Michels Concedes Race for Governor's Seat

The Michels Corp. (Brownsville) co-owner and Lomira High School grad lost a tight race to incumbent Tony Evers

It was a race that came down to the end, but ultimately Tim Michels' 1,226,204 votes were not enough to unseat Democratic Governor Anthony Evers (1,358,664), as the Republican candidate, a Lomira High School (LHS) alum, conceded to his opponent on election night, Tuesday, Nov. 8.

All vote counts are unofficial until canvassing is completed.

"Unfortunately, the math doesn't add up," said Michels on election night, referring to his deficit.

Drexel Building Supply to Merge with McMahon & Co.

The millwork company is based in Jackson, Wis.

Drexel Building Supply (Drexel) announced on Monday that the building-supply company has agreed in principle to merge with McMahon and Company, a leading supplier of doors and millwork in Wisconsin.

The acquisition will be official beginning December 31, 2022.

McMahon and Company (McMahon) was established in 1996, and according to its mission statement, is centered around customers, integrity, honesty and precision.

McMahon is a family-owned business located in Jackson that employs approximately 50 people, who help distribute "millwork with a personal touch". The company's product offerings include steel and fiberglass entry doors, hardware, locks, lighting, interior doors and wood mouldings; all of which are used by builders and contractors in residential and commercial new-construction and remodeling applications.

"We are thrilled to welcome the McMahon family to the Drexel team," said Joel Fleischman, President and CEO of Drexel Building Supply. "McMahon shares our mission to supply happiness that addresses the builders' needs for adding value to the door and millwork sector of the building industry. The combination of our two companies has the synergy to bring vertical integration for Drexel and their customers to reduce costs while adding value."

Drexel plans to integrate the McMahon business into Eastern, Central and North Central Wisconsin to focus on efficiency and quality.

Patrick McMahon, Sean McMahon, Kim Mather and their entire team, will remain a part of the business, and all team members of McMahon will be offered careers at Drexel Building Supply as part of the companies' stated growth plans.

Future plans include growing into a new facility that will double capacity. The facility is projected to surpass 50-million-dollars in revenue and employ 100 full-time, team members. It is projected to open sometime in 2024. The operation will be known as Drexel Doors & Millwork.

Plans for the location are still in development. Drexel Building Supply started in 1985 in Campbellsport by Albert and Joan Fleischman. With the McMahon acquisition, Drexel will grow to 10 locations with more than 700 team members.

Members of Drexel Building Supply and McMahon and Company "swap jerseys" – or sweatshirts – in celebration of the two entities planned merger. McMahon & Co., based in Jackson, specializes in millwork and doors. The acquisition is set to be official on Dec. 31, 2022. On Giving Thanks

Dear Reader,

As we round the corner to the Thanksgiving holiday, we take pause to recognize the blessings of the previous year. For centuries now millions of Americans have been prayerfully thinking about all for which they should be thankful. 2022 should be no exception.

This annual tradition finds its origins in the year 1619 in what is now the Commonwealth of Virginia when thirty eight English settlers arrived by way of the Atlantic Ocean and the James River. The more popular narrative traces back to the Pilgrims in 1621 when they celebrated in Plymouth, Massachusetts with the Wampanoags. The Wampanoags were a Native American tribe with whom they had an alliance and protection against the Narragansett tribe in exchange for food.

Thanksgiving has always been a religious holiday which George Washington, America's first President, proclaimed the first nationwide celebration in November 26th, 1789. He said "... a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many and signal favours of Almighty God..." It has since become more secular with activities surrounding the weekend such as Black Friday shopping and NFL football games.

Looking back, this year has been one of joy and anguish. When we sit down for dinner on Thanksgiving Day, let's pray that next year is one filled with more joy than anguish. And then let's work to make it that way in whatever big or small ways that are at our disposal.

G.A. SCHEINOH
CONTRIBUTOR

It's an important date we still celebrate. Though in a slightly different fashion. If you're old enough to remember grade school decades ago, you'll know what I'm talking about.

Back then, at precisely 11 a.m. on the 11th of the 11th month, the PA system cut into each classroom with the announcement. Followed by a few moments of silence to recognize all America's veterans. Especially those who had made the ultimate sacrifice for our freedom. Concluded, if memory serves, with a bugle rendered Taps. We also called it Armistice Day in memory of the time when WWI ended.

Nowadays, the event is marked by public gatherings in small villages to big cities. In Fond du Lac, a ceremony is held at the Veterans Park on Main Street, where a Civil War infantryman stands as a stone sentinel. Mercury Marine holds an assembly to honor all vets, including those employed by the company.

The day is particularly pertinent in my family. I had two uncles who served in the army during WWII. Two cousins did tours in-country in Vietnam. Of them, one survived two sniper attempts on his life. Blasting a ring off a finger. The second drilled through his helmet. Saved only by letters from home, hoisted precious inches off the head. But he passed before he turned 50. Perhaps exposed to Agent Orange.

And my family also has peacetime veterans. Two sisters in the Army and Air Force. Other cousins in the Navy and Air Force.

Perhaps, among the duties incumbent for the rest of us citizens is to vote. Too many lives were expended, too much blood spilled to do otherwise. Anything less is nothing shy of dishonorable.

Washington County Anti-Crime Plan Referendum Results

County Executive Josh Schoemann issued the following message to Washington County residents after the Anti-Crime Plan referendum was rejected by voters:

Dear Washington County Residents,

Several months ago, Sheriff Marty Schulteis and I presented the Washington County Anti-Crime Plan for a referendum. We felt the question belonged to the people of Washington County to answer, as "It's your money. It's your community." We asked how you'd like us to proceed.

The voters decided against the referendum yesterday, but we still hold public safety as our highest priority. It is our hope that by proposing the referendum and holding community conversations, our residents were made aware of some of the rising crime trends we see around us and know that our county is not immune.

More importantly, we've given notice to anyone coming to or through our community wishing to commit acts of crime or violence to "Stay Away - You are not welcome here!" Our goal continues to be that criminals are arrested, charged to the full extent of the law and sentenced.

This process highlighted the need for additional deputies on the road. We will continue living within our means while we will work with the county board to address aspects of public safety that incorporate mental health crisis assistance that was so successful in a pilot program of deputies and social workers earlier this year. You can count on your sheriff's office to respond to your calls, investigate crimes, and take pride in their service.

I thank everyone for getting out there and exercising their right to vote.

Honored to Stand Alongside Great Men and Women

CONGRESSMAN SCOTT FITZGERALD
(WI-05)

I joined the U.S. Army Reserve in 1981 and proudly served for 27 years, retiring in 2009 as a Lieutenant Colonel. Since first putting on the uniform as a recruit at Fort Jackson, it has been an honor to stand alongside the greatest men and women our country has to offer. Although I have now taken off that uniform, the hardships faced, and the lessons learned still guide me as I represent you in Congress.

We must continue to remember what unites us as a nation, rather than what divides us. As history has shown, the spirit of patriotism and our shared desire to protect our fundamental rights has never failed. Just as the American Flag stood firm over Fort McHenry after the relentless pounding of British artillery in 1814, our steadfast dedication to what makes us the "United" States remains steadfast in our hearts, minds, and across the world today.

Veterans and their families have sacrificed so much to preserve and defend the freedoms we hold dear and reflecting about those who answered the call ensures that the ideals of "Old Glory" be sustained. Freedom is not free, and those who chose to defend our flag often come home with injuries or trauma that will never fully heal. We must never take that for granted.

As a veteran in Congress, it has been a privilege to be a voice for those who served. This past term we achieved a great deal of wins for our veteran community. The most notable being the passage of the PACT Act, a bipartisan bill which delivered to 3.5 million toxic-exposed veterans the benefits and healthcare they deserve. Additionally, we passed bills such as the Sgt. Ketchum Rural Veterans Mental Health Act, which will provide more community-based care to veterans diagnosed with mental health issues, and the Veterans' Compensation Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act, which ensures disability and indemnity compensation continue to increase alongside inflation, putting more money in the pockets of our veterans and their families.

We as a country must ensure our veterans have the treatment, the support, and the resources they need to upon exiting service. That starts in Congress and extends to the communities they call home. It is my hope that we maintain the same momentum we generated the past two years when the new Congress begins in January.

I hope you remembered this past Veterans Day how blessed we are as a nation because of the selfless service of our military veterans. Thank you to all our nation's veterans for your service.

Kewaskum's First Lego League Regional Champs

In the Appleton regional Robotic Competition on Nov. 5, a Kewaskum team of middle-school students took home the championship trophy to earn the team's first-ever regional championship.

The Robotic Competition – Lego League Level – was intended for middle-school aged children with the students competing asked to design and program an autonomous robot to run missions and score points.

Additionally, the teams is tasked with completing a project, which showcases their robot-design methods.

The Anonymoose (anonymous + moose) Team was made up of three Kewaskum students: Kendal Schnabel (seventh grade), Claire Pamperin (seventh grade) and Lilly Furman (fifth grade).

In Appleton, the group's robot scored the highest of all the teams in the robot games.

Team Anonymoose's use of Python programming and engineering methodologies to design, iterate and improve, earned top marks in robot-design methods.

Anonymoose presents its project to the judges.

Additionally their project, which is a bike-powered cell-phone charger, scored very high marks for in-junty and practicality.

With top marks in each category of judging, the Kewaskum team took the championship trophy at the tournament, and also recieved a ticket to advance to another regional tournament in Waukesha in December.

"Our team was the smallest at the competition with only three students to share the work," said the team's coach, Jill Furman. "It was also one of the youngest and most inexperienced groups. Kewaskum was the only all-female team present at the STEM competition. Their win shows that anyone can make a winning robot, if they put in the time and effort."

The all-girl Kewaskum robotics team takes the first Appleton Regional Lego League championship trophy and advances to the semi-finals.

Kaleb possesses a constant positive outlook that is contagious to those around him. For the record, he is also an extremely talented juggler who put a lot of work into perfecting that craft! We are extremely proud to have Kaleb represent our seventh grade class as our October 2022 Student of the Month.

Nolan Faust (eighth Grade)

The eighth grade team is lucky to have so many wonderful students to pick from for our October Student of the Month! We all believe that the person we picked is very worthy because he puts in the effort to be a good person, while being one of the hardest and humblest workers in his class. He often thanks his teachers for a good class and wishes them a good rest of their day. He is quiet and respectful during class lectures and always gets his notes down. He stays focused when working with lab groups in science or partner work in reading. He is kind to all people and follows the rules, even when he doesn't know he is being watched! (Wow!) This person continues to set an example of what true character looks like. He is a model student! The person that the eighth grade team picked for the October Student of the Month is Nolan Faust.

The annual 4-H Cloverbud Pumpkin Contest was held on Saturday, Oct. 22, at UWO Fond du Lac Campus. Cloverbud members, 4-H youth in grades 5K-second, were able to enter a pumpkin in the contest.

During the morning teen leaders and a few volunteers helped weigh, measure, and judge the pumpkins. While pumpkins were being weighed and measured, the Cloverbuds participated in games and icebreakers to get to know each other. Entering the contest this year with their pumpkins were 15 Cloverbud members representing nine 4-H clubs.

Trophies and certificates were awarded for winning categories which included smallest weight, tallest, shortest, most unusual shape, roundest, most colorful, best pumpkin color, scariest, funniest, most unique, and largest circumference. This is typically one of the first events of the new 4-H year for Cloverbuds.

“I just called Governor Evers and conceded. I wish the Evers family well.”

Michels, who graduated a Lion in 1980, is a U.S. Army veteran and co-owner of Michels Corp. – an infrastructure construction company – located in Brownsville.

He was a late player to the Wisconsin gubernatorial race, filing papers on April 22 of this year. His campaign quickly gained steam following high-profile endorsements from the likes of former President Donald Trump and former Wisconsin Governor Tommy Thompson.

He won the Republican Primary in August over former Lieutenant Governor Rebecca Kleefisch, who had been a front runner throughout the spring and summer.

With the GOP nomination, Michels was favored in polls, at times, over Evers leading up to the election.

This was Michels third major campaign and third loss. In 1998, he ran for the Wisconsin State Senate seat in the 13th District, losing in the Republican Primaries to incumbent Scott L. Fitzgerald. In 2004, he defeated Russ Durrow in the GOP primary for one of Wisconsin’s U.S. Senate seats, but he lost in the general election to incumbent Russ Feingold.

Last Tuesday’s loss to Evers marks Michels closest election, yet. He received 47.8% of the vote to Evers’ 51.2%.

In a concession speech in which he called Wisconsin the “greatest state in the union”, Michels thanked his campaign team and support system.

“Thanks for all the hard work that happened over the last two-and-a-half, three months in the general and the primary,” he said. “We love this state with all our hearts.”

Michels made regular stops around his childhood stomping grounds throughout the campaign. In summer, he held a rally outside Midwest Shooter’s Supply in Lomira and stopped by Widmer’s Cheese Cellar’s 100th Anniversary Celebration in Theresa. He came back to Theresa just one week before the election to stump, and he was also at Kewaskum’s 9/11 Memorial ceremony held on Sept. 11.

Michels fared well in his home county of Dodge. He received 65% of the ballots cast verse Evers’ 33.84%.

Despite not winning the seat, Michels said the campaign trail was a joy.

“Looking back, I don’t know what we would have done differently,” he said on election night. “It was a very spirited effort. I love going everywhere, from Superior to Kenosha, Sheboygan to La Crosse. We campaigned in bars and bowling alleys and supper clubs, football games – everywhere – and the enthusiasm was just off the charts, but it wasn’t our night tonight, and I thank everybody for all of your support.”

Chase, holding phone, interviews Tim Michels on the importance of remembering the 9/11 attacks during Kewaskum’s 9/11 Memorial ceremony in September. Michels, the GOP candidate for governor, conceded to incumbent Tony Evers on election night, Tuesday, Nov. 8.

During its November 15 board meeting, members of the Eden Village Board listened to an update from village residents about a plan to add cluster boxes to the village. Those boxes will be the drop-off spot for mail for residents who help pay for the installation of the boxes. Debbie Stephany has been working with a group since the last village board meeting, and most of the residents she has approached stated they would help pay the installation costs for cluster boxes in order to receive their mail in them. Eden Postmaster Dale Brath suggested the group think about purchasing the bigger boxes, which hold mail for 16 residents, and costs about $50 more than the 12. That way, bigger packages that do not fit in the regular box can go in the extra parcel box that is included in the 16 but not the 12. It was decided to take more time to continue talking to people before a plan is finalized.

When Millie Tischendorf of Campbellsport heard the phone ringing at 7 a.m. on November 15, she never dreamed it would be a call from the "Live With Regis and Kelly" television show, but it was. During its meeting on November 13, the Kewaskum Public Library Board toured the Kewaskum library. The tour of the 2,986 square-foot building did not take long. Library Director Emily Goad explained to board members how she has been trying to make room for the most popular items. Goad has presented a report last week that showed the ideal space for Kewaskum's library would be 11,443 square feet, which is nearly four times the library's current size. A plan from three years ago included about 11,000 square feet for the library. The Kewaskum Library Foundation owns the lot to the east of the library, so an expansion could be built there. The library has about $380,000 that could go toward a library expansion.

We have several new Christmas novels on our shelf just in time for the holiday season and carry various new knitting, sewing and holiday baking books for this festive time of year. If you are looking for inspiration for the perfect Christmas craft, look no further than your local Campbellsport Public Library, we would love to help you find exactly what you are looking for! If you don't have a library card stop in and the staff at the desk would be happy to help you get one.

Puzzle Exchange

The library would also like to note that our puzzle exchange is available all year round and we have a vast selection to choose from. Stop in and take one or two home, and if you are so inclined bring them back or swap some of your old ones for new ones.

Thanksgiving Week Library Hours

Please be aware of the following changes to the library hours during the week of November 21:

Check It Out!

LORI KREIS
 KEWASKUM LIBRARIAN

Several weeks ago, we had a performance of Eleanor Roosevelt that was so well attended I needed to get extra chairs brought in the room. It was a bit tight, and I spoke with the actress about our limitations in space. She said that at least we had a library. She lives in a town that is more than five times larger than Kewaskum in population and must travel a bit to her closest library. She said that our community is very lucky that we have a library.

A month ago, the news reported that Milwaukee was looking to cut hours and discontinue programming at four of its city libraries due to budgetary concerns. That decision prompted an outcry from city residents. The public contacted their representatives and made their case for restoring library services to the community. When the vote for the budget came through, all cuts to the libraries were reversed. Even though the mayor vetoed this decision, the public was heard.

Cuts to public spending beginning in 2010 led to the disappearance of one-fifth of all libraries in the United Kingdom. This has caused a wider division between the rich and poor with a large emphasis on children in poverty-stricken areas.

They have lost access to books, information, and education without free public libraries in their neighborhoods. Sean McNamara, head of The Chartered Institute of Library and Information Professionals in Scotland has led a campaign to save the libraries in Scotland. A powerful quote from Sean McNamara is "How much value a nation or local authority attaches to its libraries can often be a good indication over how much it values its people."

If you are a regular reader of my columns, you probably value libraries and understand their relevance in building and keeping strong communities. I am sure I have mentioned that fact many times since I have been contributing to this newspaper. However, I hope you are an advocate for our library by visiting us, checking out items, attending programs and talking to others about the importance of a library in our community.

When I think about how libraries build strong and vibrant communities, a few facts come to mind. First, libraries have values to neighborhoods, whereas people prefer to live near a public library if they have a choice and is perceived as an enhanced quality of life. Libraries are a "third place," a mainstay in a neighborhood where interpersonal relationships are made. Libraries have provided assistance to all people to help them with the complexities of life.

When I was told that our community is very lucky to have a library, I whole-heartedly agree. But I also believe that we are lucky to have the support from a community that values a library in their town. And I feel lucky to be a part of that.

McKenzie Schultz

My name is McKenzie Schultz and I'm honored to have been given this opportunity. Throughout high school, I focused on my academics and engagement in my community. In my free time, I volunteer at my local food pantry and spend time with friends and family. Something I am proud of is that I have donated my hair to Locks of Love twice. I'm planning on going to either Concordia University or the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh to major in Pediatric Nursing.

McKenzie Schultz

so much about the importance of hard work and dedication.

The other part of these experiences come from clubs and committees I am a part of, ranging from being accepted into the National Honor Society my junior year and volunteering through my involvement in Key Club to exploring unique cultures in Spanish Club, offering support through Peers 4 Peers, and organizing events on the Executive Board for Student Council.

Josey Curtes

I enjoy being busy and putting time into various activities that I care so much about. I want to continue this commitment in my college education as I study interior architecture. I am interested in UW-Madison and UW-Stevens Point, as well as the University of Minnesota to pursue this, but Madison has always been my dream since I was a little girl.

I am unsure what is in store for me in the future, but looking back on everything I have been a part of here at Kewaskum High School, I am excited to take those next steps.

Josey Curtes

Throughout my four years of high school, I have always had a goal to experience the most I can before it's gone.

A part of these experiences is through my involvement in sports, finishing my last ever cross country sectionals race in the runner-up position and qualifying for state my senior year, celebrating the regional champion title with my track and field team two years in a row my sophomore and juniors year and going on to place sixth and seventh for two different relays at state. The friendships and memories made throughout each team have taught me

Lights For Joy

Theresa middle schooler plans to create a home light show to raise money for local charities

BREANNA RICE JOURNALIST

The holidays are quickly approaching and, this year, 14-year-old Mason Sponholz has been looking forward to the snowy season for months.

The middle school student has been planning to create a local light show to serve as a fundraiser and a fun event for members of the community to come and enjoy.

"I want to give the money to charity that is raised by the light show, because I really like helping people," explained Mason.

In 2020, Mason began getting into tech and enjoyed learning about how things worked. He stated that last year, he built a computer and was able to learn a lot about how technology works during the process.

After building the computer, the teen began looking into how to create a holiday light show.

"After watching videos on putting together light shows, I discovered that I really liked the technology behind it all," said Mason.

He explained that he has spent lots of time practicing sequences and creating mock layouts for his yard in order to create the perfect display.

Mason decided to use this idea as a fundraiser, because his goal is to raise money for others while having fun doing it.

One of Mason's favorite childhood memories of the holiday season involves putting a smile on people's faces.

"I used to go to nursing homes dressed as Santa with my mom and grandma," he recalled. "I just liked bringing joy to others."

Throughout the past few months, Mason has been working hard to raise money for the set-up costs of the lights. He explained that he had a few ideas for fundraisers and had reached out to businesses to do yard work for them.

Mason's goal is to start the light show the night of Dec. 1 and have it run every night of the month up until Dec. 31.

"The show will be right at my house so anyone can drive up and park on the road. People will be able to watch the lights from the comfort of their car," explained Mason.

The light show is free for anyone to come and watch.

"I want it to be free, because I don't want to put a price on something that can bring joy to people," stated the eighth grader. "But, for anyone who happens to like the lights or wants to help families in need, they will be able to donate."

Mason explained that he has chosen two charities to receive the money that is fundraised through the project.

"At the end of December, I will split the money that I have raised between Bo's Heavenly Clubhouse, which helps families who have lost a child, and the Washington County Foster Closet, which gives Christmas gifts to kids in foster care," stated Mason.

Mason is excited to bring his vision to life and help others this holiday season.

The Sponholz family home is located on Tower Lane in Theresa. The light show is free to enjoy and will begin Dec. 1.

Anyone who wishes to help Mason with his project can send donations through Cashapp at $LightsForJoy.

Kewaskum Kiwanis Club members Mark Yanke and Jim Wulff present Albrecht Free Clinic Associate Director Melanie Gongring with a donation of $1,000. Support from the Kewaskum Kiwanis Club will be used to provide medical and dental care to uninsured individuals living or working in Washington County. Schoenmann Appointed to New Task Force Launched to Address Housing Affordability and Stability

Josh Schoenmann, Washington County executive, has been appointed to the National Association of Counties (NACo) Housing Task Force, comprised of more than 30 county leaders from across the United States. The group will identify county-led solutions and innovations for addressing America's housing affordability and stability crisis.

"Counties are on the front lines of responding to the housing crisis," said Denise Winfrey, NACo president. "Stable, quality housing is the foundation for better health, safety, education, a strong workforce, improved financial wellness, and lower demands on the social safety net. NACo's Housing Task Force is committed to meeting the moment and addressing our residents' housing needs."

The group will examine the complex conditions that undermine housing affordability. Housing costs are outpacing job and wage growth in many areas, with many colliding factors, including:

- Supply chain disruptions
- Labor shortages
- Increased demand for short-term rentals
- Land costs
- Demographic pattern shifts due to generational population changes and economic competitiveness
- Institutional investors
- Governmental policies, regulations and capacities, and
- Competing public, private and community interests and incentives.

"Last year, I launched the Next Generation Housing (NGH) pilot program with three developments with a goal of providing 1000 new owner-occupied housing units countywide by 2032," said Schoenmann. "The NGH initiative first and foremost is about bringing the next generation back to Washington County. It achieves this goal by undercutting the government costs and regulations that have made the starter homes that previous generations benefited from nearly extinct. When complete, NGH will help alleviate the most pressing workforce challenges: retaining and attracting a skilled workforce; while satisfying the basic need of obtaining quality owner occupied homes for Washington County's workforce."

County roles and responsibilities related to housing vary significantly across, and even within, different states. Depending on specific structures and authority, county governments can play a leading role in:

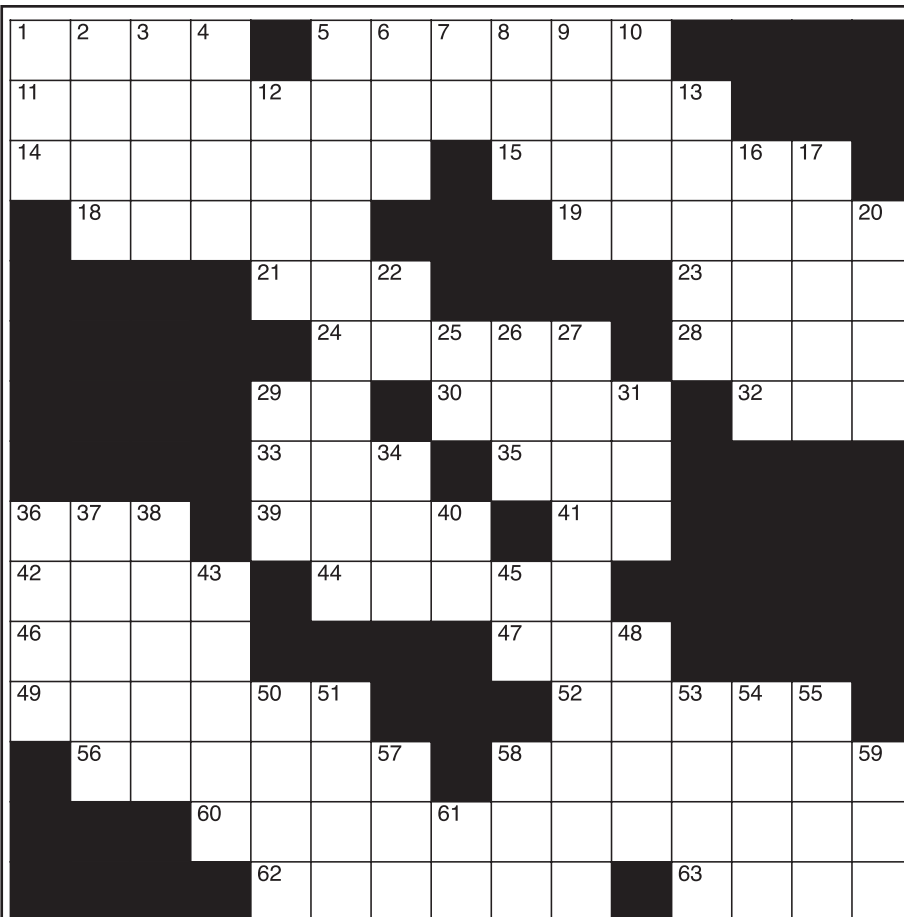

- Tax policies
- Financing and lending
- Down payment and closing cost assistance
- Building permits and code enforcement
- Land use and zoning
- Infrastructure development
- Workforce housing
- Public safety and emergency management, and
- Community planning.

The Housing Task Force will host in-person and virtual meetings, as well as produce original research, to examine the role of county governments in providing residents with more housing, greater variety of housing, and better housing affordability and value.

will open the forest understory and enhance the growth of blueberry and other ground cover, mimicking the species' preferred natural conditions.

"We're trying to create additional habitat for Connecticut warblers while still meeting all goals and objectives for the property," said Andrew O'Krueg, a forester with the Bayfield County Forestry and Parks Department.

In addition, along with a Minnesota counterpart, Brady is co-leading a group of state and international partners to develop a rescue plan for Connecticut warblers, which have decreased 60% across their range. Most Connecticut warblers nest in Canada, with smaller numbers in Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota. The bird winters in South America nearly 5,000 miles from its breeding areas. Some have been shown to stay in the Gran Chaco, the second-largest forest in South America after the Amazon. Gran Chaco stretches across parts of Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil and Paraguay.

Because deforestation in Central and South America may be driving declines of this and many of Wisconsin's other migratory birds, the DNR and the Natural Resources Foundation of Wisconsin (NRF) are increasing investment in efforts to identify and conserve critical migratory bird stopover habitats in Central and South America.

The Natural Resources Foundation has also added the Connecticut warbler as a priority species to receive funding from Great Wisconsin Birdathon proceeds, according to Craig Thompson, who contributes to DNR's bird conservation efforts. Thompson is working with international bird conservation partners to raise awareness of the need to protect the Gran Chaco's forests for migratory birds and resident wildlife.

"Our challenge is to simultaneously address multiple threats to this bird across its vast hemispheric range before it's too late," Thompson said.

Fast Facts

- Connecticut warblers' remote habitats and skulky habits make them notoriously difficult to find and much sought after by birders. These traits have also made the species one of the most poorly known North American landbirds, leading to a lack of research on its life cycle or solid insights into population declines.

- Connecticut warblers are sparrow-sized migratory birds with a gray head, yellow belly, olive back and bright white ring around their eye. The bird nests mostly in black spruce-tamarack bogs. In Wisconsin, Connecticut warblers also use older jack pine forests with trees 20 feet high or more.

- Connecticut warblers build cuplike nests on the ground and spend much of their time slowly walking around the forest floor foraging for insects. They are easiest to detect by listening for the male's loud song from mid-May to late July.

- Wisconsin is at the southern edge of the bird's breeding range. Most Connecticut warblers nest in Canada; Michigan and Minnesota are the only other U.S. states where the bird has been documented nesting. Connecticut warblers migrate to South America for winter.

- Connecticut warblers are marathon fliers. Canadian researchers documented the birds, which weigh half an ounce, flying non-stop for 48 hours over open ocean as part of their journey to wintering grounds in South America.

- Researchers believe destruction of habitat in wintering areas such as the Gran Chaco, South America's second largest forest, is likely a leading cause of the bird's steep decline. Climate change, loss of migration stopover habitat, and in Wisconsin, the loss of mature jack pine stands may also be contributing factors.

The goats eat woody invasive plants, including buckthorn, that outcompete native vegetation and are detrimental to ecosystem health. Clearing out these harmful plants will allow the forest to regenerate.

Depending on the site, there are various ways to treat invasive plants. Goat grazing is often an effective method for reducing herbicide use.

"We're always being asked to reduce the amount of pesticide that we use. We want the forest to be able to regenerate our native species. If invasive species get in the way, it makes it very difficult to do so," said Mary Bartkowiak, DNR Invasive Plant Coordinator. "If the invasives out compete all of the native vegetation, we won't have the sugar maples, red pines or the white pines because they would be overtopped by the invasives."

Like other management methods, goat grazing is a long-term treatment. The goats have rotated throughout this site at the Brule River State Forest several times this summer and are now back for another round of grazing. Since the seeds of the invasive plants remain in the soil for several years, the department will evaluate the area in upcoming seasons to determine if the goats or other treatment methods are needed.

When visiting parks and forests, be sure to wipe your shoes and clean your equipment before arrival and when you depart to help avoid spreading harmful invasive species like buckthorn.

More information about invasive species in Wisconsin is available at dnr.wisconsin.gov/topic/Invasives.

that seemed to be as big as a horse appeared out of nowhere from the other side of the mountain. She was followed by a calf and two other cows. All four were heading towards me and about 90-yards away.

I saw the bulls' antlers first, as his body had not cleared the other side of the mountain yet, and it was an amazing sight as they were large.

When his body came over the mountain, he looked like a horse with very large antlers.

I had to give him about a minute to clear some trees, and I put a round from my 300 in the vitals. The bull ran towards me, I fired three more times and, just like that, my elk hunt was complete: I had just harvested a mature 6x6.

When I walked up to him, I was honestly amazed at how physically enormous he was and later found out that a mature bull elk weighs between 700-1100 pounds. This guy was all of 900.

The job of skinning and quartering was a no-nonsense, get-it-done task. I literally straddled the carcass and worked as fast as I could, because I knew I would lose daylight.

My plan was to use a plastic Otter Sled and haul about 125-pounds at a time. Had a drone been following, that would have made for a great video. On at least 12 occasions, I either tripped over an unseen rock or deadfall or my sled that I was pulling started going so fast it would run me over.

Twice, I went down the mountain at least 30-yards with no control other than my arms and the only thing that stopped me was either trees or rocks.

The art of falling is known to few.

When I returned from my second trip, I could see in the very fresh snow that three dog/wolf/who knows, type of animals had found the bull and even taken a couple of bites. The trips were so physical that I did not even carry my gun, but I did have bear spray.

I became as soaked as you could be with multiple layers of clothes on. Sweat from the inside and blood and melting snow from the outside. Every step I left a trail of blood, and the pain from the falls was kicking my ass.

At exactly dark thirty, I made it to my spike camp with my last load. Even though I had used a rope under a tarp, my tent was collapsed.

I buried the meat in the snow, and there was no way it was going down the mountain on this day to my base camp.

My reward was peanuts, granola bars and two cans of Pabst Blue Ribbon in a tent that was pelted with snow the entire night.

Nothing mattered, I got my bull!

To be an interior designer. I love organizing and decorating, so I feel like I would love that job.

What is one place you would like to visit?

I would love to go to Greece or Italy. It seems amazing and I've heard great things about both places from people that have been there.

What is your favorite hobby outside of school?

I would say spending time with my friends and family. There are so many different things you can do with others, and it is always so fun!

Someone who isn't afraid to speak up. In order for people to listen, you have to have something to say and you can't be afraid to say it!

Do you have any nicknames?

Most people call me "Dogs", which is pretty self-explanatory. I also went by the name "Maddog" when I was little because it goes with my name so well.

What is one thing most people do not know about you?

I was a competitive gymnast for seven years! I loved it and miss competing all of the time, but I eventually had to choose between gymnastics and basketball.

What is your game day ritual?

For volleyball, I have to have my hair braided in some way. I can never do a normal pony tail!

What advice would you give to the freshmen?

Just be nice to people. The more friends you make, the better your high school experience will be.

That includes teachers - having good relationships with them helps a lot, as well.

What grade do you wish you could go back to?

I wish I could go back to elementary school. Things were so easy, we barely had homework, and we got two different times for recess!

AN Outdoorsman's JOURNAL

Montana Elk Hunt/The Bull

MARK WALTERS
COLUMNIST

What you are about to read is good stuff, and it is about one of the craziest, most unique and challenging days of my 61-years walking this earth.

Five days earlier, I had left Wisconsin on a solo, public-land elk and mule deer hunt. My plan was to put much of my time and energy into scouting and building a base camp, as well as a spike camp, in the Gallatin National Forest in southern Montana.

This column is about the first day of my hunt, which was Montana's opening day.

SATURDAY, OCT. 22

HIGH: 32. LOW: 24.

I spent my night sleeping/listening to rain as it fell on my tent. I was at my spike camp, which was close to a mile below where I planned on hunting and two miles above my base camp.

A major snowstorm was supposed to be followed by the rain and, at 4 a.m., I said to-heck-with-it: I am not crawling up that mountain in the dark, in the rain.

At 4:45, my conscience got the best of me, and I dressed and began my trek. At that time, the rain changed to snow. I might add that when I dressed, I pulled out a Sasquatch sweatshirt out of my pack that my girlfriend Michelle Chiaro - who passed away on June 15 - used to wear.

I was over dressed for the trek/climb and got too hot.

An hour before daylight, I was sitting on the root ball of a deadfall with two umbrellas covering me. I watched a park/meadow where elk and deer like to feed that was surrounded by dark timber and spruce. I was near the top of a summit and on one side of the park; it was a straight drop down the mountain.

Daylight is starting to appear and, just like that, I felt the presence of something, looked behind me and maybe 50-yards into the timber were three elk.

With my tag, I could harvest either an antlerless elk or a bull with at least a four-inch brow tine.

One looked like a small bull, but I could not tell and they wondered off.

Less than one hour later, a cow elk

Attention Adults: Need A Refresh?

Enroll In A Hunter Education Course

WIS. DEPT. OF NATURAL RESOURCES

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) reminds anyone who regularly hunts, occasionally participates or is new to the sport, to get prepared for hunting season by enrolling in a DNR Hunter Education course. By completing your hunter safety course or doing a quick skills refresh, you play a vital role in keeping Wisconsin a safe place to hunt.

Most hunting incidents in Wisconsin involve hunters older than 40, decades after learning firearm safety rules in their hunter safety education courses. It may be time for veteran hunters to do a refresh of these valuable lessons as the fall hunting season is underway.

Adults who are 18 and older may complete their Hunter Education certification requirements entirely online. The online student should expect to spend multiple hours online studying and completing the course modules. A passing score on the final exam is necessary to be certified. The online course is ideal for individuals who have had exposure to firearm handling already or will have direct access to a trustworthy mentor while handling firearms.

More than 20,000 take hunter education courses in Wisconsin each year. Anyone born on or after Jan. 1, 1973, is required to have a hunter education certification to purchase a hunting license, unless hunting under the Mentored Hunting Law.

If a hands-on method is your preference, there are two other ways to complete and strengthen your safety skills.

Hands-on Training

- Online + Field Day: This training allows you to complete some training online and then attend one day of training with a certified instructor. This class is a good fit for a person who has handled firearms or is going to be hunting with someone who has more experience to help the novice build hunting skills. During this class, there are four to six hours of gun-handling opportunities. All ages are welcome.

- Traditional Class: This training offers a more hands-on approach to working with a certified instructor over a few days. Most students and families enjoy this option because they can do it in their community. This option provides students with opportunities to handle hunting equipment, learn about safe hunting practices, shooting and many other topics. In-person feedback from instructors at this venue also enhances the student learning. All age groups are welcome.

‘Tis The (Hunting) Season

WIS. DEPT. OF NATURAL RESOURCES

Fall brings flannel, foliage and flavored hot drinks, but it also brings another Wisconsin pastime: hunting. Hunting is allowed in most DNR-managed park properties. Both hunters and visitors to the park system need to be aware of safe practices.

In general, there are two time periods, spring and fall/winter, where hunting and trapping are permitted in state parks. Each type of park property (park, recreation area, forest and trail) has different hunting allowances.

The fall/winter hunting and trapping season that occurs within the time period below is permitted in the open areas of the park. Some parks and trails have weapons restrictions, varying season dates, or are closed or have areas closed to hunting and trapping. For questions on specific parks, check with the park office and consult the park’s hunting map for specific dates and allowable activities.

Fall/Winter: Gun and archery hunting and trapping are allowed in the open areas of the property during the open season from Nov. 15 - Dec. 15, except that hunting with legal archery methods is allowed through the Sunday nearest Jan. 6.

There are a few exceptions to these season dates for Buckhorn,

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources reminds hunters and walkers to wear blaze orange during the hunting season.

WISCONSIN DNR

Big Bay, Blue Mound, Governor Dodge, Rock Island and Tower Hill state parks.

The time frame for state parks does not apply to state forests, state recreation areas or other DNR properties. Please be sure to check all hunting regulations at specific park properties before heading out to hunt.

When visiting park properties this fall, remember to wear something brightly colored to keep yourself visible. Keep pets close and use a brightly colored vest or bell to indicate where they are. Stick to trails and practice awareness of your surroundings.

The Connecticut warbler population has decreased severely in Wisconsin

WIS. DEPT. OF NATURAL RESOURCES

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) announced that it has partnered with state and national groups to protect the at-risk Connecticut warbler.

The efforts aim to improve habitat for the Connecticut warbler in Bayfield County and protect its wintering grounds in South America after a second year of summer surveys confirmed the songbird's populations had plunged even more severely than expected.

DNR surveys conducted in summer 2022 found only three nesting pairs in the core breeding area in northwestern Wisconsin, while none were detected outside that area during targeted searches in 2021. The DNR initiated those searches after the Wisconsin Breeding Bird Atlas II survey flagged Connecticut warblers as one of the species declining the most over the past 25 years among 226 nesting bird species documented.

"This bird is in trouble, and it needs help fast," said Ryan Brady, DNR conservation biologist and the state's bird monitoring coordinator.

In response to these declines, the DNR is partnering with the Bayfield County Forestry and Parks Department to protect and improve Connecticut warbler habitat by removing brush on several stands of suitable mature jack pine. Brush removal in fall 2022 and 2023

Lady Cougar Bowlers Move Record to 2-0

CHS BOWLING

On Monday, Nov. 14, the Campbellsport High School Lady Cougar Bowlers traveled to Pioneer Bowl in Richfield, home of the Hartford Orioles. Both the Orioles and the Cougars made an appearance at last year's State Tournament.

The Cougars struggled with their spare shooting in the first two games, rolling a 133 and 116 to the Orioles 101 and 123.

In games three through seven, the Cougars saw their spare shooting and game scores improve quickly, as they squashed the Orioles five games in a row to take the match 7-2.

"We are still trying to make the lineup as strong as possible without Paige Jordan," said Coach Cary Serwe. "She will be out another three weeks. Overall, we showed some good improvement in our spare shooting compared to last week and it will only get better."

The Cougars winning streak is currently at 12-in-a-row, as they went undefeated last season.

This week, the team was led by Brianna Thompson and Aubree Koenings filling 14 of 18 frames and 10 of 15 frames respectively. Olivia Boegel chipped in, filling seven of 12 frames. Maddy Grunwald filled six of 12 frames and lead off bowler Taylor Muraski still filled seven of 14 frames even though she struggled in the match.

Come and watch the Cougars Monday night November 21 at King Pin at 4 p.m. It will be Parent's Night.

Stats for this week's match were as follows (strikes-spares-total frames): Taylor Muraski 4-3-14; Hannah Thelen 2-2-11; Maddy Grunwald 1-5-12; Aubree Koenings 5-5-15; Brianna Thompson 10-4-18; Capri Constantineau 0-2-8; Olivia Boegel 2-5-12.

Plan Ahead to Help Monitor and Slow the Spread of C.W.D. this Season

WIS. DEPT. OF NATURAL RESOURCES

This deer season, the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) asks hunters to participate in our ongoing effort to monitor for chronic wasting disease (CWD) and help prevent its spread.

CWD testing is available to every hunter in the state, and we have focused CWD sampling efforts in many counties where CWD has already been found. Check the map on our website (dnr.wisconsin.gov/topic/WildlifeHabitat/register-sample.html) to see where CWD testing is available near you. Note that more locations will be added as the season progresses, so check back before you head afield.

Four Ways To Have Your Deer Tested

The DNR offers four easy ways to submit a sample.

- Self-service kiosks open 24/7: We add locations throughout the season, with many popping up ahead of the nine-day gun deer season. Hunters can drop off their adult deer's head with 5 inches of neck attached for testing. Check the DNR's CWD sampling page before your hunt to find a location near you.

- In-person with cooperating meat processors, taxidermists and other businesses: You can get assistance with CWD testing by visiting a cooperating partner. Use the same interactive map to find their locations.

- At-home lymph node sampling following our instructions: Hunters can extract the retropharyngeal lymph nodes using a kit provided by the DNR and return them to the DNR for testing. Contact your local wildlife biologist to get a kit.

- By-appointment with local DNR staff: Hunters can contact their local wildlife biologist to schedule an in-person appointment.

Whichever way you submit your sample for testing, try out the DNR's new online CWD form. You can find the link in your Go Wild harvest history after you register your deer.

The online form automatically fills in your name, contact information, customer ID number and harvest registration number and includes an interactive map to drop a pin on your harvest location.

Wisconsin's Newest Land Managers – Goats

WIS. DEPT. OF NATURAL RESOURCES

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) today announced a special class of new land managers working at the Brule River State Forest. Goats.

Beginning in May 2022, the DNR partnered with Regenerative Ruminants to place goats in portions of the Brule River State Forest overrun with buckthorn, an invasive plant, as part of the department's integrated pest management plan.

"Buckthorn has been a problem on the Brule River State Forest for a long time," said Dan Kephart, DNR Brule River State Forest Property Manager. "It's really important to the forest ecologically and aesthetically that we inhibit these invasive species as much as we can and promote native species. We're trying to evaluate how effective this project can be, so it's exciting to see what will happen."

Invasive plants, animals and pests are taking a toll on Wisconsin's lakes, rivers and landscapes. The DNR is working with the public and other partners to slow the spread of invasive species across the state. Through educational outreach, strategic planning and active management – including the use of goats – we are protecting our environment and economy from invasives.
