summer and look forward to even more fun in the upcoming weeks. For a look at what’s coming up in August see the list below.

Here’s what’s coming up for kids during the next couple of weeks!

Check It Out!

LORI KREIS
KEWASKUM LIBRARIAN

Around this time of year, publishers advertise beach reads for our patrons. What truly is a beach read? Originally, it started as a marketing term for publishers about 30 years ago, promoting summer titles. I cringe when I think of a library book on an actual beach with water because I know I would end up getting it wet and sandy. Beach reads have become stereotypically synonymous with women's fiction, but I disagree. For me, a beach read is a book you read to relax. For some that could be a cozy mystery or intense thriller. For others it may be a travelogue, powerful biography or yes, women's fiction. Here are some of our new beach reads coming to you in August.

In adult fiction, Emma Donoghue releases Haven a historical novel that centers around three men in seventh century Ireland who travel hoping to leave the sinful world behind. They end up on an isolated island inhabited by thousands of birds and must rely on their faith to survive. The Housekeeper is a domestic thriller written by Joy Fielding. In this novel, hard-working Jodi hires a housekeeper to care for her aging parents who eventually take over their lives and not in a good way. Set in 18th century Amsterdam, The House of Fortune is a stand-alone companion novel to Jessie Burton's The Miniaturist. Read about Thea as a new adult and how she deals with her difficult home life by escaping to the theaters. A Most Anticipated Book of 2022 is Anthony Marra's Mercury Pictures Presents. This is touted as an epic tale of a women who reinvents herself when she moves from Mussolini's Italy to Hollywood. Look for more new book releases by Danielle Steel, William Kent Krueger, James Patterson and Sarah Addison Allen.

For non-fiction beach reads, be on the lookout for biographies, science works and music history. Dangerous Rhythms: Jazz and the Underworld written by T.J. English is an engaging narrative telling the symbiotic story of jazz and the underworld, some of it forged in America's most notorious crime districts. With some fascinating astronomical events coming in August, read up on our galaxy in The Milky Way by Moira McTier. This book is categorized as a tell-all autobiography of The Milky Way and its history and future. If you think you know all there is about the Titanic's disaster, you may be surprised to learn hidden facts in Sinkable: Obsession, the Deep Sea, and the Shipwreck of the Titanic. Daniel Stone uncovers the story of the Titanic, not as a ship, but a shipwreck to help readers understand not only how it occurred but also what is happening with the decomposition of the vessel. Whether your beach read occurs during a warm summer evening on your patio, in a sailboat on a lake or on a beach, I hope it's relaxing and enjoyable but watch out for water and sand.

BICYCLE REPORT

that the program was costing the state $7 million over a two-year period. Conversely, streets built with the needs of all users in mind are a proactive investment in public health and safety and in the $2.52 billion-dollar economic engine that is Wisconsin's cycling industry.

Wisconsin's full report card can be found at <https://drive.google.com/drive/folders/1hNS1CKRei1skdulyNFRcFjp7q8Z1HL8b>. A D+ average is a poor reflection of Wisconsin's outdoor recreation reputation, strong bicycle manufacturing heritage and the spirit of our committed cycling community. Cycling is good for Wisconsinites, and good for Wisconsin's economy. The University of Wisconsin 2019 study concludes that cycling contributes over $2.52 billion dollars to our economy each year.

With projects in every corner of our state waiting to be completed, now is the time to act for Wisconsin cyclists. While the legislature is currently out of session, engaging with state elected officials on the importance of cycling options, infrastructure, and safety is necessary to turn the wheel and get our state back on course.

The following are articles from the July 24, 1947 edition of the Campbellsport News. The pieces are largely unedited and display the style and convention used "back in the day."

The Jr. Belles broke into the winning column Saturday when they defeated LeRoy by a score of 10 to 2.

This was the Jr's first win in eleven starts. George Yerk was the winning pitcher and though he allowed the visitors two runs via walks, no one on the LeRoy team got a hit.

Except for the 5th and 9th inning, Yerk was the master of the game. Schlaefer was Yerk's battery mate.

Jim Wondra doubled once and singled twice in five times at bat, while Burgert and Andy Wondra each had two for five.

I couldn't help Dan, and he couldn't help me. We were on our own, and that's how it had to be.

Our rifles were a real problem, because they hung up on the mountain wall and it was very hard to lift them over our heads and find a place for them to rest.

Dan's seven millimeter got most of its front sight worn off and hundreds of scars in the stock. The last hour of our experience had both of us praying, scared to death and – in the back of our minds – thinking that at least one of us wasn't going to make it out alive.

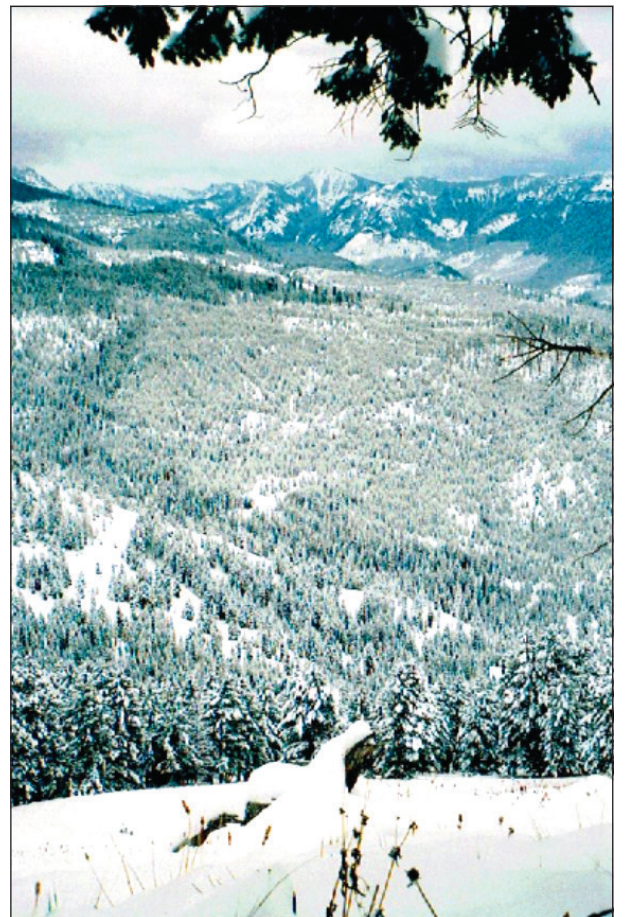

I was generally about 20 feet above Dan and scared I was going to take him out with a falling rock or my own falling body. Once, I caused an estimated 25 pound rock to directly fall and strike Dan on the shoulder. I hopelessly watched my buddy do what I figured was his death fall, and then miraculously catch himself.

To make a long story short, we made that climb, hit the top with eight inches of snow, darkness moments away, and we were physically and mentally shot.

Sixteen inches of snow fell, and the next morning's elk hunting was not a top priority for either of us.

This was the most dangerous experience Dan Berry or I have ever had in our lives.

New York Yankees to Hold Tryouts for Young Players

KEWASKUM STATESMAN
JULY 25, 1947

The following are articles from the July 25, 1947 edition of the Kewaskum Statesman. The pieces are largely unedited and display the style and convention used "back in the day."

Young baseball players, 16 to 22 years of age, seeking an opportunity to enter the ranks of professional baseball through the New York Yankees organization will have the opportunity of attending a tryout camp Wednesday and Thursday, July 30-31, sponsored by the Yankees at fairgrounds park, Fond du Lac, home of the Panthers in the State league.

Scouts Wally Berger and Joe McDermott and Manager Jimmy Adlam will be in charge of the two-day session from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. Players seeking tryouts must report with gloves, shoes, and uniforms and must pay their own expenses unless signed to a farm club contract.

Batting practice, infield work-outs, running, throwing, and actual games will comprise the tryout camp program. High school seniors, college players, amateurs, and semi-pros are urged to attend the Yankee camp.

Rain Causes All K.M. Games to be Postponed

KEWASKUM STATESMAN
JULY 25, 1947

The Kewaskum Utensils' scheduled game at Random Lake and all other games in the Kettle Moraine league were postponed Sunday due to rain and wet grounds.

This makes two Sundays in succession the team has been idle, having also called off their game at Adell the week before.

The Utensils now have two games to make up at the end of the season.

Kewaskum still holds first place in the circuit with 6 won and 1 lost, followed by the Campbellsport Belles with 6 and 2.

All teams will swing into action again this Sunday, weather permitting.

Kewaskum will meet the last place Campbellsport Athletics at Campbellsport. Other games are Adell at Waucousta, Random Lake at Belgium, and Campbellsport Belles (southern) at St. Cloud (northern).

Miracle on a Montana Mountain

MARK WALTERS
COLUMNIST

It seems some of the best trips I go on begin with adversity of some sort.

This week, you will find out that my Montana elk hunt began in a very scary way.

SATURDAY, OCT. 23, 2004

HIGH: 41, LOW: 20

Our plan was a simple one, or so it seemed to us, for our self-guided elk and mule deer hunt in the Gallatin National Forest near Bozeman, Montana.

Jeff Neitzel and a friend of his, Dan Clark of Belgrade, Montana, planned to hike about 10,000 feet and spend the night before the opener on the mountain. They hoped that at sunrise, hunters climbing the mountain would push elk toward them.

Dan Berry of New Lisbon and I would make the climb together and set up a quick camp with the same plan. Our base camp is a simple and comfortable cabin at the foot of the mountain.

We woke up this morning to a light snow fall. By the time we parked Dan's truck at about 6,000 feet, there were four inches on the ground, and it was adding up fast.

Dan and I were supposed to follow a rocky creek in a mountain gorge leading to the top.

At some point on the planned two-and-a-half-hour trek to just about 10,000 feet, we were supposed to cut to our left to a forested area.

Bad luck came our way when blinding snow combined with fog and a lack of knowledge of the area caused Dan and I to miss the forested and safe route.

What happened over the next three hours is still very difficult for me to write about. I hand wrote this story four days later from a mountain top.

Thinking we were on the right course, Dan and I came to a very narrow spot in the canyon where the only way up was to spread our arms and legs and shimmy up the side of the mountain. Thinking our challenge would be short – while carrying 35-pound packs and rifles – we made the 100-foot vertical climb.

At this point, visibility was down to about 300 feet, and we came to a rock wall that we thought would end after another 50 yards of dangerous climbing. Dan and I made the climb by putting our rifles above us on the mountain wall and literally scaling the rock wall two feet at a time.

Snow that had now accumulated to six inches and made grabbing and holding onto rocks just as terrifying as any fall would have been. With both of us clinging to a rock, we realized a fact neither of us will ever forget: We couldn't climb down and had a 1,000-foot wall to scale.

We had no climbing equipment, no experience, a snowstorm, a pack to carry and a rifle to push two feet ahead of us with each pull up.

Three times, Dan asked me for help, because he was stuck or exhausted. Three times, I did the same, as I became hung up on ledges that I tried to go over by putting my body and backpack on the outside of a rock and pulling up while dangling over a 1,000-foot drop.
